Three Killed In Gasoline Tank Blasts; 20 Burned

Many Children In Path of Blaze

Heat Hampers Rescuers; Explosions' Cause Is Unknown.

Jamestown, N. Y., June 18 (AP).—A flaming explosion of huge gasoline tanks killed three persons and severely burned 20 others, five of whom are in a critical condition, late today at a petroleum depot on the outskirts of this city.

Those dead were Walter Kastenhuber, 35; Oscar Bloom, 45, both firemen, and Henry Golcynski, 18, a spectator.

The first explosion, that of a 20,000-gallon tank—threw deadly flames into a crowd, including many children, which had been attracted by a fire at the establishment.

Two bodies, one, that of a fireman, were recovered. Others were sought by police and rescue workers, who hurried to the scene. The depot is the property of the Richfield Oil Co.

Children Among Victims.

Two other tanks exploded, the last one after police had fired into it with rifles to lessen the pressure. No one was believed killed in the second and third explosions.

The first blast sent flames shooting hundreds of feet into the air and instantly converted the laughing crowd of spectators in a frantically milling, pushing mass.

Dozens of persons were knocked down by the force of the explosion. Others pushed desperately, but could not get away fast enough to escape the searing, billowing sheets of fire which mushroomed outward from the exploded tanks.

Children, unable to run fast enough, were among those reported painfully burned when the entire crowd rushed headlong for places of safety.

U.S. Ships Hunt Chinese Pirates

English Vessels Join in Chase of Kidnapers of 6 Britons.

Shanghai, June 18 (AP).—American and British naval vessels joined tonight in a hunt for pirates who kidnaped six British citizens, including two naval officers, from a steamer flying the British flag.

The 6 were seized, together with 20 Chinese, from the S. S. Shuntien as the ship was on its way from Tientsin to Shanghai. Apparently the bandits boarded the ship in Tientsin and waited until it was at sea before overpowering the passengers and crew. The captives were forced into a fleet of five junks which stood by. The pirates also carried off valuable loot.

The U. S. S. Pope and the minelayer Bittern, stationed at Chefoo, were ordered to search for the junks, while the British destroyers Veteran and Witch were dispatched from Weihaiwei.

Farmer Takes 2 Gunmen for Ride —It's Their Idea

Fredericksburg, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Forced to serve as chauffeur of his own automobile for two gunmen from his home in Pennsylvania to Hampton, Va., yesterday, Giles H. Brown, 22, finally rid of his unwelcome passengers, was waiting last night in Fredericksburg for his father to wire him money to get back home.

Brown, who said he lives in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, told police he was returning home from a creamery early yesterday when two armed men forced him to stop, got in his car and told him to drive toward Belair, Md. They continued into Virginia, compelling Brown to buy gasoline when needed. They got out at Hampton and told him to drive on.

Brown drove until his gas gave out near a filling station several miles below here. The manager gave him enough gas to reach Fredericksburg, where he wired his father of his predicament. Brown is a farmer and has a wife and daughter.

Nazi Rule Criticized Boldly by Von Papen

Berlin, June 18 (AP).—The boldest public criticism of the Nazi regime which has come from any one in authority since Chancellor Hitler's assumption of power in January, 1933, was made yesterday by Franz von Papen, vice chancellor of Germany.

The sensational character of his remarks, delivered before students of Marburg University, is best illustrated by the fact that no Berlin newspapers printed even an excerpt. Von Papen, in guarded language, pleaded for reestablishment of the monarchy.

Notice was served by the government-controlled German News Bureau upon its subscribers that the speech must not be published in Germany.

Von Papen, a Hitler "right-hand man," challenged the Nazi regime's claims that it must impose its will in the realm of religion and severely criticized muzzling of the press.

Excessive use of slogans and the belief that the people might be united by terrorism were denounced. He criticized the attempt to have one political party rule Germany, instead of making the new Germany "the real people's state."

Von Papen frankly admitted that "the Reich's government is not deceiving itself about the fact that the rich treasure of confidence which

Woman Slain, Killer Packs Body in Trunk

Brighton, England, June 18 (AP). A "trunk murder" was disclosed today with the discovery of a woman's torso in Brighton Railway Station. The legs of the body were found in a suit case which had been left at the Kings Cross Railway Station June 7.

Scotland Yard detectives considered the possibility that the victim was the missing American lawyer, Agnes Tulverson.

This theory was weakened by an important variation from the published police description of Miss Tufverson, but was not wholly abandoned.

The missing woman was described as having an abdominal operation scar, while the torso was not marked in this manner.

The torso—that of a woman about 40 years of age—was found in a cheap trunk. Its origin and the manner in which it reached the station luggage room were not determined.

No Clews Found.

There was no clew to the identity of the woman, and there was no indication of the cause of death, the only wounds being those where the head, arms and legs had been severed with a saw.

The discovery, coming after authorities in England had been asked to look for a trunk in connection with the Tufverson case, opened a mystery so deep that local authorities quickly called for assistance from Scotland Yard.

The torso was found last night, but announcement was withheld until today, apparently in the hope of establishing some identification before the killer knew his victim had been discovered.

Torso Wrapped in Paper.

The woman, it was estimated, had been dead about three weeks. Her height was estimated at 5 feet, two or three inches and the body appeared to be that of a "well nourished" person.

(The official description of the missing American woman gives her age as 43 and her height as about 5 feet 6 inches. She weighed about 135 pounds).

The torso was unclothed, and was wrapped in brown paper, tied with a window cord. The paper bore the word "Ford," which police theorized might be part of the name of a town.

Police have no record of a missing woman in the Brighton area. An autopsy will be held tomorrow.

Troops Guard Langer Judge; Riot Feared

Bismarck, N. Dak., June 18 (AP). Faced by a political tangle unique in State history as the result of the conviction of Gov. William Langer on Federal conspiracy charges and the claim of the lieutenant governor to the office, North Dakotans today nervously surveyed a situation that brought Federal troops to its capitol city as a precaution against violence.

Conviction of Gov. Langer created two unrelated tense situations:

First, fears of violence against Federal Judge Andrew Miller who will impose the sentence on Langer and four associates convicted of conspiracy and facing maximum terms of two years imprisonment.

Second, a movement to declare Lieutenant Gov. Ole H. Olson the State's chief executive, possibly through court action.

Removal Methods Studied.

As Langer stood in Federal court this morning and heard the court defer sentence until June 29—two days after the June primary in which he is a candidate for reelection—Olson conferred with political friends. He took his oath of office as Governor but did not file it. Lawyers studied methods to be employed in attempting to oust Langer through court action.

Two truck loads of Federal troops moved from Fort Lincoln, near here, under authority from the Seventh Corps Headquarters in Omaha and were stationed before the Federal Building as the court convened.

Col. George Harris, commandant at Fort Lincoln, revealed that requests for protection against interruption of the Federal court proceedings, made by Judge Miller and U. S. District Attorney P. W. Lanier led to the stationing of troops outside the Federal Building.

Col. Harris said the troops were

Illinois to Burn Fields In Fight on Chinch Bugs

Chicago, June 18 (AP).—Torches will be applied to Illinois grain fields hopelessly riddled by chinch bugs, the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission said today, to check crop damages mounting into millions of dollars.

Consent of the owners will be obtained before firing, but little opposition is expected from farmers whose wheat, oats, and other small grains are so ravaged that they are only a menace to other crops.

$1,500,000 Trust Fund Offer By Astor to Fiancee Reported

New York, June 18 (AP).—The New York World-Telegram quotes a spokesman for Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Lewis Gillespie as disclosing today that John Jacob Astor offered a $1,500,000 trust fund to Miss Eileen Gillespie immediately upon the announcement of their engagement, which was broken in January.

Mr. and Mrs. Gillespie, reached direct, refused either to affirm or deny the spokesman's statements.

Astor was quoted as having said to Gillespie at the Union Club:

"I'd like to give Eileen a million dollars—no, a million and a half."

"She's too young to have that much money," Gillespie demurred, the spokesman said.

"Why not a trust fund, the income to be paid her for life and her children to inherit the principal, or, in case there are no children, to revert to the Astor estate on her death?" Gillespie was quoted as asking.

Astor, it was said, made no objection.

The $1,500,000 was later reduced to $500,000 after conferences with attorneys representing both the Gillespies and the Astor estate, the spokesman reported.

At no time, he emphasized, did the Gillespies insist that any financial settlement accompany the marriage plans.

The spokesman added it was not until after Astor and Miss Gillespie had been secretly affianced for two months that the prospective bridegroom brought up the subject with Gillespie.

At the time of the breaking of the engagement, the spokesman said, that were securities representing $500,000 resting in the vaults of a New York bank in Miss Gillespie's name.

Reich Told To Protect U.S. Debtors

Dodd Ordered to Warn Nation Against Discrimination.

Americans Hold Most of Bonds Involved in Moratorium.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull has instructed Ambassador William E. Dodd, at Berlin, to protest "formally and energetically" against the German government's six months moratorium on all foreign debt payments.

The State Department made the announcement yesterday and added that the American envoy has been instructed to reiterate his Government's stern disapproval of any arrangements which would discriminate against United States creditors.

An "energetic protest" was taken to mean that this Government—dissatisfied with the German explanation—has decided on a strong rebuke, administered perhaps with a bit of table-pounding. To do this Secretary Hull commissioned mild, professorish Ambassador Dodd last Saturday.

While there was little likelihood this would alter the German policy, so far the State Department has evidenced no disposition to adopt retaliatory tactics. Both Great Britain and France are reported ready to meet the German debt suspension by impounding German credits through "clearing houses."

Soon after announcement of the protest, Dr. Hans Luther, the German Ambassador, left for New York to sail early today aboard the Europa for Germany. At the German Embassy his trip was explained as a normal leave of absence, which also will afford him opportunity to go over recent developments.

Exports to Be Discussed.

Dr. Luther will have much to report to the Nazi government, it was clear, since Germany has figured largely in the news ever since his arrival in Washington. He will return in August after discussing, among other things, the prospects of increasing German exports to this country.

The warning against discrimination in the American protest is understood to refer to reports that Germany is negotiating with Switzerland and Holland, offering to ease the debt suspension in return for acceptance of additional imports from Germany. Protests on this score have been made before by the United States.

The State Department announcement curtly said that Ambassador Dodd had been instructed "to protest formally and energetically to the minister of foreign affairs against the recent summary independent action of Germany with respect to her external debts.

Insists on Fair Treatment.

"The Ambassador was instructed to state that this action by Germany seriously affects the Government of the United States and its Nationals and that the Government of the United States takes occasion to express its strongest regret that new losses are to be imposed upon American citizens, and that debtor-creditor relationships have been further impaired.

"The Ambassador was further instructed to state to the German government, in regard to the question of discrimination against American investors, that the Government of the United States would view with disapproval developments under which its investors receive poorer treatment than investors of other countries.

"The Government of the United States would be called upon to protest any such discrimination. The spectacle of having not only to accept losses but to perceive payments to investors of other nationalities at their expense would arouse a sense of mistreatment among the numerous American investors."

By far the majority of the $1,000,000,000 in dollar bonds involved in the moratorium are held by United States investors. Germany's explanation of the debt suspension was contained in a 50-page note delivered to Secretary Hull by Dr. Luther last Friday. In general, it blames scarcity of gold in Germany and a dwindling foreign trade for its action.

Death Verdicts Upheld For Dillinger Gangsters

Lima, Ohio, June 18 (AP).—The Third District Court of Appeals today unanimously confirmed the death verdicts given Harry Pierpont and Charles Makley, former Dillinger gangsters, in their trials for the murder of Sheriff Jess Sarber.

Parliament Bombed In Madrid; 2 Seized

Madrid, June 18 (U.P.).—A bomb exploded on the steps of Parliament tonight. None was injured and the damage was negligible.

Civil guards inside the Cortes and police from a station across the street quickly dispersed a crowd. Two men were arrested.

U.S. Savings Bank to Pay Million Soon

Remaining 35 Per Cent for Depositors Waits on Liquidation.

Depositors and creditors of the closed United States Savings Bank will receive a dividend of $1,000,000 not later than July 1, Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor announced yesterday, following the decision of the District Court of Appeals that the Treasury was within its rights in closing the institution.

The dividend will amount to approximately 65 per cent of the outstanding claims. The remaining 35 per cent will be paid, Mr. O'Connor said, as rapidly as the assets of the bank can be liquidated.

A loan of $1,000,000 from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation made the dividend possible. A dividend of 50 per cent was proposed by the Treasury last September when litigation began over the proposal to reopen the bank. Improved business conditions since then have made possible the additional 15 per cent, the comptroller said.

Cooper Sued to Open.

Col. Wade H. Cooper, president and majority stockholder of the bank, instituted court proceedings when Treasury officers rejected his plan of reorganization last year. He asked the District Supreme Court to issue an order directing the Treasury to subscribe to the plan and when that court upheld the Treasury he carried his fight to the Court of Appeals. The bank was closed during the March, 1933, holiday.

Col. Cooper's plan called for a division of the bank's assets into two groups, the prime assets and the secondary, or slow assets. The reorganized bank was to have taken the prime assets and the depositors and creditors were to waive 35 per cent of their claims. The secondary assets were to have been held in trust to secure the payment of the waivers, and dividends from the bank for five years were to have been set aside to augment this fund.

If, at the end of five years the 35 per cent was not fully paid back, stockholders of the reorganized bank would be made subject to a $100 a share assessment to complete the payments.

Plan Declared Inequitable.

This was rejected because "the stockholders of the closed bank would not be called upon primarily to make good any part of the deficiency and the entire loss would be borne by the creditors, while the stockholders retained their stock unimpaired," the Appellate Court said. An "examination of the bank in 1933 disclosed the total liability to creditors (after deducting capital structure) to be $1,953,467.92," the opinion pointed out.

There was a deficiency of $416,165.67 in "acceptable assets" and "the bank accordingly was found to be insolvent in so far as acceptable assets are concerned in the sum of $416,165.67. Upon the basis of a waiver of 35 per cent, the depositors would contribute $575,538.38, which would amount to a contribution of $159,420.71 toward the capital structure of the reorganized bank above the sum necessary to restore the bank to solvency."

The Comptroller of the Currency reported the plan inequitable to depositors and he "was acting within his statutory authority" in refusing to adopt the plan, the court held.

Wife Sues Warburg, Wealthy New Yorker

Quake Shakes Seward; Property Loss Small

Seward, Alaska, June 18 (AP).—An earthquake of severe intensity, lasting for fully a minute, shook this city at 11:15 o'clock last night. No considerable damage was reported.

The movement appeared to be in an East-West direction. Reports from Lake Kenai, 8 miles north of here, said the surface of the water was covered with a film of sulphur.

Member of Leviathan Crew Killed in Fight

Le Havre, France, June 18 (U.P.).—Hans Peder Jensen, 34, a member of the crew of the liner Leviathan, was killed in a gang fight tonight, in which American seamen were alleged to have been knifed by French.

Robert Kalanga, 19, was seriously injured. Police investigating commented it was a "delicate matter" and declined details.

Board Warns Corps Foulois Must Leave

By Frank Getty.

Creation of an efficient Army Air Corps as an economical branch of National defense was the real purpose of the Rogers committee's report asking removal of Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois as chief, the chairman and members of the House investigating group declared yesterday.

The warning was given by several members, however, that unless Foulois is removed, Air Corps legislation would come to a standstill in the next Congress.

Answering the assertion of the chief of Air Corps that the charges against him were unfair and unjust, Chairman Rogers (Democrat), New Hampshire, told the House that Foulois himself had asked that the committee hearings be kept executive and secret.

Politics Denied.

"We did not want to besmirch anyone. There was no politics involved," Rogers said. He met Foulois' criticism of the committee's failure to present the entire record of its hearings by saying the report would have been too voluminous, but that if necessary "we will be glad to open them to the world, and let everyone see the nature of the testimony."

Rogers also characterized, in his speech to the House, Foulois' testimony regarding the Air Corps' ability to fly the mails as "a lie; a falsehood."

He criticized the general for giving assurance that the Air Corps was ready to take over the mail flying "without even calling in or consulting one of his assistants," and revealed that Brig. Gen. Oscar Westover, assistant chief of staff,

Former Official Named In Counterfeit Probe

Austin, Tex., June 18 (AP).—Claude Pollard, former attorney general of Texas, with several others, has been indicted by a Travis County grand jury in connection with the circulation of counterfeit State cigarette tax stamps.

Pollard is charged with consenting to the use, issuance and circulation of the stamps. His bond was set at $1,500. Pollard served as attorney general in former Gov. Dan Moody's second term.

Capper Beats Horse Racing For District

Bill Is Believed Doomed by Objection to Senate Action.

What was considered a fatal blow to the House bill legalizing race track betting in the District was delivered early last night by Senator Arthur Capper, of Kansas, when he objected to consideration of the bill in the Senate.

Senator Robert Reynolds, of North Carolina, one of the backers of the bill, sought to bring it before the body under unanimous consent, but Senator Capper's objection blocked the move. While it was possible that another and successful attempt might be made to bring up the bill, it was generally believed the measure was doomed by Capper's action.

The District Commissioners and the Federation of Citizens Associations have opposed the bill, while hotel men and others have been active in its behalf. It had passed the House and was favorably reported by the Senate District Committee last week.

3 Killed, Others Hurt in Accident

En route to Everett, Pa., Dr. Roy H. Barton, 37, dentist; Miss Elsie Steach, 20, and Miss Virginia Dodson, 20, were killed when their car, going 60 miles an hour, struck a tree at Penrod's Grove, Pa., 22 miles north of here. Eugene Clark, 20, and William Riley, 40, are in a Bedford hospital seriously injured. Frank Williams, driver of the car, the least injured, told the officers he went to sleep at the wheel.

Barton is survived by his widow and two children, the youngest one month. The body of Miss Dodson, who was employed in an Everett restaurant, was sent to her home at Great Cacapon, W. Va. Barton's mother operates a smart apparel shop here and he leaves a sister, Mrs. Charles Brown, also a resident of Cumberland.

Steel Output Is Lower.

New York, June 18 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute estimates steel production for the current week at 53.1 per cent of capacity, a decline of eight-tenths of a point from the 56.9 per cent at which the mills operated last week.

Masked Phantom Police Chief Signals Officer to Death Trap

Matawan, N. J., June 18 (AP).—A white-masked stranger in a hunting coat and cap seated himself at the chief's desk in police headquarters early today, pressed the button of a signal light that summoned Patrolman John Flood from his beat, and as the rookie cop entered opened fire on him with a .38-caliber revolver.

The first bullet hit the wall behind Flood. Startled by the suddenness of the attack and the odd appearance of the man at the desk, he drew his service revolver and began shooting.

It was all over in a few seconds. The white-masked man emptied his revolver and fled through a rear door. Flood, wounded in the head critically, dropped to the floor. Then with a mighty effort he dragged himself to a fire alarm box and sounded a call for help.

When Police Chief Edwin C. Sloat and a fireman reached headquarters they found Flood, who is 35 and married, lying near a telephone booth, still conscious. They took him to Matawan Hospital and there he related the sketchy story of the attack.

He had no idea who the masked man was, he said. He had been patrolling his beat—the lone policeman on duty at that hour—and had seen the red signal flashing. He had hurried to police headquarters in the borough hall. He had received no warning of the attack.

Sloat, aided by county detectives and State police, began an investigation. They concluded the intruder had entered the office through an open window. Whether he pressed the signal button intentionally or accidentally is still to be determined.

Whether the intruder had come there to shoot Flood or to rob the office safe was also undetermined. Sloat recalled that shortly after Flood went on the force two months ago a Staten Island man he had arrested had threatened him. He recalled also the recent robbery of safes at Perth Amboy and New Brunswick City halls.

Rail Labor, Farm Bills Pass; Housing Measure Up

Billions Voted President for Relief; One 'Must' Proposal Left.

By Franklyn Waltman, jr.

Adjournment of Congress sine die was virtually assured last night when a one-man filibuster in the Senate against the Dill-Crosser railway labor bill suddenly collapsed.

The Senate passed the bill without a record vote, but it had to go back to the House for concurrence in amendments. Earlier in the day, House and Senate approved the conference reports on the gigantic deficiency appropriation bill and the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage adjustment bill, sending both to the White House. It is possible President Roosevelt will veto the farm mortgage measure.

Efforts to get Senate approval for the Bulkley bill amending last year's banking act were abandoned earlier in the day by the author, Senator Robert J. Bulkley (Democrat), of Ohio, who was thus free to give his time to a conference between House and Senate on the Administration's housing bill.

Agreement Reached.

After a delay of hours the conferees on the housing bill reached an agreement, but clerical drafting of the conference report delayed its presentation to the House for several more hours. It was this measure which stood between Congress and adjournment late last night.

With the passage of the farm mortgage and railway labor bills by the Senate and the abandonment of the bank amendment measure, all the elements which on Saturday night had created bitter fighting had been eliminated. Throughout yesterday these various controversies threatened to delay adjournment for a day or two, but one by

Gang Rescues Killer Suspect

Havana, June 18 (U.P.).—Five gunmen today staged a daring rescue of a wounded desperado, held under police guard in the University Hospital. The incident was a sensational aftermath to yesterday's street rioting in which 14 were slain and 60 wounded.

The wounded prisoner, Evilio Torres, was suspected of being one of a gang which brutally shot down men, women and children during a demonstration of loyalty to the administration of President Carlos Mendieta. He and his rescuers escaped in a motor car after a running gun battle with police who were guarding Torres.

A police radio car searching Havana for the fugitives later found a blood-stained shirt near by. It was believed one of the men was either killed or wounded in the hospital fight.

Heavy guards were stationed around the presidential palace and other government buildings following yesterday's bloody festival, marred by street fights and the anti-Mendieta massacre by machine gunners.

Reprisals by relatives and friends of the slain and wounded men and women were feared. The government, while sympathizing with this attitude, sought to maintain order.

Low Coulee Dam Bid Is $29,339,301

Mason Offer Is $5,000,000 Under Nearest Price.

Spokane, Wash., June 18 (AP).—Bidding more than $5,000,000 under its competitor, Silas H. Mason, Inc., of New York City, offered today to build the Grand Coulee Power Dam in the Columbia River for $29,339,301.50.

Six Companies of Washington, Inc., an affiliate of Six Companies, Inc., builder of the Boulder Dam in the Colorado River, submitted the only other acceptable bid. This was for $34,535,582.

The contract will be let by the United States Reclamation Service after the bids are checked. The Grand Coulee Dam, to be 142 feet high, will be used to generate power. The entire project will cost approximately $63,000,000.

U. S. Launches Record Scale Silver Buying

$522,000,000 Three-Year Road Program Also Authorized.

Government purchase of silver on a scale unparalleled in American history was inaugurated last night when President Roosevelt signed the bill to establish silver as a backing for currency on a 25-75 basis with gold.

Under terms of the act, the Treasury is directed to acquire an estimated 1,100,000,000 ounces of silver "at home or abroad * * * at such rates, at such times and upon such terms" as the Secretary of the Treasury deems in the best interest.

To witness the final adoption of a new monetary policy, the President called in Secretary Morgenthau and the Western Senators whose stubborn insistence was responsible for passage of the act. It was signed at 8:45, after all exchanges were closed for the day.

Road Law Is Signed.

Earlier yesterday the President cleared his desk of another important bill by signing the Hayden-Cartwright road act, which authorizes $522,000,000 for road construction over a three-year period. Both authors of this measure also attended its ceremony.

In addition to declaring it the policy of the United States that silver be made one-fourth of the metallic backing for currency, the silver act empowers the President to Nationalize silver if he considers such action necessary "to effectuate the policy of this act."

Together with the authorizations which soon will send the Treasury into the market for silver, Congress voted a 50 per cent tax on all profits accruing from silver speculation. This will not apply against holders of the metal engaged in normal operations.

Bill Is a Compromise.

Since most of the powers conveyed by the bill are discretionary, leaving considerable latitude of action, the silver legislation represented a compromise by the White House with extreme silverites of the West who want an even greater place for the metal in the Nation's currency.

Coincident with signing the road act, President Roosevelt issued a statement of warning to State Legislatures that the act serves notice that unmatched emergency grants are to be abandoned and that Federal aid henceforth will be only on a 50-50 basis.

Pointing out that the $400,000,000 in highway work under the NIRA is "more than 90 per cent under contract or advertised for contract," he said the new program is necessary to sustain the road program "for the remaining period of recovery." The act "provides a gradual tapering off of emergency highway expenditures and lays the foundation for a return to normal expenditures."

How Fund Is Divided.

The President's statement further explains that of $522,000,000 authorized by the act, $450,000,000 is set aside for Federal aid to the States—$200,000,000 for grants and $250,000,000 for matching. The balance, $72,000,000, would go to highways in National forests, parks, and public lands.

"Including the contributions to be made by the States and the $230,000,000 which will be carried over from the $400,000,000 appropriated last year," the President pointed out, "the total sum to be paid out for highway construction during the three-year period will be more than a billion dollars."

The act provides that States, to be eligible for full participation in Federal aid, must continue to use for roads at least whatever they receive from gasoline and other taxes on motor vehicles. The President's statement notes further that the sums mentioned represent only an authorization, that funds for the work the first year of the act are contained in the deficiency appropriation bill.

Tooth-Brush Film Had Longest Turkey Run

Istanbul, (U.P.).—Traveling films which deal with health subjects are po ular in Tu key.

One dealing with the care of the teeth was shown throughout the provinces for 1,395 days; a malaria film lasted 714 days, and one on the treatment of children for 554 days.

But—a picture entitled "Why Willy Won't Wash," received little encouragement from the populace, and had a brief run of only 45 days.

Bridegroom, Only 11, Must Go to School

Belgrade (U.P.).—Europe's youngest married couple are Mustafa Bashitch, 11, and Brisha Kasspovich, 17, of Bosnia.

Although a full-fledged husband, the young bridegroom has to go to school every day and his bride helps him with his lessons. He is in the third grade.

Drop in Tuberculosis Seen.

New York (U.P.).—Statisticians of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. predict a large reduction in the tuberculosis death rate in 1934. After studying the mortality figures for the first three months of the year, they believe that the death rate among the industrial workers will be about 90 per 100,000.

Shortly before 6 o'clock it appeared that adjournment might not be achieved last night when Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), of Delaware, undertook to stage a one-man filibuster against the railway labor bill, which earlier had been taken up by the overwhelming vote of 76 to 2. Senator Peter Norbeck (Republican), South Dakota, was the other avowed opponent of the bill.

Hastings Talks for Hour.

Undaunted by his isolation on the matter, Hastings announced he would talk at least five hours—perhaps many more—to prevent passage of the railway labor bill, which he argued the workers themselves did not wish. To an almost empty Senate he read pages of testimony on the bill for more than an hour.

Meanwhile, the House, which had spent the day passing local bills, sent 36 of the latter over to the Senate for concurrence. One by one almost a dozen Senators quietly appealed to Hastings to yield the floor and permit action on their pet measures. This pressure was too strong and Hastings finally capitulated.

Robinson had unanimous consent to proceed to a vote on the railway labor bill and then take up the local bills. Hastings dejectedly sat down, the labor bill was passed viva voce and the clerk started running through the pile of local bills. When this was completed at 7:35 p. m. the Senate took a recess until 8:30 p. m.

Bulkley Steps Aside.

The first move toward conciliation was made by Bulkley when he withdrew his motion to take up the banking bill. Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson followed with a motion to make the deficiency appropriation bill conference report the infinished business. Making available $2,400,000,000 to President Roosevelt for relief, this measure was absolutely essential to the Administration.

Senator Robert M. LaFollette (Republican), of Wisconsin, however, urged the Senate to reject Robinson's motion, pointing out that if Administration obtained approval for its essential legislation the railway labor bill, which he said a majority wanted, would be doomed. There was a brief cross-fire of debate before the Senate voted, 41 to 39, to take up the deficiency conference report.

The narrowness of their escape left the Democratic leaders gasping. Only two votes saved them from a defeat which would have upset all the plans made for the day. This vote indicated the strength of the following for the railway labor bill, which was demonstrated with decisiveness later.

Long Angered by Lost Report.

It started to look like a repetition of what happened Saturday when Senator Huey P. Long (Democrat), of Louisiana, stepped into the debate to announce angrily that the conference report on the farm mortgage bill was "lost." He intimated that some House members were trying to double-cross him by losing the papers.

Long supplied the entertainment and comic relief that the galleries wanted. He asserted that if the outlaw, John Dillinger, wished to escape arrest for all time, all he had to do was attach himself to the "lost" papers on the mortgage bill.

Leader Robinson tried to pacify Long by promising action "as soon as the papers arrived" and by suggesting that a duplicate conference report be drafted. The "Kingfish" insisted he would not permit action on the deficiency bill until he was sure the farm debt bill would be finally passed. Anyway, he said, "people have come here 40 miles to hear me," and he did not want to disappoint them.

Talks on for an Hour.

Long would yield only if Robinson promised there would be no adjournment until the final passage of the farm mortgage bill had been achieved, but the Democratic leader would not make such a commitment. After an hour of talking, the Louisianan was persuaded to sit down.

After that, the conference report on the appropriation was adopted. Immediately the Senate passed the Smith-Kerr bill authorizing assessment of penalties on tobacco produced in excess of quota productions under the AAA.

Senator Clarence C. Dill (Democrat), Washington, moved to take up the railway labor bill. This brought Hastings into the debate, and then Senator James Couzens (Republican), Michigan.

Robinson asserted he favored passage of the bill, but that he feared it would meet "persistent opposition." He said the President felt and he agreed with him that "if the measure is taken up at this time it will precipitate indefinite discussion"—fears subsequently shown to be without much basis.

Wheeler Threatens Snag.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, said he and other advocates of the railway bill would do their utmost to block adjournment until the measure had been approved. He said the issue was whether the Senate would let the Pennsylvania Railroad block action on legislation needed "so badly."

This discussion was interrupted by the arrival of a new conference report on the farm mortgage bill. This was sharply attacked by Senators from New England, expressing the opposition of insurance companies, but finally was approved, 60 to 16. Later the Senate voted, 76 to 2, to take up the railway labor bill.

After a series of amendments to the bill had been adopted, Hastings again took the floor, this time with his threat to "talk at least five hours," but he found it undesirable to keep that promise. The log-jam was broken and it looked like the Seventy-third Congress would pass into history before morning.

Harvard Posters Urge Making Hitler Aid Master of Torture

Attack Made as Visitor Honors His Dead Classmates.

Cambridge, Mass., June 18 (U.P.).—Dr. Ernst Franz Sedgwick Hanfstaengl, known to German Chancellor Adolf Hitler as "Hanfy" and to Harvard classmates of '09 as "Putzy," refused to witness horse races at the country club today so that he might properly attend memorial services for the dead members of his class at Harvard.

After the services he had tea at the home of President James Bryant Conant.

Accompanied by a detail of State police, "Putzy" visited fashionable resorts in and around Boston. He arose early at Beverly Farms, where he had spent the night at the home of Louis A. Shaw, a classmate.

During part of his roving, the foreign propaganda director of the Nazi regime was guarded by two Jewish members of the Boston police. They were Special Officers Benjamin Goodman and William Goulston, assigned to the radical squad.

At about the time "Putzy" was having breakfast at Beverly Farms another familiar Harvard figure, Maj. Charlie Apted, chief of the Harvard University police, was spluttering his indignation at "fresh" persons who had pasted fences around Harvard yard with posters.

The posters, quickly removed, read:

There was, however, no disorder or other manifestation of resentment when Hanfstaengl, in black suit and tie and perspiring profusely, arrived at Memorial Hall for the services. He was greeted warmly by personal friends and passed quickly into the church.

Probe Ordered in Death of Man Who Sought Jail for Treatment

Paroled on Intoxication Charge, He Asks New Arrest, Then Dies.

A coroner's investigation was ordered yesterday in the death of John Connors, 50, of the 1200 block of H street northwest, who died Sunday in the District Jail Infirmary after twice seeking arrest in an effort to obtain medical aid.

Connors was paroled May 18 on intoxication charges. Several times since, it was reported, he appealed to parole officers for medical treatment. Saturday he was charged with violation of parole and sent to the jail. He died the next day.

In his visits to the parole office, Connors is said to have twice expressed a willingness to accept a jail sentence if hospitalization was promised. Board of Public Welfare records show that Connors was issued a permit to enter Gallinger Hospital on June 1.

It was alleged he was refused admittance because of crowded conditions. Dr. Philip Stebbing, admitting officer at the hospital, said his records failed to show whether the man applied for treatment.

It was admitted that crowded conditions exist in alcoholic wards at Gallinger Hospital and only so-called emergency cases are accepted. Had Connors applied, Dr. Stebbings said, he undoubtedly would have been admitted.

Although a heart attack was believed responsible for Connors' death, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said his investigation would include an autopsy at the District Morgue.

Bird Inventory Being Made.

Stockholm (U.P.).—An inventory of the bird fauna of Lake Takern, in the Swedsih province of Ostergotland, now is being made. This lake, which is exceptionally shallow and filled with low, rush-covered islets, has for years been the home of thousands of wild birds. Dr. Folke Pearson, who is making the inventory under the auspices of the Swedish Nature Preservation Society, estimates that there are from 25 to 30 different kinds of birds, totaling many tens of thousands.

1830 Life Was Dangerous.

Boston (U.P.).—Life was almost as dangerous in Boston in automobileless 1830 as in 1930, statistics show. The death rate in 1830 was 71.7 per 100,000 and 100 years later it was 74.4. Drownings took the heaviest toll in 1830.

Police Will Obtain Two-Way Radio Sets

Oklahoma City (U.P.).—To facilitate catching criminals, the Oklahoma County sheriff's cruising cars soon will be equipped with "two-way" radio sets.

If the experiment proves practical it is planned to install the tiny 5-meter broadcasting sets in every car, to enable the men to talk with the central station.

Such an arrangement will prove of inestimable benefit in the pursuit of criminals, according to Sheriff Stanley Rogers.

Senate Votes Record-Setting Fund for Relief

$2,629,000,000 Deficiency Bill Is Given Final Approval.

Topping every other peace-time appropriation in history with one lone exception, the Administration's huge omnibus second deficiency bill, carrying vast totals for relief and public works, received final approval of Congress yesterday. Authorizing $2,629,000,000 in expenditures, second only to the $3,300,000,000 appropriated last session for recovery, the measure was quickly accepted yesterday by the Senate. The House acted Saturday.

Involved in the blanket relief measure was some $899,000,000 for extension of relief activities, and another $525,000,000 requested by the President for indirect emergency aid to drought-ridden States of the West.

A limitation of $500,000,000 was placed on additional sums the Federal Emergency Relief Administration might drain from the RFC. This was done at the demand of the Senate, when it was discovered the House bill would permit the President to draw at will on RFC billions.

Carrying the earmarking principle a step farther, the bill as passed limits new public works funds to $500,000,000, out of which $100,000,000 would go for public roads grants, $65,000,000 for public buildings, and $48,000,000 for new naval construction.

But the Public Works Administration would be permitted to get $250,000,000 more in new working capital by selling bonds of that value they have received from beneficiaries of public works grants.

The bill provides new millions for continuation of CCC activities and work of the Tennessee Valley Authority.

Senate Balks D.C. Fund Raise

Approves Report Denying Increases to Three Boards.

Approval of the Senate was given yesterday to the conference report on the last general deficiency appropriation bill with the proposed increased appropriations for the District Public Utilities Commission, the Alcoholic Beverage Control board and the parole board stricken from the measure.

The bodies had asked for larger amounts for the next fiscal year, but their estimates were cut, on insistence of the House, when the annual District appropriation bill was passed. House conferees refused to approve the insertion of the proposed amounts in the deficiency bill and they were cut out in conference. Senator Patrick A. McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, had insisted that the utilities commission appropriation be included by the Senate.

No effort was made to go against the conference action when the measure was finally acted on by the Senate. The utilities commission will have to dismiss 14 employes on July 1 because it did not get the requested $36,823. The inspection force of the beverage board will be reduced to 2 because its $18,000 item was lost. What the parole board will do because it failed to get the requested $13,770 for clerical help has not been determined. Parole board members have threatened to resign because they said they could not properly perform their duties without an adequate staff. The board members receive no salaries.

Coal Dealers' Work Praised

National Retail Association Conclave Hears Talk by L. H. Snead.

Congratulations on seventeen years of service to the nation in peace and war were extended the National Retail Coal Merchants' Association by L. A. Snead, of Washington, fuel and transportation adviser, at the seventeenth annual convention yesterday in the Willard Hotel.

Referring to the World War emergency which brought the organization into being, Mr. Snead said:

"Seventeen years ago, when the clouds of war hovered over the nation and the resources of the country were being mobilized for that conflict, this association came into being. A shortage of 50,000,000 tons of coal existed and there was grave concern as to an adequate and regular supply of fuel for domestic purposes.

"As Director of Distribution for the Fuel Administration, I called in William A. Smoot, of Alexandria, and the late Sam Crowell, of Philadelphia, and requested formation of a National association through which the fuel administration might deal with the emergency."

With Mr. Smoot as president, Mr. Snead recalled the valuable services rendered by the association during the war and reviewed its activities in dealing with problems presented in more recent years by the depression.

After Bus Had Run Amuck

Varied Tastes Manifested by National Poll

"Rithschild" First on List; Data on Amafiing Tour; Theater News.

By Nelson B. Bell.

According to the Motion Picture Herald's monthly scrutiny of the box-office statements of the Nation, the so-called key cities, by their attendance records, nominated seven motion picture champions for the month of May.

First, second and third places were undisputed. Two pictures, however, were tied for fourth place and two also for fifth.

The undisputed leader for the month was "The House of Rothschild," starring George Arliss. This United Artists release also was included among the April champions. Second place was taken without contest by "Viva Villa," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer idealization of the Mexican revolutionist in which the role of Pancho Villa is played by Wallace Berry. "Stand Up and Cheer," the Fox musical, dropped into the third notch without too serious competition.

M-G-M Scores Double.

In the deadlock for fourth place were Paramount's "We're Not Dressing," with Bing Crosby and Carole Lombard, and Columbia's "Twentieth Century," the splendid comedy in which Miss Lombard scores again opposite John Barrymore, whose performance is one of his finest. Fifth place was shared by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Manhattan Melodrama," with Clark Gable, Myrna Loy and William Powell, and Universal's "The Countess of Monte Cristo," with Fay Wray and Paul Lukas.

In summary, we find the seven pictures to embrace a wide range of taste, from serious, historical drama to light comedy and musical extravaganza. United Artists, Fox, Paramount, Columbia and Universal are represented by one subject each, M-G-M by the May leader and a tie for fifth place.

There have been office stenographers who have risen to the rank of featured screen player and sometimes even to stardom, but the record books are not exactly crowded with the name of office boys who have become directors. Charles Barton, at Paramount, is one of the few to make the grade. Back in 1923, Barton was an office boy. During the past 11 years he has moved up in turn trough positions of prop boy, film cutter, assistant director and dialogue writer. His next assignment will be as codirector of "Wagon Wheels," with Arthur Jacobson.

Miss Cornell and the Road.

It would be difficult to make Katharine Cornell believe that "the road" is dead.

While a majority of those in "show business" have been sitting idly in New York twirling their thumbs and lamenting the passing of "the road," Miss Cornell has been engaged in an illuminating investigation of the matter on her own account, and in so doing has encountered nothing upon which a pessimist might thrive.

Tomorrow night Miss Cornell will end her Nation-wide tour in the Academy of Music in Brooklyn, N. Y. She bega nher season in Buffalo on November 29 of last year. Between these two dates she has traveled 16,853.6 miles, has appeared in 74 cities in 31 States, and will have given 217 performances before audiences aggregating more than 500,000 people.

The three plays of her repertoire were Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet"—her first essay at Shakespearean drama—Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and George Bernard Shaw's "Candida."

A Few Records.

The record attendance and receipts of Miss Cornell's tour for a single performance were in the Shrine Auditorium, Des Moines, Iowa, where 4,251 people saw "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," and paid $7,795.70 at the box office, including the Federal tax.

In Toledo, Ohio, the public paid $8,165.90 for a single performance of the play, but as both a 10 per cent State and Federal tax were charged, Des Moines holds the record for net receipts, possibly the world record for a spoken drama given indoors.

San Francisco has the record for single performances of "Romeo and Juliet" and "Candida," which played to over the seating capacity of the Columbia Theater in that city.

Interesting Data.

Texas has the State record, having paid $42,436.90 during the nine days Miss Cornell toured the State.

The record advance sale was in Oklahoma City, where the large Shrine Auditorium was sold out two weks before the engagement and an extra matinee was sold out two hours after it was announced. The largest single week was $29,721.25, which was taken in six one-night stands—Waco and Fort Worth, Tex.; Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla., and Emopria and Wichita, Kans.

In Williamsport, Pa., the record for standees was reached when 236 people stood to see the play.

The oldest theater playe on the tour was the Charleston (S. C.) Academy of Music.

That is anything but a mortuary record, but who else besides Miss Cornell could compile it?

Among the week-end callers upon the dramatic desk was Wally Decker, one of the theater's veteran agents. Mr. Decker, whose experience in the playhouse dates back many years, was in Washington in the interests of "The Voice of Experience." You will hear this particular voice at the Earle Theater the week of July 6. Between now and then you will probably hear a good deal more about it here.

First 1934-35 Premiere.

Fox Films will have the distinction of being the first motion picture producing company to inaugurate its 1934-35 season with a prerelease showing of "The World Moves On," at the Criterion Theater in New York City, Thursday, June 28. It will be accorded National release shortly after its premiere on Broadway.

In "The World Moves On," Madeleine Carroll and Franchot Tone play the stellar roles of lovers who survive the mad destruction of conflicting forces in modern civilization, finding at the end that only spiritual values are sound and constant.

Among the supporting players are Louise Dresser, Raul Roulien, Siegfried Rumann, Reginald Denny, Dudley Digges, Brenda Fowler, Lumsden Hare, Frank Moran, Stepin Fetchit, Ferdinand Schumann-Heink and a score of others. That would be a great cast even without a score of others!

Sub-Commttiee Hits Financing Of Mayflower

Report Will Be Drafted Today Condemning Transactions.

Drafting of a report condemning financial transactions growing out of the building and reorganization of the Mayflower Hotel will be begun at 10 a. m. today by the District investigating subcommittee and its counsel.

The meeting will be held in the office of Senator Hamilton F. Kean (Republican), of New Jersey, and will be attended by Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, and Elwood Seal, assistant corporation counsel, who aided the committee.

Call for the meeting followed conclusion yesterday of the public interrogation of witnesses involved in the transactions.

The $12,600,000 appraisal of the property by James B. Hobbs in 1928, when the hotel was being refinanced, was challenged by counsel and committee members.

Appraisal Questions.

"When you made the appraisal did you take into consideration the fact that $5,200,000 to build it?" asked Senator Reynolds.

"No," said Mr. Hobbs. He added that he had taken two days to make the appraisal for the Harry Wardman firm, with which he then was connected. The concern was paid $2,500 for the appraisal, he testified. The $12,600,000 appraisal, he said, was based on his general knowledge of hotel construction costs. His familiarity with such costs had been developed through the building of two hotel properties by his own concern, he said.

A unit cost of $1 per cubic foot was employed, Mr. Hobbs testified. He valued the hotel land at $42.50 per square foot, he said.

"But you didn't take into consideration the actual cost of constructing the hotel, did you?" asked Senator Reynolds.

Mr. Hobbs said he had not. He was not concerned with that figure, he said, because he had been asked to appraise the reproduction cost.

His appraisal was not too high, he insisted. He referred to high construction costs at the time. Mr. Seal read into the record figures showing that construction costs had been declining over a two or threes period preceding the Hobbs appraisal.

"You know your appraisal wos going to be used as a basis for the sale of about $7,000,000 in securities above the actual cost of the property?" inquired Senator Reynolds.

Didn't Know Purpose.

"Our concern was not informed of the purpose of the appraisal nor the use which was to be made of it," insisted Mr. Hobbs.

"If you had known they were going to sell $7,000,000 in securities above the cost price you would have known somebody was going to get fleeced, wouldn't you?" persisted Senator Reynolds.

"We wouldn't want to be a party to a fraud," admitted Mr. Hobbs. "We didn't ask them how they were going to use the appraisal. We considered the Mayflower concern a reputable organization.

Joseph Low, attorney representing bandholders who are opposed to the reorganization plan which has been worked out by the three bondholders' committees acting for 85 per cent of the outstanding first mortgage bands, was the last witness.

Efforts have been made during the investigation to show that those sponsoring the reorganization plan, which involves foreclosure in favor of the majority first mortgage holders, are the same persons who were active in selling the millions in hotel securities in 1928 This has been denied by Paul E. Lesh, Washington attorney, representing the committees.

Mr. Low took up the question and after reading from a reorganization rospectus, said the so-called Henderson committee of New York is substantially under control of Halsey, Stuart Co., which, with the now bankrupt American Bond & Mortgage Co., of Chicago, floated the securities.

July 4 Plans Rites Complete

Pageantry and Massing of Colors to Feature Ceremonies.

Further details for the Fourth of July celebration at the Washington Monument were announced yesterda yfollowing a meeting of the program committee, of which Dr. Cloyd Heck aMrvin is chairman. The theme will be "good citizenship."

Opening with a concert by the United States aMrine Band, at 7:15 p. m., the ceremonies will lead up to the massing o fthe colors, with pageant processional features. Important events such as the writing of the Declaration of Independence, the Revolution, the War of 1812, the Mexican War, the Civil War, the Spanish-American War, and the World War have been suggested by Dr. Marvin as themes for pageantry.

Prominent military, patriotic and veteran groups which will participate in the massing of the colors will cooperate in the pageant procession which will accompany the march in honor of the National Emblem.

The drum and bugle corps of the Veterans of oFreign Wars will participate in the official ceremonies, and Boy and Girl Scouts also are expected to take part in the program, potably the finale, "America's Future," which leads up to the theme of "good citizenship."

A torchlight procession of Scouts will be included in the climax of the massing of the colors. The fireworks have been ordered by a committee headed by Thomas L. Eagon, jr., and the chair tickets at 25 cents each, will be on sale this week in the Willard, Washington and Mayflower Hotels, American Automobile Association and elsewhere.

Nazi Rule Draws Von Papen Attack

Von Papen's vigorous blast at Nazi doctrines assumed added significance when it became known that Count Rudolf Nadolny had resigned as German Ambassador to Russia.

This is the first defection from government ranks since resignation of Dr. Alfred Hugenberg as minister of economics and agriculture last June. Count Nadolny's resignation, withheld from the public until today, dates back to the middle of May when he tried in vain to persuade Chancellor Hitler to accept Russia's proposal for a nonaggression pact—a proposal also favored by the foreign office.

As Count Nadolny is a close friend of the family of President von Hindenburg, some political circles saw his resignation and Von Papen's speech as steps in a deliberate campaign by Germany's grand old man to bring Nazi extremists to their senses.

President von Hindenburg is now at the ancestral estate at Neudeck, where it is reported his East Prussians associates are hard at work in opposition to Nazi policies, especially agrarian.

The common comment was that the speech forecasts the parting of ways for Von Papen and Hitlerism.

Speculation Rife.

While many thought that the speech meant Von Papen is on his way out of the government, others speculated that he may have spoken with connivance of the chancellor.

These observers connected the incident with the Hitler-Mussolini conference at Venice last week, believing that the Italian premier may have convinced Hitler that some of the methods of his party were questionable.

A third interpretation was that Von Papen simply was opposing the recent activities of some of the extreme wing of the national Socialists.

The Reich government, Von Papen said, "is well informed about all in the nature of selfishness, lack of character, untruth, ungentlemanliness and arrogance that is trying to spread out under the cover of the German revolution."

The press now no longer is a "safety valve," he declared, saying that the "real purpose of the press would seem to be to inform the government of the defects that have crept in."

The vice chancellor also spoke against the Nazi claim to domination of all phases of life, including religion.

3 Killed, 20 Hurt In Gas Tank Blasts

the sky as it poured upward from the flaming tanks.

After four hours of fighting the intense flames, firemen believed the blaze was nearly under control early in the evening, and concentrated their efforts on preventing an explosion in a huge tank of paraffine.

The crowd had gathered at the station with the first rush of fire apparatus and was surging close when the first tank suddenly exploded. One of the first to reach the scene was George Dodds, a reporter for the Jamestown Evening Journal.

"I saw many persons, including children, lying in the field about the place. I do not know if they were dead," he said. "I know that many of those who were injured were terribly burned by the sheets of flame which leaped at them. * * *

Cause Unknown.

"A man attendant at the depot, Harold Johnson, told me the tanks had just been filled from railroad cars. He was fixing a connection, he said, when suddenly flame 'leaped out' at him. He said he did not know what caused the fire."

All ambulances in the city transported the injured to hospitals. No immediate effort was made to reach all the bodies because of the flames.

Jail Breaker Caught, Faces Murder Trial

Huntsville, Tex., June 18 (AP).—Joe Palmer, escaped convict, who was captured at St. Joseph, Mo., last week shortly after he released three men he had kidnaped in Iowa, was brought to the State penitentiary here today.

He will be held there for trial on a charge of murdering Maj. Crowson, a guard, who was slain when Palmer, Raymond Hamilton and two others escaped from the Eastman, Tex., State Prison Farm last January in a delivery effected by Clyde Barrow, Southwestern desperado, recently killed in Louisiana.

Air Corps to Suffer if Foulois Stays, Board Members Warn had testified that "if he had been asked, he would not under the circumstances have been ready to recommend that the Army carry the mail."

Wants Thorough Shake-Up.

Asserting that unless a thorough shake-up is ordered as a result of the report, Air Corps legislation will encounter trouble in the next Congress, Representative Goss (Republican), of Connecticut another committee member said:

"The officials downtown must remember that they are working for us; we are not working for them."

Representative Hill (Democrat), of Alabama, pointed out the committee from the first had been friendly to the Air Corps, but that its four months' investigation had "revealed an unfortunate condition."

"We hope this can be cleared up by January, so that we can start anew with a constructive effort to build up our National defense," Hill said.

Meanwhile, the "officials downtown" referred to by Goss had not received the committee report. It was transmitted to the President and to Secretary of War Dern last night.

Court-Martial Possible.

Army circles, speculating on what course Foulois might pursue, pointed out the possibility of a court-martial. The chief of Air Corps, they said, can ask for a court of inquiry or for an inspector to examine the charges made against him by the committee. Should the opinion be that the case warranted further attention, a court-martial would be ordered.

Foulois has expressed a readiness to meet his accusers in open court.

Secretary Dern, declining to comment upon the demand for Foulois' removal until receiving the committee's report, was reported yesterday to be studying the data at hand. He is understood to place a conservative interpretation on the charge of "dishonesty" against the general.

The committee report, incidentally, did not charge dishonesty aside from Foulois' manner of testifying. The report, toward its conclusion, said:

"As another piece of testimony showing the unreliability and dishonesty of Maj. Gen. Foulois, we call attention to the general's statement before the House Committee on Military Affairs on February 1, 1934."

Rogers Repeats Charges.

"In his speech to the House yesterday, Representative Rogers repeated and emphasized, however, the charges against Foulois, which included "gross misconduct," "inefficiency," &c.

"Gen. Foulois testified before our committee that the complete program of procurement for the Air Corps is now drawn up by the General Staff," Rogers said, "without even consulting the Air Corps.

"You will have in the report before you official records disproving and showing the falsity of that testimony.

"Time after time he is shown to have been consulted; he appeared before various committees and gave full recommendations as to what he desired for the Air Corps."

Rogers then revealed to the House a matter not included in the report, concerning the inspection of Boeing P-26 pursuit planes purchased, he said, "illegally, under Army regulations, without competition."

"It will be recalled that there was a fatal crash which caused the grounding of those planes," Rogers continued. "An official report after an inspection of those planes on February 19, 1934, said their condition was considered 'extremely dangerous.'

Used Until Man Is Killed.

"That is the finding of the pilot inspectors, and yet the Air Corps permitted those planes to be used until a man was killed."

Rogers also stressed the fact that before the last of the Boeings is delivered the type will be obsolete.

Referring to Foulois' statement of Sunday evening, regretting that the committee held secret sessions, Rogers said:

"The answer to that is that we started in the nature of a grand jury. Gen. Foulois had friends on the committee. We decided to get to the bottom of the proposition before we did anything. But Gen. Foulois came before the committee and asked that the sessions be kept secret and executive. Yet he complains because they were."

While awaiting action by the Secretary of War and the President, Rogers said, the committee will make arrangements for summer sessions at which War Department procurement of materiel other than airplanes and trading in surplus clothing will be examined. It is in this connection that committee members have declared "penitentiary doors may open" for some Government officials.

New Dock Strike Pact Being Drawn

San Francisco, June 18 (AP).—With shipping at a standstill, waterfront employers here today called upon signers of Saturday's peace pact with striking longshoremen to "make good upon their guaranty." They said the agreement should stand.

Meanwhile, a new plan for settlement of the coastwide strike, involving 12,000 longshoremen and 15,000 other marine and waterfront workers, was being drawn up at Portland. Mayor Angelo Rossi, of San Francisco, again brought together for a conference the men who signed the agreement which was later rejected with thunderous "noes" by the dock workers.

The employers earlier had issued an order halting all shipping operations, dismissing workers hired to take the strikers' places.

Rep. Samuel Arentz To Be Buried Today

Reno, Nev., June 18 (AP).—Funeral services for the late Samuel S. Arentz, mining engineer and rancher, who served as Nevada's only Representative in Congress for ten years, will be conducted Tuesday afternoon, with the Rev. Brewster Adamsn of the First Baptist Church, officiating. Arentz died yesterday, following a brief illness.

His body will be buried in the Masonic plot in Mountain View Cemetry, Reno.

Fresh Paint

White House Will Receive Two Coats.

The White House is going to get a couple of coats of paint—guess what color?

Bids were opened yesterday and the New York Decorating Co. was found to have submitted the lowest offer, $5,382.

The whole mansion, including the east terrace, will be gone over, but the executive office wing will not. Specifications provide that even the eight gate posts at the Pennsylvania avenue entrance and four on East Executive avenue shall be painted. All screens will be freshened up, the mesh with one coat and the frames with two.

Quiet must prevail as brushes are wielded, warn the specifications. "The occupants must not be disturbed."

Four Crippled Students Today Get Diplomas

The District's smallest graduating class—numbering but four—will be presented diplomas at Weightman School for Cripled Children today at 10 a. m.

Moving slowly up the aisle of the auditorium, their legs in steel braces, two boys and two girls who have completed the eighth grade will received certificates of merit, and say farewell to the institution at Twenty-third and N streets northwest, where for five years they have pursued their studies.

The graduates are Edward Hall, 16, of 924 K street southeast; LeRoy Kessler, 17, of 42 T street northwest; Julia Ellen Phillips, 16, of 726 Twelfth street northwest, and June Davis, 16, of 1221 Twenty-third street northwest.

Take Regular Courses.

Since the school was organized in 1929, these pupils have taken on the same subjects their contemporaries in other District schools have studied.

A special bus calls for them and the 46 other pupils in the school, every morning, and takes them home in the evening. They are treated in a physio-therapy laboratory, in charge of Miss Helen Moore.

There was music on the air in the dingy red brick structure yesterday, for the graduates were rehearsing their commencement songs.

They will sing "America the Beautiful," "Keep in the Middle of the Road" and "The Wanderer's Night Song" today, and listen to an address by Henry Quinn. Invocation will be delivered by Dr. J. C. Palmer, and Henry W. Draper will present the diplomas.

Edward Hall is class historian, Julia Phillipps will greet parents and friends who come to the graduation, LeRoy Kessler will recite the class poem and June Davis will give the class prophecy.

Three Teachers on Staff.

Mrs. B. J. Drake is teacher in charge of Weightman. There are two other instructors, not including Miss Moore, on her skeleton faculty. These are Mrs. Estelle Miller and Miss Florence Maitland. Since she took charge of the institution, in 1929, Mrs. Drake has registered 87 pupils in all the grades. Sometimes, after graduation, pupils return for another year, and take up ninth grade work.

"These children, for the most part, are unusually bright," said Mrs. Drake. "They would be fitted to enter junior or senior high school anywhere, if proper physical facilities for taking care of their infirmities could be provided."

"Our work is one of rehabilitation," asserted Mrs. Drake. "It's the most interesting I've ever done. We specialize in music and geography and history, for these seize the imagination, and carry the children away from introspection."

As she spoke, the notes of a barcarolle tumbled from an enormous victrola in one corner of the room.

So Sorry

Convict's Family Is Denied Vacation at Lorton.

The "country club" qualities of the District's reformatory at Lorton are attracting summer visitors, if a telephonic inquiry to the district attorney's office yesterday is any criterion.

An unidentified woman telephoned to say that her husband was doing "from two to three years," and asking if there were any accommodations for women and children. She explained that if there were she would like to take the kids and spend an odd month or so with the head of the family.

She was informed that the only guests permitted at Lorton were those sent there by judicial mandate.

Driver Dozes, Bus Crashes

Five Passengers Escape Serious Injury in Smash-up.

Five passengers on a Capital Transit Co. bus escaped serious injury yesterday when the driver fell asleep, crashed into a tree in front of Mount Olivet Cemetery, careened across Bladensburg road in the path of a funeral procession and struck a gasoline station floodlight pole.

Two brothers, Calvin, 14, and Jesse Foster, 12, of Colmar Manor, Md., were hurled through a hole torn in the side of the bus when it hit the tree. They received only minor hurts, however, and continued on their way to school after examination at Casualty Hospital.

The bus driver, Sherman N. Redmiles, 22, of 1533 Trinidad avenue northeast, allegedly told police he went to sleep while driving. He was charged with reckless drivnig.

Redmiles has been employed by the Capital Transit Co. for approximately six months, police were told.

Witnesses said the bus was traveling at a moderate rate of speed, but Redmiles apparently was unable to regain control after hitting the tree.

Renaldo, Film Star, Denied Probation

Los Angeles, June 18 (AP).—An application by Duncan Renaldo, motion picture actor, for probation was denied today by Judge George Cosgrave, who ordered him into custody by the United States Marshal for transportation to the McNeil Island Federal Penitentiary.

Renaldo was convicted of making a false affidavit on a passport. The Government presented evidence that he was born in Roumania while on the passport application he gave his place of birth as New Jersey.

Judge in Langer Case Is Guarded summoned as a "precautionary measure."

He added the necessity for aid was "intimated by the Department of Justice in Washington," which had requested Army authorities to step in.

At Omaha, Maj. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, Seventh Corps Area commander, said he had authorized Col. Harris to call out the troops if he considered such action necessary.

When the court session ended one truck of infantrymen moved to the hotel where Judge Miller has his quarters.

In the afternoon both trucks returned to Fort Lincoln, where two observation planes had just arrived from Fort Snelling, Minn. They came, according to the commandant, as a part of their "training."

Two hundred soldiers were on a "practice march," north of the city.

By afternoon the city was quiet but tense. Never had there been any outward demonstration of excitement, but citizens closely watched developments. An observer likened the city to a "powder keg."

Coup d'Etat Feared.

Langer firmly announced he intended to "fight to the last" to retain his office. Before the executive offices were posted the sheriff of this county and a deputy under Langer's orders to prevent any persons from entering the quarters.

The move was taken as a precaution against a coup d'etat the Langer administration feared would be attempted by Olson forces.

Olson arrived here in the early hours of the morning. He took his oath of office in a downtown business office before a notary public.

Langer, noted for his frequent use of National Guardsmen to enforce his several moratorium and embargo proclamations, said he would use "force" if necessary to retain his office. He declared specifically he did not intend to use National Guardsmen.

Court Upholds Restrictions On Properties

Chevy Chase Circle, Says Appeals Tribunal, Is Solely Residential.

Holding that "it is a matter of common knowledge that Chevy Chase Circle is one of the most attractive residential sections of the National Capital," the District Court of Appeals yesterday declined to order the removal of restrictions which would have permitted the erection of buildings other than residences in the neighborhood.

William P. and Florence C. Kenealy and Harry H. and Joanna H. Byrne brought suit against the Chevy Chase Land Co., of Montgomery County, Md., to cancel restrictions which prevented the erection of apartment houses and commercial properties on the west side of Connecticut avenue north of Northampton street.

They declared the automobile traffic on Connecticut avenue had rendered the property somewhat unfit for residential property. Pointing out that the value of their property would be "enhanced fivefold" by the removal of the restrictions, the plaintiffs asked that, in the event business properties were tabooed, they should at least be permitted to erect an apartment.

However, the higher court, in sustaining the District Supreme Court, said that the property was purchased with knowledge of the covenants "which bound the appellants." "To erect an apartment house on appellants' property would change the character of the subdivision from a community of permanent, individual small-home owners, who in this country form in large measure the warp and woof of the fabric of our citizenship, into a community of an evanescent and more transient character," the Appellate Court held.

Major Motion Picture Producers Conform Voluntarily to Wishes of Reformers

Many Classics Scheduled for Early Release

Title Changes Also Made; Film Gave Baer Hunch; About Showshops.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

By Nelson B. Bell.

Titles of motion pictures in production, or planned, give evidence that the major producers have not been indifferent to the demands of religious, club and civic groups scattered over the Nation for cleaner films.

Even before all the hue and cry against an allegedly objectionable cinema was raised there was a distinctly discernible trend toward the classics. This is revealed by even a cursory survey of the titles listed for future release, which also include a goodly proportion of historical and costume subjects.

There still are many titles that are obviously "sexy," but the fact nevertheless remains that feature pictures, to a greater extent than has been the case in several seasons during the 1934-35 year of production will be aimed at family audiences, with sex, violence and other unethical qualities to which objection has been raised decisively soft-pedaled. A glance at the impending rosters of the foremost producers will bear out this forecast.

Dickens Prominent.

The Warner Brothers-First National list embraces Dickens' "A Tale of Two Cities" and "Mr. Pickwick," from the "Pickwick Papers"; "Napoleon," Booth Tarkington's "The Magnificent Ambersons," "Oil for the Lamps of China," "Captain Blood," "I'm Back From the Chain-Gang," "Anthony Adverse," which will be made as one picture instead of three, as was planned at first, to be viewed on as many successive days; "Gold Diggers of 1935," "In Caliente" and "Sweet Adeline."

Fox plans to produce more Will Rogers and Janet Gaynor films, against which no criticism ever has been launched, and others like "The World Moves On," "Music in the Air," "One More Spring," "The First World War," and "Marie Galante."

On the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer list are such films as "The Merry Widow," with Franz Lehar's score retained practically intact; "Marie Antoinette," "David Copperfield," "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" and "The Good Earth."

Paramount's uncompleted program includes "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," "Back Porch," a small-town comedy; "Ruggles of Red Gap," from the Harry Leon Wilson stories, and "Cleopatra." This studio recently changed the title of a story originally called "Outrage" to "Sacrifice" as a concession to the demands of the reformers.

More Solid Drama.

United Artists has in mind Cardinal Richelieu," with George Arliss; "The Mighty Barnum", "Clive of India", "The Count of Monte Cristo", a new version of Tolstoi's "Resurrection" and "The Affairs of Cellini".

Universal is to offer "Great Expectations", another Dickens subject, "The Great Ziegfeld", a biographical subject with elaborate musical and spectacular embellishments; a new version of Edna Ferber's "Show Boat", "The Raven", based on the Edgar Allan Poe poem, and "The Mystery of Edwin Drood", from an unfinished Dickens novel.

This presents what is believed to be a representative list of the productions planned by the major studios, from which the motion picture enthusiast may gather some idea of what he will see on the screen in months to come.

The recapitulation is made here with the thought that in view of the insidious, and not wholly warranted, campaign that is being waged against it, the public is entitled to know that the motion picture industry is not as black as it has been painted.

There are two sides to every question and both are entitled to be heard.

Speaking of Fox, as we were somewhere back there, Saturday's mail brought to this desk one of the most elaborately conceived and executed announcements of Fox products for the new year that these dimming eyes ever have been privileged to gaze upon.

In the predepression days it was the custom for all of the big producing companies to distribute handsome brochures describing their stars, stories, directors, &c., for the ensuing season, but never anything like this.

The Fox announcement is described as the "Fox Showmanship Extra" and is of outsize dimensions, measuring 17 by 21½ inches. In it are to be found superlative specimens of sales talk, art, portraiture, engraving, composition and layout. If the new year's product can contrive to live up to the artistic excellence of the "Showmanship Extra," the patron of Fox pictures will have much to which to look forward.

Concerning a "Clown."

They didn't mean a thing—just a lot of clever hokum, without a blow being struck and all the thrilling effects achieved by camera angles and clever timing.

That last is wholly true. No actual blows were struck and the effects were achieved by a clever computation of camera angles and timing—but. And that "but" is the biggest one in the language; big enough to encompass the passing of the world's heavyweight championship from Carnera to Baer.

For it was in the making of the fight scenes for "The Prizefighter and the Lady" that Max Baer's conviction that he could whip Carnera and the plan of battle by which he anticipated achieving that almost homicidal end had their genesis.

"Doing Nicely, Tha-a-ank You!"

Here is the latest "snap" of Maxine Doyle, Warner Brothers contract player, in the comfortable togs in which she pedals to and from the set where she is working. Max, at the moment, is loaned by the Warners to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for the leading feminine role in L. Monta Bell's production of "Student Tour," in which she is both actress and song-and-dance artiste. Miss Derle, of course, is the ingenuous youngster who for three years was mistress of ceremonies at the Earle Theater, the post now occupied by Miss Sieber.

Straight From the Studios

Mr. Chandler Discovers a Prevalent Hollywood Racket; U. of C. Boys Have a Little Explaining to Do; Up and Down Both Sides of the Boulevard.

By Grace Kingsley.

Hollywood, June 17.—Chic Chandler, Radio's king comic, swears he has discovered the true reason behind all these Hollywood divorces.

"It's a racket," says Chic, "a racket, booted, saddled, spurred and mounted by certain and sundry proponents of legal practice."

Seems that Chic recently, and just for the fun of it, he says, arranged a week's "trial separation" from his lovely bride, Jean Fontanne. But the affair proved a huge joke, for each night Chic returned home for something he had forgotten, and neglected to depart again.

RUTH CHATTERTON.

"In spite of that," the comic declared, "I've received exactly seventeen and a half offers from various attorneys who want to get me a divorce! The half offer was a bargain—50 per cent off if I take prompt action."

Pertinent And Impertinent.

Austin Parker was air pilot, more than one year, for his majesty, the Sulton of Turkey. And he says that his highness looked like a bundle of wet washing.

Don't Know It's Acting.

What a to-do there has been at the University of California at Los Angeles, ever since that still picture appeared in the paper, showing the college boys from the university, who are working in "Student Tour," featuring Maxine Doyle, with their arms around some of the cuties also working in the picture.

The boys have had plenty of explaining to do to their co-ed friends, and it is rumored that there are at least three broken engagements as the result, the girls refusing to fall for the line that the boys were merely acting when the picture was taken. They say the boys couldn't all be as good actors as that, and besides that photograph, they say, looks too informal—as though it were taken when all the subjects were off guard.

Heard on The Boulevard.

Who's Who is turning out for the opening of Johnny Weaver's new play at the Hollywood Playhouse—"Keep It a Dream." . . . The reservation list includes Claudette Colbert and party, Doris Kenyon and party, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Selwyn, Ruth Chatterton, Mr. and Mrs. Skeets Gallagher, Marlene Dietrich and Josef von Sternberg, Sylvia Sidney and B. P. Schulberg, Norma Shearer and Irving Thalberg, Janet Gaynor, Irene Hervey, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic March, Irvin S. Cobb, Carl Laemmle, jr., and Margaret Sullavan, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lachman, Robert Montgomery and others . . . Aileen Carlyle making a big hit with her "We Visited Mexico" monologue at the Breakfast Club . . . The affair was given to entertain the Mexican Consul.

Richard Arlen and a cowboy were coming back to the Arizona hotel after working on a desert location for a couple of days. Having lived on beans during that time, they were hungry for steaks. "We'll have plenty of steak and baked potatoes and cornbread," said the cowboy. "Yes, and we'll also have caviare," said Dick, who had brought a supply with him, thinking to delight the cowpuncher. "Yes," said the cowboy, "caviare's good, too!"

Katherine DeMille has decided that there is no easy way to reduce. She just lost 15 pounds, but has accomplished the feat by diet and exercise . . . Hans Fraly mourning the death of his prize dachshund, Bautsika, which lost its life recently under the writer's car as he backed out of his garage . . . Seen dining at Otto's: Martha Sleeper and Hardie Albright, Barry Norton and Alice Terry, Mary Kornman . . . Director George Stevens thinks it might not be a bad idea for this country to put all its yeggs in one basket . . . Seen watching Will Roger's performance of "Ah, Wilderness," at the El Capitan Theater lately: Spencer Tracy and Loretta Young, Charlie Chaplin and Paulette Godard (a repeat), Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Morgan, Sylvia Sidney, and scores of others.

I know this because when Max was making a week of personal appearances at Loew's Fox Theater last January, I asked him during a long gabfest in his dressing room one afternoon—just between ourselves and not for publication—if, down in his heart, he really believed that he could smash through to a victory over so big a fellow as the "Preem."

The Plan in Advance.

This, in substance, is what he told me:

"There was no real fighting when we made that picture out on the Coast, but when you're in there with a fellow, even when you're fiddling around, you get the 'feel' of him in the ring; know how he handles himself, how he moves and what his natural ring instincts are, if any. I was in there with him long enough to be convinced that I can hit him with a right hand. If I can hit him once with a right hand, I can hit him more than once and a few rights will be enough."

"But what if he picks one up off the floor with his own right and throws it at you, the way he did with Jack Sharkey, for example?"

"He won't pick anything up off the floor and tag me with it the way he did Sharkey. Instead of stepping into that right of his the way Jack did, I'll always be going away from it. I'll circle always to Primo's left. To clock me with that right, he'll have to throw it around an awfully long arc and I may not be there when it arrives. All this time, of course, he'll be poking a left jab in my face. I'll take it. His left jab has no snap to it and is more of a shove than it is a punch with kick to it. If I find I can't take it, I'll try to get out of its way.

"Now then, this is what this will do. Primo keeps his right cocked, ready for a chance to pop me off. As I go to the left, his left jab is constantly widened. His left and right, I mean, keep getting farther and farther apart."

He stood up and illustrated. With me as Carnera—heaven help us!

"You see what that does? It opens up the whole left side of his body and lets me hook a few lefts and rights to his heart and midriff. A few of these will bring that left down and open up his jaw for my right. A few clouts with my right is all I want. If they don't bring him down, I can't lick him. But I think they'll bring him down."

If you followed the fight, either from ringside or through the loudspeaker, you know how perfectly Maxie's plan worked out.

And it all dates back to the making of "The Prizefighter and the Lady." That's where Max got the whole idea that he could take the Ambulant Alp, and how. That the association stuck in his own mind is evidenced by the fact that he wore the same bathrobe into the ring that he wore in the picture—the one with "Steve Morgan" across the back. Don't try to tell me!

Just a "Playboy."

They can call Max Baer "clown," "playboy," "the Charlie Chaplin of the ring," "the male Mae West" and all the rest of it, all they like. He may be all those things and more, but with it he is one smart hombre—knows what time it is every hour of the day and night and don't let anyone tell you different.

He whipped Carnera for me in his dressing room six months ago before they had even been matched. That was good enough.

I agree with the sagacious Messrs. Povich and McCormick of The Post sports department that he will be up there a long time—from the present outlook, as long as he wants to be—and I trust the good Messrs. Povich and McCormick will pardon this intrusion.

As for Max, he's a great guy and I like him. I hope he'll be champ for 50 years if he wants to be.

It was a shock on make-up night, when one was dining in the Italian manner at Lou Macina's dandy restaurant down the street a few blocks on E street, to glance up and see a picture of Dorothy Dell, who recently met a tragic and untimely death in an auto accident on the Coast, smiling down at one from the wall almost at eye level.

The cordial autograph to Lou brought back a fact that had entirely slipped my mind—that it was Dorothy who sang that ribald song, "Was I Drunk, Was He Handsome, Did My Mother Give Me Hell!" in the Ziegfeld "Follies of 1931."

Dorothy's adds one more name to the list of Ziegfeld beauties who have met untimely ends while at the height of their careers. Olive Thomas, Martha Mansfield and Lilyan Tashman are among the others.

Dots and Dashes.

City Manager Carter Barron of the Loew interests in Washington, accompanied by his charming wife, "Chic" and Baby Carter Tait Barron, jr., will leave the Capital a week from today for their former home in Atlanta, Ga. . . . Carter Tait, jr., has expressed a wish to look over his ancestors, never having met them as yet . . . Carter, pere, will be gone a week . . . "Chic" and Junior a few weeks longer than that . . . Joe Penner will make his first broadcast outside New York City next Sunday night at 6:30 from the auditorium of the National Press Club . . . His orchestra will be down for the event . . . Admission by ticket only . . . Now all you have to do is try and get one . . . The most remarkable contortionistic, acrobatic dancer that has come along to a local stage in months is Geraldin, in the "Hollywood Revels" revue, at the Earle this week . . . The funniest burlesque is Peggy Lee's Ian dance in the Costello-Lee act at Loew's Fox . . . Boy, how dare she stand them in this weather!

In view of the recency of the Baer-Carnera carnage, the "Screen Souvenir," at the Columbia, is particularly timely with its flashback to the Tommy Burns-Bill Squires heavyweight championship bout in 1907 . . . James J. Jeffries, a fair fisticuffer in his own right a few years back, was referee . . . Douglas Fairbanks, jr., and Madge Evans are resurrected as "child stars"—and a blight on the whole tribe—in the same issue . . . Anyhow, she knew what she wanted . . . I mean the gal who sat next us at Loew's Fox on Friday afternoon . . . After removing both sandals and tucking them in beside her on the orchestra chair, with the remark, "My feet hurt," she went sound asleep for the entire second half of "Operator 13" . . . It took the fanfare of brass preceding Prof. Lampkin's overture, to awaken her . . . By which time my right arm was a trifle tired being used as a remote but important part of a daybed . . . But at that she didn't snore . . . Today is the first luncheon of the newly formed Variety Club, of which John J. Payette is Chief Barker . . . I should have thought of it sooner and saved up some appetite . . . The Playbox Theater opens its season tonight with "The Queen's Cradle" . . . The Roadside Theater tomorrow night, with "The Octoroon" . . . And Mr. Meakin, running true to form, announces that "The Life of Vergie Winters," costarring Ann Harding and John Boles, will open on Wednesday, at RKO-Keith's, instead of Friday, as originally announced . . . What did I tell you?

Unanimity Note.

My thanks to Managing Director George V. Riley for a season courtesy card to the Wardman Park pool. Several of us, since the weather has turned hot, have been thinking of pooling our interests, now and again.

And I am not the only one that thinks Jantzen swim suits are best. Ignatz, our pet moth, I find, liked mine so well that he has eaten practically all of it but the holes!

Virginia Auto Drivers Getting New Licenses

Richmond, June 18 (AP).—New drivers' permits are moving out of the office of the division of motor vehicles into the hands of Virginia automobile drivers at the rate of 10,000 daily.

The drivers must have their new permits by July 1, or they will be law violators every time they drive their automobile.

New Plane Carrier Departs for Tests

Norfolk, June 18 (Spl.).—On her first sea voyage with an all-Navy crew on board, the new airplane carrier Ranger steamed out to sea this afternoon.

She was not expected to resort to high speed until she got out in the Atlantic. The Ranger will have and may go as far as Rockland, Me., shake-down trials along the coast. She is scheduled to return to Hampton Roads Saturday and proceed to the Navy Yard for minor adjustments. She will join the fleet in Hampton Roads next month.

(Reprinted from Yesterday's Last Edition.)

Five dramatic sketches were presented last evening at the National Theater when the students of the Clifford Brooke Academy of Stage Training in the Dramatic Arts offered their annual spring recital.

Following the final curtain, Maurice Greet, director of the academy and its program, thanked the audience and introduced Freddie Sherman, juvenile of the National Theater Players, who distributed diplomas to the eight students rounding out their academy terms at this time.

Included in last evening's repertoire were the second act of Roi Cooper Megrue and Walter Hackett's farce, 'it Pays to Advertise," "An Uneventful Evening" and "Welcome, Aunt Beulah!" arranged from one-act plays, whose authorships are lost in antiquity, by Mrs. Greet and Mildred Coleman, the last act of W. C. Wills' "Charles the First," made famous by Sir Henry Irving and Dame Ellen Terry, and the famed banquet scene from Shakespeare's "The Taming of the Shrew."

Strange as it may seem, the outstanding performance of the evening was not histrionic, but was the short but effective choreographic display of Marian Wolberg in the selection from the works of the Bard of Avon. However, histrionic achievement was not entirely lacking, Marie Wolcott scoring as the man-hating woman who ultimately succumbed; George Calvert making Charles I a believable character; Margaret Martin, as Queen Henrietta Maria, and Forester Sicard, as Cromwell, adding to the effectiveness of the Wills' work; Nancy Ordway, burlesquing "Aunt Beulah of Seattle;" and Eugene Stevens and Kathleen Gall doing effectively the pivotal roles in the Shakespearean selection.

Among the others participating, besides the graduates, were Robert Hinkle, Dorris Skinner, Henry Haviland, Elsie Behrend, Harry Whiting, Zelie Rupsinaa, Jeanne Blum, Jerrye Embrey, Ida Espinosa, Carol Jaspersen, Elaine Kronheim, Dorothy Sutton, Edith Hough, George Calvert, Virginia Dyer, Edythe Chriss, Grace Harmon, Adele Bashor, Lenore Groesbeck and Estelle Gerber.

Gov. Kump's Daughter Is Made a Life Saver

Jacksons Mill, W. Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Miss Mary Gamble Kump, youngest daughter of Gov. and Mrs. H. G. Kump, was made a Red Cross life saver yesterday at exercises held at the State Four-H camp here.

In addition to receiving her certificate and bathing suit emblem as such, she was also appointed as a Four-H Club swimming pool leader. Miss Kump is the fourth daughter of Gov. and Mrs. Kump to qualify as a competent life saver.

Miss Rosamond Allen Hurt in Car Mishap

Winchester, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Miss Rosamond Allen, of Morgantown, W. Va., daughter of former Representative R. E. L. Allen, of that city, was painfully injured near Winchester today when her machine skidded on the slippery highway and went into a ditch.

20 Score Record At Lively School

Lively, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—One of the best attendance records in recent years was reported from Lively High School, where 20 students had a perfect record of attendance during the past school year.

Miss Ida Giese was awarded the Belfour Scholarship Loyalty and Achievement Medal, annually awarded to the pupil who best meets the requirements of scholarship and service to school.

The 20 perfect attendance students announced by R. E. Brann, school principal, include Suel Wilmer, Virginia Bush, Warren Marsh, Ruby Haynie, Preston Bartlett, Mary Nancy Marsh, Melva Taft, Emily Pittman, E. W. Haynie, jr., Lorena Dobyns, Fannie Lee Haynie, Frances Thrift, Lester Gray Sampson, Adelina Haynie, Leah Marsh, Gene Chowning, Graham Marsh, Ida Giese, Virginia Johnson and Grace Beane.

Norfolk Police Head Opens War on "Slots"

Norfolk, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Every slot machine in Norfolk, except those used strictly for vending purposes, must go, says Col. Charles P. Borland, director of public safety and police chief, on the heels of a new ruling by Attorney General A. P. Staples, jr., which places gambling devices definitely outside the legal fence.

Col. Borland said today he was waiting only for a conference with Commonwealth's Attorney John M. Arnold before issuing orders to police to seize all outlawed slot machines.

Republican Meeting Planned at Abingdon

Abingdon, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—John M. Arnold, of Abingdon, chairman of the Republican executive committee of Washington County, today issued a call for mass meeting of his constituents, to be held at the county courthouse here Saturday.

The purpose of the meeting, he stated, will be to elect delegates to the Ninth District Congressional convention to be held in Bristol Saturday, June 30; reorganize the county organization, and transact other business.

Republicans to Meet.

Marion, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Smyth County Republicans will hold a mass meeting at the courthouse Saturday morning to elect delegates to the district convention in Bristol on June 30, and to elect a county chairman and secretary and members of the county committee.

Slinging of Mud By Chimpanzees In Zoo Stopped

Baltimore, June 18 (Spl.).—Mud slinging may be the privilege of politicians, but Charlie and Susie Chimpanzee, who inhabit a cage in the Druid Hill Park Zoo, have been barred from the sport.

Tomorrow they will be moved from their steam-heated quarters in the elephant house to their own nearby cottage. But when they set up summer housekeeping, they will find that their practice of throwing sand and mud at spectators has been stopped.

A concrete pavement between the bars of their cage and their house will make it impossible for them to scoop up handsful of earth to throw at spectators.

The chimps have made it pretty tough on their visitors by their custom of pelting them with stones, gravel and sand and, in wet weather, with mud. Superintendent Jones found it did no good to scold the Simians, so he decided the concrete plaza in their cage was the next best thing.

Miller to Address Lancaster Forum

Kilmarnock, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—The Lancaster Forum will be held in the Kilmarnock Opera House at 8 p. m., Wednesday.

Dr. Francis P. Miller, chairman of the World Christian Student Federation and a lecturer at Yale University, will make the principal address. He will speak on "The Challenge of Contemporary Civilization to the Christian Community."

Dr. Miller's career includes service overseas in the A. E. F. during the World War and a course at Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar. From 1923 to 1926 he was assistant National executive secretary of the American Y. M. C. A. student department, and from 1927 to 1929 he was in Geneva, Switzerland, as administrative secretary of the World's Student Christian Federation. His home is at Fairfax, Va.

Hanover Administration Has 7 Relief Projects

Hanover, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Relief workers are now engaged on seven projects under the Hanover Emergency Relief Administration. As only relief workers are employed, payments are made in groceries and commodities to fulfill individual relief requirements.

Projects are being developed at Doswell, Beaverdam, Montpelier, Ashland, Atlee, Hewlett, and a sewer group at Montpelier.

Highway Funds To Be Watched

Virginia Committee Will Guard Interests of Cities and Towns.

Newport News, June 18 (AP).—A Virginia league of municipalities committee will serve as a watchdog over new Federal highway funds coming to Virginia, to see that the cities and towns get their share.

R. W. West, mayor of Newport News, and president of the league, has appointed a committee of 11 for this job.

League statistics indicate that nearly 100 cities and towns in the State had not received any portion of a $7,400,000 Federal allocation of last year.

Morton L. Wallerstein, executive secretary of the league, was named chairman of the committee, and with him were named E. M. Stull, Covington; George A. Cottrell, Staunton; Ashton Dovell, Williamsburg; C. M. Anderson, Winchester; J. L. Bland, West Point; C. O'Conor Goolrick, Fredericksburg; R. W. B. Hart, Lynchburg; W. B. Taylor 3d, Norfolk; J. Fulmer Bright, Richmond, and J. C. Biggins, Newport News.

Driver's Body Appears At Car Plunge Scene

Norfolk, June 18 (Spl.).—The dramatic appearance of the body of Delmar Hofmann, 31, of Portsmouth, interrupted yesterday the work of raising a small coupe which Saturday night plunged from Virginia Beach boulevard through a guard rail into Broad Creek, and solved the mystery of the disappearance of the driver of the car.

Roscoe Rowe, of Portsmouth, who was thought to have been in the car, reported yesterday that he had left Hofmann late in the afternoon. Hofmann's body floated up just as a wrecking crew was working to raise the automobile.

Secretary Swanson's Cousin Dies in South

Danville, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Word was received here today of the death in Nashville, Tenn., of John Edward Swanson, 64, cousin of Secretary of Navy Swanson, last night after two weeks' illness.

FILE Your Papers the Modern Way
FILE with Acco Binder Folders and insure filing safety. Make every file a neat, compact, book-like record—a history of all of your business transactions. Almost foolproof against misfiling and loss, Acco Folders are even more necessary than the filing cabinet itself.
Made of durable pressboard to fit all standard sizes of correspondence and record sheets.
Every Folder contains the Acco Fastener—a broad-based, two-pronged lock compressor device that binds papers neatly, tightly and compactly. When ready for transfer, a completely indexed Fastener-bound file can be slipped from the slideway of the Folder and stored away intact—insert a new Acco Fastener in slideway and Folder is again ready for use. It will last as long as the filing cabinet.
Don't risk serious loss from loose, unbound files. File the Acco Way—with Folder and Fastener—and be safe. Ask us to show you how.

G. O. P. Moves To Organize Young Voters

J. D. M. Hamilton, Kansas, Named to Head Drive Throughout U. S.

Organization of young Republicans throughout the country has been placed in the hands of John D. M. Hamilton, of Kansas, youngest member of the Republican National committee.

His appointment as chairman of the Republican National committee's subcommittee on young Republicans was announced yesterday by Henry P. Fletcher, new National chairman. Other members named on the subcommittee were Harrison E. Spangler, Iowa National committeeman, and Mrs. Grace Semple Burlingham, Missouri committeewoman.

This committee was set up in response to suggestions at the recent Chicago meeting of the Republican National committee, in which it was emphasized that special efforts should be made to enlist younger voters in the Republican party. Former President Hoover, in a telegram to the committee, was among those urging that this be done. On motion of Hamilton, the committee voted to set up such a youth organization.

Hamilton was confirmed for membership on the National committee at the Chicago meeting, having been nominated to succeed the late David Mulvane, a wheelhorse in the Republican organization for a generation. The new youth leader is a wiry, red-headed Legionnaire, a Topeka law partner of Ralph O'Neil, former Legion commander.

Though he had been a member of the National committee only 24 hours when the ballot was taken for a new chairman at Chicago recently, he received 25 votes against 67 for Fletcher, as the result of a campaign among younger Republicans and Westerners who wished to take the chairmanship out into the farm belt.

Cardozo Gives 80 Diplomas

Student Speakers Give Trade Education Symposium.

The twelfth annual commencement exercises of Cardozo Business High School were held last night in the school auditorium. Dr. J. Hayden Johnson, member of the Board of Education, presided and awarded diplomas to 64 graduates and 16 postgraduates.

A symposium on business education by student speakers was introduced by Nancy Roberts, class president. Ernestine Greene, salutatorian, spoke on "Depletion." "Hidden Reserves" were discussed by Romay Lucas; "A Challenge," Thomas Yeldell, and "A New Development," Cordelia Key, valedictorian.

Honors were awarded by G. C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent, to 12 student members of the Cardozo Chapter of the National Honor Society of Secondary Schools. They were Grace Beckwith, Bernice Brown, Pearl Faulkner, Ernestine Greene, Cordelia Key, Romay Lucas, Nancy McKenzie, Elease Newman, Carrie Nokes, Nancy Roberts, Ernestine Swann and Thomas Yeldell.

Adventists Hit Liquor Traffic

Conference Urges Schools to Fight Alcohol "Menace."

Conditions since the repeal of the eighteenth amendment were criticized in a resolution passed yesterday at the annual conference and camp meeting of the Potomac conference of Seventh Day Adventists in Takoma Park.

Indicating statistics disclosed "bootlegging on the increase," a vast "increase in traffic deaths and accidents" and "shocking immorality," the conference, through its resolution, called upon members of the various church groups to renew activities to educate people against the "liquor traffic."

School authorities of the District, Maryland and Virginia were urged to teach their pupils "the dangers of the habit-forming menace of alcohol."

The conference further resolved to petition Congress and the Legislatures of the States to campaign against liquor, and be particularly active in stamping out the sale of liquor-filled candies to school children.

(United Press.)

In the vaults of the Treasury lie stacks of yellowing papers which American taxpayers bought over the past few decades at a cost of more than $16,000,000,000, or $128 for each man, woman and child in the country.

Cash obtained from taxes or borrowed from the public was used by the Government to purchase the $16,000,000,000 worth of stocks, bonds and notes. Most of the securities now are in default in interest or principal, or not paying regular dividends.

Included in the amount are $11,000,000,000 in war debt obligations for which the United States holds neatly engraved certificates from foreign powers. Finland, with a debt of $8,484,000, is the only one that has kept up its payments.

Other Holdings.

The Government's next largest security holdings are $500,000,000 capital stock and $2,875,000,000 notes of its Reconstruction Finance Corporation, from which it is expected the return will be far better than from the war debts.

Other securities held include smaller amounts in capital stock of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Home Owners Loan Corporation, War Finance Corporation and the Panama Railroad Co. A large assortment of miscellaneous railroad, Federal Land Banks and Intermediate Credit Bank securities also were held.

Although the securities owned by the Government cost the taxpayers more than $16,000,000,000, or about half the present value of every share of stock on the New York Stock Exchange, they are returning to the Government this fiscal year less than $100,000,000 in both principal and interest, a paltry one-half of 1 per cent. The return next year may be even smaller, unless business improves greatly and some new war debt settlement is made.

Pays Heavily.

Compared with this return on its investments, the Government now is paying around $800,000,000 interest annually on its public debt of more than $26,000,000,000, a large part of which was contracted in order that the Government could make its huge security "investments."

If the Government could realize the entire cost of its security holdings, the public debt could be reduced to about $10,000,000,000. A substantial portion of the security "investments" admittedly is lost, but the Government still optimistically carries the holdings on its books at face value.

During the war at least, many thought the huge war loans to the allies necessary and justifiable even though this country might not get a cash return. Similarly, the advances to the RFC and other emergency agencies were made to battle the depression and the results should eventually justify the cost, officials feel.

Women Voters To Meet Here

Tax, Civil Service Reform Will Be Discussed at Sessions.

A two-year tax and civil service reform will be sought by the National League of Women Voters during the leagues' board of directors meeting here next Monday, it was announced yesterday.

Mrs. Elwood Street, wife of the District's new Department of Public Welfare head, will be in charge of the board's finance department when the league augments its administrative quarters in Jackson place with the transfer from New York of the International cooperation and finance departments.

The meeting will be the first here of the recently elected board under the leadership of Miss Marguerite M. Wells, of Minneapolis. Five-day sessions will be held at Fairmont School, 1711 Massachusetts avenue.

A new National finance committee announced yesterday by Mrs. Street will include Miss Belle Sherwin, former National president; Miss Katherine Ludington, Old Lyme, Conn.; Miss M. Louise Griffith, New York City; Mrs. Frank P. Hixon, Chicago; Miss Florence Harrison, New London, Conn., and Mrs. Elsie A. Zinsmeister, Louisville. Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, of Washington, a member of the board, also will attend the meeting.

Parking Lot Plan Divulged in Suit

Trustee of Walsh Estate Asks Court to Act.

Plans to demolish three buildings between 1319 and 1321 G street northwest and lease the vacant property as an automobile parking lot were divulged in the District Supreme Court yesterday.

The property, owned by the Carrie B. Walsh estate, now is vacant. It is incurring a deficit of $3,000 a year while it can be leased for parking lots for five years at an annual rental of $8,000, the American Securtiy & Trust Co., trustee under the Walsh, will, declared.

Because the property is controlled by the estate, the trust company filed suit against the beneficiaries to compel them to assent. Those named as defendants were Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, and her three children, John R., Edward B., Jr., and Evalyn B. McLean, all of whom are minors.

Jury Picked to Try Boy, 14, for Death

Chicago, June 18 (AP).—The cast in the criminal court problem drama revolving about 14-year-old George Rogalski was completed today with the selection of 12 men to hear the youth's trial on charges of kidnaping a toddling child who was found dead.

Assistant State's Attorney Richard Regan recounted the events leading to the death of Dorette Zietlow, 30-month-old girl, in a dilapidated building. It caused the school board to move for segregation of subnormal children.

Regan told a jury, qualified to send the "problem child" to prison for life, that young Rogalski had lured his victim from her home last winter with the promise of a nickel.

Social Hygiene Group Plans Lecture Series

The Social Hygiene Society, through its health education service, has scheduled a series of lectures for employes and clients of the Department of Public Welfare. Talks already have been given to hundreds of men and boys seeking temporary aid at the lodges of the Transient Relief Bureau, and to the colored foster mothers caring for colored wards of the Welfare Department.

Probers Find Missing U. S. Bride's Clothes

Bridegroom's Girl Friend in Vienna Wearing One of Dresses.

Vienna, June 18 (AP).—Vienna police today turned Capt. Ivan Poderjay's story of his relationships with Agnes Tufverson, missing American lawyer, topsy turvy and announced at the conclusion of a day of fast-moving investigation that they believe the woman is dead.

The outstanding developments of the day's inquiries into the affairs of the dashing young man were:

1. Discovery of a trunk and other property of Miss Tufverson in his apartment.

2. Abandonment by Poderjay of his story that his marriage to Miss Tufverson, in New York last December was bigamous.

3. Detention of Susanne Ferran, the woman with whom he lived here, and a statement by her that Poderjay had said Miss Tufverson gave him the trunk and its contents as a parting gift before she left on a world cruise.

Just Good Friends.

Police said that although they believe the missing American woman is dead, they can not hold Poderjay indefinitely unless assured that he is wanted in some other country on a definite criminal charge.

Their eyes were turned toward the United States, whose authorities first asked an investigation in connection with the disappearance of the New York and Detroit woman, and toward Jugoslavia, where Poderjay claims to have been a captain, either in the army or the gendarmerie.

The finding of the trunk threw the first definite light on the case.

Miss Ferran protested her loyalty to Poder Jay and said that he told her he never married Miss Tufverson at all, but was only a "good friend," good enough for her to give him her trunk and its contents, which included the red dress Miss Ferran was wearing when Poderjay was arrested.

Says She Wanted Marriage.

Poderjay, faced with these developments, changed his story about the marriage.

He said his marriage to Miss Ferran, in London, was not "registered" and therefore was "illegal." Previously he had insisted he married Miss Tufverson, although already wed to Miss Ferran, to save her from spinsterhood, at her own request.

A brief-case containing two books, one on the art of love and one on birth control, was among the objects found in Poderjay's apartment. Both books had Miss Tufverson's name on the fly leaves.

Miss Ferran, police said, will be subjected to a thorough examination to determine whether she knows anything about what happened to Miss Tufverson.

He's Not Guilty, Says Captain's Former Wife

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, June 18 (AP).—A Belgrade woman, Mme. Zhivka, today produced documents to show that she was married to Capt. Ivan Poderjay October 13, 1926, and was granted a divorce November 16, 1933, about a month before his marriage to the missing Agnes Tufverson.

Mme. Zhivka, a tall, slender blonde, recalled the romantic captain, now in jail in Vienna, with undisguised affection. She was eager for news of him and blamed his trouble on the woman with whom he was living in Vienna, Susanne Ferran.

"After our wedding ceremony, which was attended by highly connected relatives," she said, "Capt. Poderjay said, 'Am I dreaming or are you really my wife?'"

She said that $10,000 disappeared from her safe deposit box about the time Poderjay left Yugoslavia and that later her furniture was seized and sold for debt.

Her former husband, Mme. Zhivka declared, is incapable of serious crime and she was unable to understand his contradictory statements to Vienna police.

She described Poderjay as avaricious and unreliable, but very charming with women.

She said that she learned less than six months after her marriage that Poderjay was preparing to marry in Copenhagen and that she forwarded her marriage certificate to his fiancee, who said, "I don't care; I want him."

Committee to Discuss D. C. Reorganization

Reorganization of the District government will be discussed this week at a conference between People's Counsel William A. Roberts and a special sub-committee of the Senate District Committee, which will make a study of his recommendations.

Roberts, who has been studying the question for a year, has prepared a number of suggestions. Hearings on the proposals are expected to begin next November.

Firemen Hold Memorial Rite At Cambridge

Five Members Honored; State Meeting Opens Tomorrow.

Cambridge, Md., June 18 (Spl.).—Cambridge firemen opened their convention program yesterday morning by worshiping at Christ Protestant Episcopal Church, where the sermon was preached by the Rev. Dr. William D. Gould, rector of the church. The service was in the form of a memorial for five members who died during the past year.

They are Dr. E. E. Wolff, assistant chief of staff of the Cambridge-Maryland Hospital; former Postmaster G. Walter Wright, A. Shepherd Bayly, trustee of the Maryland State Firemen's Association; J. Odie Thomas and Charles E. Meekins. Wednesday night there will be a general memorial service in the Cambridge Armory, conducted by the Rev. James W. Minter, of Baltimore, chaplain of the State association.

The convention spirit is abroad in the town and tonight a large carnival was placed in operation on the ground adjoining the Cambridge Seminary, to be continued for a week. Business houses and residences are decorated and a large amplifying system will carry the news of the convention to different parts of Cambridge.

Court of Honor Completed.

The court of honor, which occupies the main business section of the city, is about completed, with multicolored lights. Street dances will be held the first two nights. The final night there will be a concert by Rescue Fire Company's Band, closing with a firemen's ball in the armory.

The big parade, which will be one of the features of the convention, will start Friday at 2 p. m. In it will be practically everyone of the 155 companies in the State of Maryland, accompanied by large delegations of firemen from Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia and the District of Columbia. Many of them are sending ladies' auxiliaries who will march in costume. The firemen will be in uniform and will have on display the latest models of fire fighting apparatus. In one division of the parade there will be about 50 riders on horseback. Following the parade the Drum and Bugle Corps of Dorchester Post, No. 91, American Legion, in competition with other outfits in the State, will participate in exhibition drills. There will also be band concerts. Several hundred dollars will be offered in prizes in different classes.

Jackson to Attend.

Mayor Howard W. Jackson will accompany the 500 Baltimore firemen who are coming here on a special steamer. Gov. Ritchie has been invited, and an invitation has also been extended George L. Radcliffe, who has a summer home near Cambridge.

The principal speakers will be Sherwood Brockwell, State fire marshal of North Carolina, and A. N. Johnson, dean of the engineering school of the University of Maryland.

The convention will open with an executive committee meeting at 1 p. m. in the armory tomorrow, and continue until Friday night.

Depositions Taken In Auto Death Suit

Husband of Dead Woman Asks $50,000.

Westminster, Md., June 18 (Spl.). Depositions of six witnesses who testified at a coroner's inquest held here following the death of Mrs. John Haag in an automobile accident near here on October 7, 1933, have been sent to Monroe, Mich., where a damage suit resulting from the fatal accident will be tried Wednesday.

The suit, instituted by John Haag, husband of the deceased, seeks $50,000 damage from the Great Eastern Stages, Inc.

Mrs. Haag, it is claimed, was on the way to her home in Michigan and was riding in a machine, operated for Great Eastern Stages. She died from injuries sustained when the car overturned. At the inquest the driver of the machine was absolved from blame.

High Winds, Rains Hit Bay Shipping

Baltimore, June 18 (Spl.).—High winds and rain on the Chesapeake Bay today delayed three ships headed for Baltimore Harbor, held another vessel at her dock at Norfolk and caused smaller bay craft to seek shelter.

At Cape Henry, Va., the Maritime Bureau reported, the winds reached gale force. Storm warnings were posted up and down the bay.

Fifty Men Arrested In Lynchburg Raids

Lynchburg, Va., June 18 (AP). More than 50 men charged with being operators of slot machines, baseball pools or lotteries, have been summoned to appear in municipal court next Monday, after a series of raids over the week-end.

It is estimated that by the time the case comes to trial there will be at least 100 defendants. Undercover agents obtained the evidence.

H. W. Riggin, Merchant, Is Buried at Crisfield

Crisfield, Md., June 18 (Spl.). Funeral services for Harry W. Riggin, 50, a prominent merchant of this city, who died Friday night from heart disease, were held at his home here this morning, conducted by the Rev. John J. Bunting, pastor of Immanuel Methodist Episcopal Church. Interment was in Asbury Cemetery.

May Head Firemen

WILLIAM J. DOWNING, Jr., president of the Wicomico Volunteer Firemen's Association, and past chief of the Salisbury Fire Department, is a candidate for the presidency of the Maryland State Firemen's Association, which will hold a three-day convention at Cambridge beginning Wednesday.

Two Victims Of Auto to Be Buried Today

Driver Posts $2,000 Bail in King's Highway Mishap.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Funeral arrangements have been made for two men who were killed on the King's highway Saturday night by a car driven by Daniel J. Henderson. Lee Howard, John Howard, William Fines and John DeShazo are said to have been sitting in the front seat of the death machine.

George O. Limerick, 52, Stafford County dairy farmer, will be buried tomorrow at 3 p. m. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Mollie Limerick; two brothers, William Limerick, of Stafford, and John Limerick, of Fredericksburg, and two sisters, Mrs. George E. Grimes, of Spotsylvania Courthouse, and Miss Lucille Limerick, of this city.

Maurice Vent will be buried following services at 11 a. m., conducted by the Rev. P. H. Clements at the Falmouth Baptist Church. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Cora Bradshaw, and seven children.

John Chilton escaped with leg injuries. He was walking with the two men when they were struck by the Henderson car.

Henderson was released today under $2,000 bail, while his four companions were released under $200 each. Henderson and DeShazo received treatment at a hospital. After striking the three men with terrific force, the automobile hurtled off the road and uprooted three fence posts.

Judge Attacks Administration

E. S. Matthias, of Ohio, Also Raps NRA at Veterans' Meeting.

Clarksburg, W. Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Judge Edward S. Matthias, of Columbus, Ohio, judge of the Ohio State Supreme Court, and past National commander of the United States Spanish War Veterans, flayed the Roosevelt Administration and praised United States Senator H. D. Hatfield in addressing the eleventh annual State convention of the veterans here today.

Judge Matthias, who for years has been either chairman or vice chairman of the organization's National legislative committee, denounced the NRA as "the worst misnomer ever perpetrated in Washington," and with regard to Roosevelt, declared: "I don't like any man who, by his propaganda, plants poison ivy in the hearts of the American people against the service men of this country."

Senator Hatfield was praised as "a friend of the ex-service men through thick and thin," and his reelection was urged.

Denouncing the National economy act of 1933 as it affected Spanish-American War veterans, Judge Matthias said two more things must be done regarding the new bill recently passed—to give protection to 12,000 who signed for service in the Philippines after August 12, 1898, and to pass equal legislation for widows of Spanish-American War veterans with those of Civil War veterans.

Committees were named at today's sessions, and State and National flags were presented to the department by Boy Scouts. A parade this evening was followed by a dance.

Ram Show Scheduled.

Crisfield, Md., June 18 (Spl.). The fourth annual purebred ram show and sale will be held at Pocomoke City, in Worcester County, on Saturday, July 7, according to announcement by County Agent C. Z. Keller.

Va. Dark-Fired Tobacco Group Raising Profits

Cooperative Has Cut Selling Costs, Brought Increased Prices.

Richmond, June 18 (Spl.).—Although not yet two years old, the Virginia Dark Fired Tobacco Growers Marketing Association, Inc., has a record of accomplishment of which an organization several years older might well be proud.

This association, incorporated July 5, 1932, has already marketed efficiently and effectively two crops of tobacco for its members in a more satisfactory manner than the growers had had their crops marketed prior to the establishment of their cooperative. The association also has been active in the growers' interest in many other ways.

The first accomplishment of the association was the operation of warehouses on five of the most important markets. The association has acted as the representatives of the various members in the sale of their tobacco and has provided experienced people to handle the selling.

Grading Plan Started.

The second accomplishment of the association was the inauguration of the grading of each pile of tobacco delivered by each member by an official Federal-State tobacco grader before the tobacco is offered for sale.

The association then puts on the ticket covering each pile of tobacco, in a code understood only by the salesmanager, the price at which that grade of tobacco sold the previous day. When the various piles of tobacco come up for sale the manager can tell at once approximately what the tobacco should bring, depending upon its quality. The association frequently buys in piles of tobacco. Generally these are sold later for their real value.

To safeguard the entire membership on the tobacco bid in, the association adopted the policy at the opening of its first season in the fall of 1932 of paying the growers only 75 per cent of the sales value of their tobacco the day of the sale. This first payment was increased to 90 per cent in January, 1933, and the first payment was 95 per cent during the 1933-1934 season.

Selling Expense Less.

The average cost of marketing tobacco was less for members of the association than the average cost for other growers. During the first season the association sold 6,160,052 pounds of tobacco for an average price of $8.15 per 100 weight.

Another accomplishment of the association in the interest of growers of dark fired tobacco was the passage by the special session of the Legislature in 1933 of the compulsory grading law requiring that all dark fired tobacco must be officially graded by Federal-State graders before being offered for sale on a warehouse floor in Virginia.

Ever since the passage of the AAA, officials of the Dark Fired Association have been doing everything in their power to make the provisions of that law effective in helping dark fired growers to obtain parity prices for their tobacco.

Sought Price Parity.

The association officers have been the only representatives of Virginia dark-fired growers pressing their cause with the Secretary of Agriculture and the tobacco section of the AAA. Before the markets opened in the fall of 1933, strenuous efforts were made by the association officers to have the AAA secure an agreement with the buyers to pay parity prices for dark-fired tobacco. Such an agreement had not been worked out before the markets opened on December 6, 1933. As a result, prices received by the growers were so low that they protested and stopped the sales.

The association officers at Washington represented the growers in the working out of the market agreement between the Secretary of Agriculture and the buyers to assure higher prices to the growers.

In spite of the interrupted season for marketing the 1933 crop the Dark Fired Association handled the sale of 10,327,236 pounds for its members at an average of $6.888 per hundredweight. The average handling cost was 55.7 cents per hundred pounds.

Concealment of Assets Charged Against Three

Danville, June 18 (Spl.).—Samuel Friedman, Louis Silverman and Leo Carwich are under $2,500 bond each here today following their indictment in Lynchburg Federal Court on charges alleging bankruptcy irregularities.

They are alleged to have concealed certain stocks of merchandise owned by a firm, known as "Cheap John," from the trustees appointed to wind up the affairs of the company. The hearing will come up here in September.

Heavy Rains Cool Danville. . .

Danville, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Temperatures which during the week-end soared to 95 degrees were sharply reduced today when heavy rains fell through the Piedmont section. Land was badly washed in some places by the violent downpour.

Church Parley Brands Movies And Bad Books

Md. Methodists Point With Pride at Record of Bishop Cannon.

Westminster, Md., June 18 (Spl.). "Bad moving pictures, obscene literature, unscrupulous newspapers, Nation-wide gambling, graft and chiseling in high places, the liquor traffic and Sabbath desecration," were denounced as enemies of God and society in a report of the committee on moral and social service, read today at the closing session of the Maryland annual conference of the Methodist Protestant Church by the Rev. J. H. Lynch, of Lynchburg, Va. The report in part follows:

"Evangelization and religious education are urged to combat this trouble, much of which is due, we believe, to religious ignorance.

Movies Are Criticised.

"We shall continue to list moving pictures among modern evils as long as they continue to exalt the gangster and glorify the woman with a questionable past.

"We know well the power of the press. As a news medium it has a big place in our life, and for all the good it has done we commend it, but when it stoops to become a propaganda sheet for the gangster, the gambler and the whisky crowd, it then must expect to be frowned upon by this body as enemy of society."

Whisky—"The condition today is worse than the saloon ever was. We point with pride to the service rendered by Bishop Cannon, jr. We thank God for his exoneration in the courts and commend the M. E. Church South, for continuing to honor him as a bishop."

Sabbath desecration—"The first day of the week is fast fading from a holy day to a holiday. We wish to go on record as condemning the abuse of this day. We believe in religious and political freedom. We rebuke Germany for her attitude toward the Jew.

"We join hands with all agencies engaged in promoting world peace by saying that our pulpits shall never again be turned into platforms from which we will incite men to fight, other than in defense of sacred National rights."

Items Cause Debate.

Two items of the report caused heated debate in the meeting, namely: The recommendation that any member of the church engaging in the sale of liquor could not be appointed to an official position and the reference concerning the press.

An election of members to the Board of Deaconesses resulted in the following appointments:

Laymen—J. W. Armstrong, Baltimore; A. W. Beaver, Baltimore; William Gilligan, Baltimore; W. F. Spengenberg, Baltimore. Ministerial—The Rev. J. L. Ward, Baltimore; Mrs. W. P. Chew, Baltimore, and Mrs. W. C. Shriver, Baltimore.

Elected to the board of managers of the M. P. Home for the Aged at Westminster were:

Ministerial—The Rev. S. F. Cassen, Towson, Md. and the Rev. J. N. Link, Baltimore.

Laymen—T. A. Murray and O. C. Richardson, Baltimore.

Church Extension Society — President, the Rev. J. L. Ward, Baltimore; first vice president, the Rev. E. Brown, Washington; second vice president, the Rev. H. L. Nichols, Milford, Del.; treasurer, the Rev. P. W. Crosby, Baltimore; secretary, the Rev. J. W. Townsend, Alexandria.

Reelected to board of managers: Ministers—L. B. Smith, Baltimore; E. D. Stone, Baltimore; P. W. Crosby, Baltimore; R. W. Nicholson, Washington. Laymen—R. C. Staley, Baltimore; W. C. Scott, Baltimore; D. C. MacLea, Baltimore, and Henry Gilligan, Baltimore.

Act On President's Report.

Action taken by the committee on the president's report included the adoption of the recommendations that appointment of not less than ten delegates to the Sesquicentennial of Methodism, to be held in Baltimore in October.

At an independent meeting this afternoon the following officers of the ministers' wives' conference were elected:

President, Mrs. F. G. Holloway, Westminster; vice president, Western Shore, Mrs. E. A. Sexsmith, Baltimore; vice president, Eastern Shore, Mrs. T. C. Mulligan, Cambridge; secretary, Mrs. Earl Cummings, Westminster; treasurer, Mrs. Carroll Burkins, Clarksville.

Drive Opened By Radcliffe

Democrat Makes First Campaign Speech at Elkton.

Baltimore, June 18 (Spl.).—George L. Radcliffe opened his campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor of Maryland tonight with a speech at Elkton.

Earlier today he sent to Annapolis the formal certificate of his candidacy. A messenger took the papers and also took the $270 fee required by the State charter of all gubernatorial candidates.

It was reported unofficially here today that a publicity expert well known to President Roosevelt may be engaged to direct Mr. Radcliffe's publicity campaign. Mr. Radcliffe is a personal friend of the President.

With the filing of his certificate of candidacy, Mr. Radcliffe prepared for a strenuous three months' campaign throughout the State. He has received many invitations to speak.

He expects to appear in every county in the State during the next 30 days. His campaign advisers, headed by United States Senator Millard E. Tydings, already are mapping his route.

NRA Advisers See Business As Altruistic

Industry Pledged to Act for Social Welfare; Plan Committee.

Hot Springs, Va., June 18 (AP).—American business was pledged by a substantial group of its leaders today to conduct itself by a set of principles designed to bring social as well as economic well being.

This pledge, contained in a statement prepared by some 30 executives constituting the past and present business advisers to NRA, was the final effort of their three-day meeting here.

The executives condemned child labor and warned against the encouragement of the machine.

The statement said "we believe the American people are willing to give American industry an opportunity to govern itself, provided, however, that such regulation must always be administered in the public interest. We believe that American industry should accept this opportunity." As a groundwork along this line the executives have prepared a program to establish a permanent board of business men in Washington to advise in the conduct of NRA and to give business an effective influence.

The executives laid down these principles:

"In accepting this opportunity we believe industry must recognize that the people will permit a system of codes to govern industry which, among other things, will fix maximum hours and minimum wages; prohibit child labor, enable the American people to buy in competitive markets; make for progress in industry and provide a way of ameliorating the hardships to individuals resulting from the introduction of labor saving machinery and consequent unemployment."

Of special significance was the proviso to "enable the American people to buy in competitive markets, indicating the opinion that price control must be so handled as to permit a freer moving price level. This was, in a sense, a statement against price fixing.

Luray Beauty Test Is Set for Tuesday

Luray, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—American Legion entrants for the Beauty Pageant to be staged here Tuesday night were announced here today.

They will represent various business organizations. The winner, "Miss Luray 1934," will receive a silver loving cup and have a free trip to Lynchburg to compete for the honor of "Miss Virginia." The cup will be awarded by Judge John H. Booton, of Luray. Out-of-town judges will make the selection.

Entrants are Misses Anna Bailey, Anne Berrey, Evelyn Hudson, Gertrude Brumback, Jessie Ann Roudabush, Alice Long Printz, Elizabeth Louderback, Frances Louderback, Estelle Brubaker, Evelyn Broyles, Elton Spitler, Gladys Homer, Virginia Belle Spitler, Artemis Seal, Elizabeth Spitler, Boo Speake, Marine Aleshire, Leonora Long.

Rockingham Group Will Attend Rally

Harrisonburg, Va., June 18 (Spl.). Five judging teams were included among the Rockingham delegation which left today for the ninth annual Future Farmers of America rally at Blacksburg.

With the delegation was Prof. Nelson T. Huffman, head of the music department of Bridgewater College, who with Miss Dorothy Ikenberry, of Daleville, composed the F. F. A. song adopted last year at the National conference. Prof. Huffman will direct the music.

Broadway—Layman Lantz, Guy Lantz and Stanley Spitzer, dairy cattle; Paul Fulk, Everett Holsinger and Joseph Orebaugh, poultry; Loy Crider is alternate.

Man Steps Into Space; Killed by 100-Foot Fall

Montgomery, W. Va., June 18 (Spl.).—An unusual automobile fatality occurred on a mountainside near here at night, resulting in the instant death of George Rinehart, 25, of this city, when he plunged down a 100-foot precipice.

Rinehart and a companion were riding in a motor truck, which was stopped for a moment to give them a rest. It was so dark that neither realized that the truck had stopped on the edge of the cliff and when Rinehart got out he stepped into space.

Presbyterians Open Conclave At Frederick

Baltimore Synod Hears College President Give Address.

Frederick, Md., June 18 (Spl.). The Baltimore Synod of the Presbyterian Church and the Woman's Synodical Missionary Society, embracing Maryland, the District of Columbia and a part of Delaware, convened at Hood College tonight for their annual meeting.

With a registration of more than 100 delegates and others expected tomorrow and Wednesday, the opening session was featured by an address by the Rev. Silas Evans, president of Ripon College, Ripon, Wis. Dr. Joseph H. Apple, president, welcomed delegates.

The synod and synodical will meet together each day until 11 a. m., then the organizations will hold separate sessions. Dr. John E. Kuizenga, Princeton University; the Rev. James A. Riggs, representing the Presbyterian board of foreign missions, and Miss Mary Moore, secretary for young people's board of foreign missions, will lead group meetings.

Special conferences of ministers, elders and laymen will be held daily, led by Dr. H. Augustine Smith, Boston University. Tomorrow night Dr. Evans will lecture. Thursday night a religious pageant will be given, under direction of Dr. Smith.

The synod proper will begin Wednesday morning with a business meeting. The synod sermon will be preached by the moderator, the Rev. George A. Burslem, Dover, Del., following communion.

The Women's Missionary Society will hold its first business meeting tomorrow, when committees will be appointed and reports submitted. Mrs. William L. Darby, Washington, president, will preside. Speakers listed for Thursday and Friday include the Rev. Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, Washington; the Rev. Dr. Hugh L. Hodge, Baltimore; the Rev. Dr. A. E. Barrows, Washington; the Rev. Dr. Dewitt M. Benham, Baltimore, and the Rev. E. Glenn Switzer, Bel Air.

Va. PWA Gains In Employment

Second Phase of Program Bears Out Government's Prediction.

Richmond, June 18 (Spl.).—Employment in Virginia on PWA projects and in private industry made substantial gains during the second phase of the Federal Government's reemployment program between February 17, 1934, and May 1, 1934, as compared with the first phase, which began on December 16, 1933, ending February 16, 1934.

This fact is shown in figures, released today by Frank A. Cavedo, State director of the National reemployment program, which show that during the second phase, CWA work, which was then dwindling, and the works division of FERA, CWA's successor, absorbed 40.8 per cent of the total of persons reemployed, while the PWA took 32 per cent and private employment, 27.2 per cent.

Figures for the second period, Mr. Cavedo explained, bear out the prediction made by the Federal Government that when the CWA program was completed a gain would follow in employment on PWA projects and in private industry.

Killing Confessed, Prosecutor Says

Grafton, W. Va., June 18 (Spl.).—James C. Holt, Taylor County prosecuting attorney, announces that Mike Hricik, 74, a coal miner, of Wendel, has confessed to the recent slaying of his younger cabin mate, Michael Passako, in a drunken brawl over rent money in the cabin jointly occupied by them at Wendel, where both worked for a coal company.

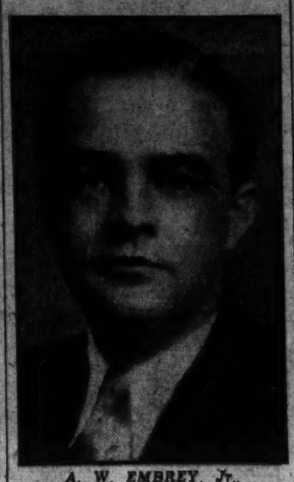
Passako was found dead in the cabin from blows on the head and a blood-stained ax was found nearby. Holt says that in the confession, made to him and other county officers, Hricik admitted felling Passako with a pick handle. Hricik fled the State and was captured soon afterward at Homestead, Pa., and returned here.

The defendant has waived a preliminary hearing and has been committed to the county jail to await grand jury action.

James Elliott Is Buried.

Crisfield, Md., June 18 (Spl.).—Funeral services for James Elliott 73, well known lower Chesapeake Bay waterman, who died Tuesday, were held from Immanuel Methodist Episcopal Church here Thursday. Besides his widow, Mrs. Celia Elliott, he is survived by four daughters and five sons.

New Court Aid



A. W. EMBREY, Jr., assemblyman from Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania County, who has been appointed referee in bankruptcy for district No. 2 of the Eastern District of Virginia by Judge Luther B. Way, of the United States District Court, of Richmond. His appointment and his resignation from the State Legislature both become effective Friday.

Pastors Elect New President In Frederick

The Rev. Ralph E. Hartman Heads Maryland County Group.

Middletown, Md., June 18 (Spl.). The Rev. Ralph E. Hartman, pastor of Grace Reformed Church, Frederick, was elected president of the Frederick County Ministerial Association at the eighteenth annual meeting and dinner today at Christ Reformed Church, Middletown, the Rev. John S. Adams, pastor.

Other officers are the Rev. John W. Fisher, pastor of the United Brethren Church, Walkersville, vice president; the Rev. T. W. Lloyd, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Walkersville, secretary, and the Rev. John S. Bowlus, pastor of the Church of the Brethern, Burkittsville, treasurer.

The Rev. Dr. Richard L. Shipley, Methodist Protestant Publishing House, Baltimore, spoke on "Exploring Pictures," with special reference to religious art. Dr. Shipley, a former pastor of Methodist Protestant Church, Buckeystown, was the first president of the county association.

The ministers voted to conduct a campaign of education on the temperance question prior to the primary elections in September. Voters will decide whether the sale of beer shall be continued and whether liquor shall be legalized.

The Rev. William C. Royal, pastor of the First Baptist Church, Frederick, retiring president, presided. About 80 ministers and their wives attended the dinner which was served by the ladies of the local congregation.

Richmond Police Ask Radio Permit

System May Be Operating in Sixty Days.

Richmond, June 18 (AP).—Capt. James B. Sheppard, director of public safety, announced today that a police radio system probably would be in operation in Richmond within 60 days.

An application for a radio license has been made by the city, the director said. Approval by the Federal Radio Commission in Washington is expected within two weeks. As soon as approval is made, preliminary work toward construction of the station will be begun, Sheppard said.

A 400-watt wave transmitter will be installed, probably at the second police station, and cruising cars will carry receiving sets. Capt. Sheppard said that Henrico County police may equip their cars with receivers also. He added that he had suggested to John O. Rhodes, director of the division of motor vehicles, that State police cars also be equipped. The cost of installing the station is estimated at $10,000.

Gulf Stream Change Sales Talk Charged

Baltimore, June 18 (Spl.).—Salesmen for a land development at Sunset Beach, on the Patapsco River near Baltimore, assured prospective purchasers that the Gulf Stream is changing its course and would make Maryland a tropical paradise, it was charged today in criminal court here.

The charges were made by assistant State's attorneys who are prosecuting Claude K. Hill, sales manager of the development, on trial charged with conspiracy to defraud.

Va. Vets Told V. F. W. to War On "Chiselers"

Department Encampment Opens Conclave at Charlottesville.

Charlottesville, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Speaking tonight at the banquet of the twelfth annual encampment of Veterans of Foreign Wars, Department of Virginia, George K. Brobeck, National legislative representative, outlined the organization's legislative program. The veterans will demand a recodification of the country's pension laws, based upon the length and type of service.

"Our aim will be," he said, "to eradicate from the pension rolls every 'chiseler.'"

"We are going into politics," declared Brobeck, "because we believe no one has a better right to assist, in an organized way, in the election of public officials for State and Nation than the men who have seen service in actual war zones in time of National peril."

The speaker said that the organization is growing at the rate of 10,000 per month, and is anticipating a membership of about 800,000 within the next year.

To Support Recovery.

"The Veterans of Foreign Wars are pledged to support the President's recovery program," said Brobeck, "and hopes it will include the proper care and treatment of disabled service men.

"We believe the time has come when the poor, deluded pacifist and the parlor bolshevists must be handled with direct action. Communism and Hitlerism have no place in American life, and the service men of this country will not permit their continued expansion."

C. R. Christie, of Seattle, junior vice commander in chief, said that at the coming National encampment in Louisville, he would submit a plan of organization for the children of the Nation—to teach Americanism and educate them as to their civic duties. Athletics will have an important part on the program.

"The need for such an organization is vitally felt in part of the country where communism has a real foothold," said the speaker. "The communistic movement has detailed plans laid for the education of the youth of our country in communistic doctrines, starting with the child at a tender age and continuing through his school life."

More than 200 veterans and members of the Ladies Auxiliary attended the banquet. Capt. J. B. Frazier, of Keswick, U. S. N., retired, acted as toastmaster.

At the business meeting Department Commander George L. Dovel, of Harrisonburg, submitted his annual report showing the existence of 36 posts in Virginia, with a membership of 2,500. New posts were organized during the year in Alexandria, Danville, Abingdon and Roanoke. The Virginia department, he stated, had purchased a cottage at the National Home for V. F. W., widows and orphans at Eaton Rapids, Mich.

A rain this afternoon caused abandonment of the annual parade. Musical units from three posts met at the city armory and competed for the State loving cup. The judges awarded the trophy to the Portsmouth Corps, of which W. L. Robinson is commander and A. B. Hill is drum major. The corps also received the silver cup offered by the Charlottesville Post to the unit making the best appearance.

Druggists Plan State Meeting

Maryland Association's Baltimore Sessions Start Wednesday.

Baltimore, June 18 (Spl.).—Druggists from all sections of the State will gather here tomorrow for the opening session of the Maryland Pharmaceutical Association's four-day convention.

In conjunction with the parent organization's meeting, the Travelers' Auxiliary also will hold sessions. Several thousand druggists are expected at the convention.

This is the first time the association has met in Baltimore in 24 years, previous meetings having been held at various other points throughout the State.

Virginia Valley Drought Ended

Harrisonburg, Va., June 18 (Spl.). A drought in the central Shenandoah Valley, which has prevailed for six weeks, was broken today by an all-day rain.

"The rain is worth several hundred thousands dollars to the farmers of the Rockingham section of the State," declared County Agricultural Agent S. M. Cox. "It will give the corn crop its needed start. It will bring back pasture and that is important from a dairying standpoint. It will help that part of the clover crop which has not gone far in blooming. It also will be a boon to gardens.

The rain was preceded by a hail storm, which swept south along the mountains in West Rockingham to Augusta County. This storm damaged many wheat fields.

ABC Board Tells How, When Virginians May Carry Liquor

The regulations forbid transportation of more than one gallon of legally acquired spirits without written permission from the board, which plans to effect a set-up whereby the permit, which must accompany the liquor, can be written by the store manager.

One gallon, or less, can be transported without written permit, where it is in the possession of the purchaser, and not intended for resale.

The regulations, a board spokesman said, cover transportation between any two points in Virginia, including transportation from store to home.

The regulations will not affect board shipments by common carriers from warehouse to stores.

Women's Relief Projects Planned in Culpeper County

Culpeper, Va., June 18 (Spl.). Mrs. Ashby Griffin, elected temporary chairman of the organization for women's work in Culpeper County, assisted by the members of of the board, including the Rev. Francis Allison, Town Manager von Gemmingen, Miss Kate Perry, G. G. Harris and Bernard Inskeep, will make efforts at once for the establishment of women's projects, sewing rooms and canning centers taking first place in the plan.

This action was taken at the meeting on Saturday of the advisary board of the Emergency Relief Administration for Culpeper County, held at the request of the local relief director, D. J. Coleman, in regard to an organization for developing projects for the unemployed women in the county.

Labor conditions for the male unemployed in town and county have greatly aided in curtailing relief on account of farm work available.

Robert W. Huffman, project engineer for the county, stated that work on the incomplete CWA addition to Lignum High School would be started on Tuesday, but that owing to reduced funds only half of the 130 men on relief roll could be put to work in all parts of the county.

It was brought out in the conference that the three prime reasons for projects for county women were to give employment to unskilled labor, to give clothing for relief cases and to train mothers to handle the family clothing budget.

Woman Held In Slaying of Rich Dentist

Traveling Companion Is Sought in Illinois Mystery Death.

Eldorado, Ill., June 18 (AP).—A Texas woman was in custody and her traveling companion, Harold St. Clair, alias Lee Armstrong, was hunted over a wide area tonight as Federal and State authorities sought to solve the mysterious slaying of Dr. Homer L. Meyers, 55, well-to-do dentist.

Authorities, who after an all-night search found the body of the dentist today in a clump of weeds on a farm he owned near Equality, said they were convinced Dr. Meyers was slain shortly after he had been lured away Saturday by a stranger who posed as a prospective buyer of the land.

Robbery, authorities asserted, appeared the motive for the crime, but they admitted it also was possible that Meyers was killed as he struggled to frustrate a kidnaping attempt.

The dentist's wife said he was in the habit of carrying sizable sums of money with him.

The woman held by county authorities gave her name as Evelyn Anderson, of Woodboro, Tex. Apprehended Sunday night as she was about to take a bus to Chicago, she told officers she had been traveling with "Armstrong;" that she had seen him last Saturday night and that he had told her "I made $6,000 on that farm deal," apparently referring to the trip he had taken with the dentist.

Mrs. Meyers said she became suspicious when a stranger whom she later identified as St. Clair came to their home Saturday asking to see the dentist's farm. She recalled that she believed she saw a revolver in his pocket. Because of her suspicion she said she asked to accompany the two men to the farm but St. Clair told her it would be unnecessary for her to go.

The Texas woman denied all knowledge of any kidnap or robbery plot.

Babcock Pays Tribute To Work of Johnson

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson has been a spectacular figure in the present Administration and as a consequence has made enemies as well as friends, E. Claude Babcock, president of the American Federation of Government Employes, told a radio audience over WOL yesterday in paying tribute to the NRA chief.

He praised the general for "not taking the middle course," and expressed pleasure that reports of wholesale dismissals among NRA employes had been branded as false by Gen. Johnson. He took to task critics of the NRA.

Two From Here Get Degrees at Brown

Two Washingtonians were awarded degrees at the 166th annual commencement of Brown University, at Providence, R. I., yesterday.

They are Edward J. Hickey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Hickey, of 5738 Seventh street northwest, and E. Davis Caldwell, son of Mrs. George K. Caldwell, of 1859 California street northwest. Hickey, a graduate of Central High School, held a university scholarship for the last four years.

2 Nurses Sent Abroad To Adventists' Hospitals

Miss Bertha Fern Parker, a graduate of Washington Missionary College, has been named by the Foreign Mission Board of Seventh Day Adventists to become superintendent of the nurses at the denomination sanitarium in Manila. She will sail from San Francisco June 29.

With her will be Miss Melda Hazel Ragsdale, another alumna of the Takoma Park institution, who has accepted a post with the denominational hospital at Yencheng, China, as superintendent of nurses.

Missing Poetess, 18, Put in Jail With Former Convict Suitor

Broke, but They Want to Marry; 2-Week Mystery Is Cleared Up.

New York, June 18 (AP). — Lighthearted and bubbling with thoughts of poetry, Louise Krist, 18 and beautiful, and her middle-aged artist sweetheart, Childe de Rohan D'Harcourt, were confined in jail cells tonight after a fortnight of carefree life while police searched the city for the girl.

The mystery surrounding Miss Krist's disappearance two weeks ago after attending a reading of the Raven Poetry Circle in Greenwich Village was swept away by an observing citizen who pointed them out to a policeman as they strolled arm and arm in the sunshine.

"A romance of the ages," said D'Harcourt, a bogus nobleman known to village citizens as "The Prince" and "The Count" and who has a prison record extending back to 1914. Then the couple was escorted to the missing persons bureau, the girl nervous and D'Harcourt apparently calm.

"I am the super conscious mind," chanted the poet-artist, pointing his gold-headed cane toward the ceiling of the missing persons bureau. "I am the genius." A detective interfered.

"Please let him finish the prayer," begged Miss Krist.

"All the forces of the universe command we come successfully out of these troublous moments and that we be married today."

Miss Krist smiled at the dapper little man with the smartly waxed mustache, saying:

"Whatever that prayer means, I hope it gets us out of this mess."

LOUISE KRIST.

D'Harcourt has been charged with seduction, Miss Krist with being a delinquent minor and held in default of $1,000 bail pending a hearing tomorrow. The charges did not seem to worry them, but lack of funds to obtain a marriage license did.

"I love him," said Miss Krist. "We're penniless. We did not even have breakfast today. But we intend to get married and then we'll work so that we can take a trip to the Orient and Russia."

D'Harcourt, appearing at ease, explained they had but 48 cents, not enough for a $2 marriage license. He was worried, he said, because "my most adorable madonna" would have to spend a night in jail.

"I have no fears," she assured him. Then she added, "as soon as I get out we'll be married."

Insisting he worshipped the ground the girl walked on, D'Harcourt, who has been convicted of grand larceny, was led away to a cell after he had embraced the girl.

Miss Krist's parents appeared, but departed before the charges were filed. Otto Krist, the father, is a boyhood friend of Fritz Kreisler, the violinist, and a 'cellist himself.

D'Harcourt hinted the Krists were willing to accept him as a son-in-law, but Miss Krist admitted "they didn't act that way."

Candidate Files On Both Tickets In West Virginia

Parkersburg, W. Va., June 18 (Spl.).—An interesting test case involving the State primary election law has arisen here in the registration by George Barnett, of this city, at the courthouse as a candidate for a seat in the State House of Delegates for Wood County on both the Republican and Democratic tickets.

Barnett declares that he is an independent candidate and is accordingly entitled to have his name on both party ballots. Fritz Grimm, circuit clerk, and other county officials, however, are of the opinion that the State primary election law limits a candidate to only one ticket. Barnett's certificate is filed, and he states that he will contend for his right to have his name on both ballots.

The State primary election will be held August 7.

Sellers Takes Over Command At Naval Academy Ceremony

Annapolis, June 18 (Spl.).—Rear Admiral David F. Sellers, until a few days ago commander-in-chief of the United States fleet, today became superintendent of the Naval Academy, succeeding Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart. The latter, having completed a three-year term of duty here, has been assigned to command of cruiser division No. 6 of the scouting force.

Transfer of command took place in the corridor of Bancroft Hall, dormitory of the midshipmen, shortly after noon, rain having prevented the ceremony being held outdoors as originally planned. Ranking officers of the academy attended the ceremony.

Midshipmen of the second class, who are taking a special course of instruction in aviation and other subjects this summer, were drawn up on either side of the corridor. Rear Admiral Hart read his orders transferring him to a sea command, and immediately afterward the shore battery sounded a 13-gun salute. A moment later Admiral Sellers read his orders and another 13-gun salute was fired.

During the ceremonies the flag of Admiral Hart was hauled down from the mast head of the station ship Reina Mercedes, and that of Admiral Sellers was run up in its stead.

Upon completion of the ceremony, Admiral Hart was the luncheon guest of Admiral and Mrs. Sellers, after which he left for New York. He will assume his new post of duty within a few days.

Knife Killing Suspect Makes Not Guilty Plea

Susanville, Calif., June 18 (AP). Peter Alosi, 45-year-old lumber mill foreman, charged with the knife murders of five persons here June 10, entered two pleas of not guilty and not guilty by reason of insanity when he appeared before Superior Judge R. D. Burroughs today.

Judge Burroughs ruled that Alosi must stand trial on the five murder counts July 9.

National B. Y. P. U. Meet Starts Here Tomorrow

The twenty-ninth annual session of the National Sunday School and B. Y. P. U. Congress will be held here Wednesday through Sunday.

A preliminary session will be held in Washington Auditorium today. Noted colored religious leaders and educational figures from all sections of the Nation are expected to attend.

Poison Dose in Theater Proves Fatal to Woman

Poison she is alleged to have swallowed in a downtown theater June 10 yesterday proved fatal to Miss Lorraine Moore, 22, of the 400 block of M street southwest. She died in Gallinger Hospital.

Miss Moore was found semiconscious in a theater restroom. She was treated at Casualty Hospital and transferred to Gallinger. Police said she was despondent because of financial troubles.

$87,500 Peyser Claim Is Refused by Court

The District Court of Appeals yesterday denied the claim of Col. Julius I. Peyser that he was entitled to a commission of $87,500 for obtaining a purchaser for The Washington Post several years ago.

Col. Peyser arranged with David Lawrence, Inc., to purchase The Post for $3,000,000, but the offer was never ratified by the District Supreme Court, which was empowered to pass on the sale because the property was a portion of the John R. McLean estate.

Miss Smith a Graduate.

Among seniors graduating from the Takoma-Silver Spring High School June 12 was Pauline Winnifred Smith, of 808 Thayer avenue, Silver Spring, Md. Her name inadvertently was omitted from a previously published list of graduates.

The clean Center Leaves are the mildest leaves

They Taste Better!

Wherever the finest tobaccos grow—in our own Southland, in Turkey, in Greece—all over the world, we gather the very Cream of the tobacco Crops for Lucky Strike. And that means only the clean center leaves. The center leaves are the mildest leaves—they cost more—they taste better. These clean center leaves are the only ones used in making Luckies. Then "It's toasted"—for throat protection. And every Lucky is fully packed with these choice tobaccos—made round and firm, free from loose ends—that's why Luckies "keep in condition"—why you'll find that Luckies do not dry out—an important point to every smoker. Naturally, Luckies are always in all-ways kind to your throat.

Of Vital Importance.

In a report couched in exceedingly strong language, a special investigating committee of the House accuses Brig. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois of being dishonest, incompetent, and inefficient, among other charges, as a result of its four months' probe of alleged law violation in connection with army purchasing procedure.

The committee which made the report may not be expert in aviation, or even in the purchasing problems of a chief of air corps, but its membership consists of three Democrats, three Republicans, a Farmer-Laborite, and its chairman, Representative Rogers, who is a New Hampshire Democrat. It can not, therefore, be accused of partisan leanings, though the implication of the report is to pin on Gen. Foulois much of the responsibility for the Administration's blunder in turning the air mail over to an Army air service inadequate for that task.

The charges which this House committee has made are far too serious to be evaded or ignored. Their importance transcends the individual involved, in that they strike at the method of conducting this important branch of our system of National defense. It is a matter of vital importance not only to Gen. Foulois, and to the Army, but to a Nation which naturally expects its military aviation to be thoroughly efficient and above the slightest suspicion of corruption.

In fairness to Gen. Foulois, and to the executive officers associated with him, the present request of the Air Corps chief for an open hearing should be promptly granted. The Army is not a private corporation and the matter under discussion is essentially public business, as it involves the expenditure of large amounts of public funds. Thus the public has the right to insist that the whole conduct of the Air Corps under Gen. Foulois should be as thoroughly and openly investigated as is consistent with the safeguarding of military secrets.

If Gen. Foulois is found guilty as charged, when tried in an open court, his removal from a post of trust would naturally and commendably follow. If the charges of the committee are not substantiated, then his vindication should be as quickly and completely made. For the present it is important to remember that the charges are merely accusations, the validity of which must be the more severely tested because their character is so serious.

Disorder In Havana.

Two days of political manifestations in Havana came to a bloody climax on Sunday when terrorists turned machine-gun fire upon a parade of the powerful ABC organization. Thus another brief chapter in the unhappy history of Cuba has been written in terms of violence.

The episode is the more unfortunate as coming on the heels of our abrogation of the Platt amendment, and the inauguration of treaty relations based on the renunciation of rights of intervention by the United States in Cuban affairs. A happier inaugural of the new policy would have been a period of political tranquillity in the island republic. Perhaps that was too much to expect, with presidential elections in the offing there.

Back of the renewed rioting, of course, lies internal politics. Back of the political unrest lies a deeply disorganized economic situation. We have now done all that seems possible to assist Cuba toward economic rehabilitation, and we have coupled that action by recognizing the present Mendieta government, on which rests complete responsibility for insuring a reasonable protection to American lives and property.

It is, of course, absurd to say that the week-end's bloodshed is traceable in any way to our policy of nonintervention. Cuba is not the only country where rioting and disorders are taking place. The State Department evidently has faith in the present Cuban government's ability to set its house in order as economic conditions gradually improve. That faith may prove to be misplaced, but it is far too early to pass judgment on the issue yet.

A Sign Of Stability.

Former citizens of Czarist Russia, who left that country before the revolution of 1917 and who have since lived uninterruptedly in the United States, may now become citizens of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics if they so wish. Those who left Russia since 1922, with the permission of the government, may also apply for readmission. Former common soldiers of the so-called White armies, rank and file participants in armed revolts against the Soviet government, and former Russian prisoners of the World War and of the Civil War of 1917-1920, will be welcomed back to citizenship, providing they apply within the next six months and have their applications accepted. It is interesting to notice that potentially hostile officers are not invited.

We have no way of determining whether this blanket invitation for renewal of Russian citizenship comes as a result of popular demand. But it does, obviously, signify the growth of settled conditions and domestic tranquillity in the Soviet republic. As time passes the deep animosities of 1917 will tend to fade further into oblivion.

It will be interesting to learn how many exiled Russians will take this opportunity again to become citizens of their native land, although an entirely different country than that from which they fled.

In the meantime the letting down of the bars, even with notable restrictions, shows that Communist Russia is continuing to court a lasting friendship with the rest of the world. The invitation to the former czarists to come back home is pleasant news.

For Technical Cooperation.

None of the legislation which passed almost unnoticed through the eleventh-hour jam in Congress is more significant in its social implications than the joint resolution authorizing the President to accept membership in the International Labor Organization. Passed by the Senate last Wednesday without a record vote, the measure was adopted in the House on Saturday night with 232 Congressmen favoring and 109 opposed.

Although the abbreviated House debate on the issue was flimsy in intellectual content it is a cause for satisfaction that the yeas and nays were ordered. For with a clear majority of the total membership on record as approving, it can not be said that there was anything surreptitious about a move which promises to extend our established cooperation with the League of Nations' procedure of continuous conferences on technical subjects of obvious international importance.

Representative Tinkham, who led the opposition, was quite correct in pointing out that the International Labor Organization is a part of the general League system. So is the Disarmament Conference, international aviation control, double taxation, counterfeit currency, intellectual cooperation, advisory committee on opium, public health methods and many other technical League undertakings in which our Government has been officially cooperating for years. But if the Secretary of Labor was somewhat evasive in stating that the International Labor Organization "is not even now an integral part of the League of Nations," certainly Mr. Tinkham was preposterous in asserting that the resolution would "commit the United States to internationalism under the lash of foreign influences."

The resolution as adopted specifically states that "in accepting such membership (in the International Labor Organization) the President shall assume on behalf of the United States no obligation under the Covenant of the League of Nations." In other words, it safeguards the complete political independence of this country while facilitating that orderly and regular exchange of viewpoint on technical subjects of international concern which is imperative in a world where national interests do not stop short at national frontiers.

In no field today is cooperative effort toward the improvement of international standards more important for this country than in that of labor conditions. No effort to improve the low living standards, or to shorten the long working hours, of our industrial competitors can possibly be a matter of indifference to producers and consumers, to capital and labor, in the United States.

It may be hoped that the formal invitation to associate ourselves with this desirable effort at Geneva will not now be long delayed. When it comes President Roosevelt should promptly accept this opportunity to impart to others, and to receive from others, the most expert advice on how to secure minimum labor standards calculated to eliminate the unfair commercial advantages now held over us by those nations which are accustomed to debased working conditions.

The Debt At Peak.

The National debt has reached a new high point for all time at $27,005,000,000. The significance of this figure is better appreciated when it is recalled that the previous maximum of $26,597,000,000, attained in 1919, was the result of the most costly war ever fought—a war which increased the obligations of the Federal Government by approximately $25,000,000,000 in two years. When we entered the war in the spring of 1917, the Federal debt amounted to only $1,282,000,000.

In 1919, furthermore, the country was looking forward to a rapid decline in public expenditures and a return to budgetary balance. Between 1919 and 1930 the gross debt was reduced about $10,300,000,000, and the net debt about $8,500,000,000, out of sinking fund appropriations, and by application of surpluses to debt retirement. By June 30, 1930, the debt had fallen to $16,185,000,000. Since then the rise has been rapid, due to a succession of budgetary deficits, resulting from simultaneous declines in revenue and increased emergency expenditures. During the past twelve months alone, additions to the gross debt have totaled $4,300,000,000.

With a huge spending program in prospect, it is expected that the Federal debt will continue to mount rapidly during the present fiscal year, and probably the following year. In view of the large volume of contingent liabilities assumed by the Government under various relief and emergency laws, it is impossible to forecast the ultimate size of the debt.

So long as budgetary deficits continue to be covered by new loans, the people may close their eyes to the fact that debt charges are adding to the burdens which must eventually be borne by taxpayers, with consultant handicaps to trade and industry. When such charges become too onerous, a government sometimes finds that it is politically, if not economically, impossible to compel taxpayers to defray the costs of current outlays. Under such circumstances, it becomes necessary to pursue a policy of deficit financing which in the end destroys public confidence, thus forcing resort to the dangerous expedient of issuing fiat money to meet government expenses.

Insidious Censorship.

The line between censorship and legitimate restrictions upon socially undesirable publicity is never easy to define. It is especially difficult to draw in a new field of communication, such as radio broadcasting, to which familiar standards and tests are not always applicable.

Just for that reason the opportunities for establishment of an insidious type of air censorship, not suspected by the public, are numerous and the menace to freedom of speech can not be too strongly emphasized. The case in point is the power given to the Radio Commission to revoke licenses, if it decides that a broadcaster has failed to serve the "public interest, convenience and necessity." Clearly this mandate could readily be employed by a politically subservient commission to silence all stations that permitted opposition speakers to broadcast their views.

Those who protest that no such abuse of authority is conceivable need only be reminded that the present secretary of the Radio Commission is a political appointee, selected by Postmaster General Farley and charged with responsibility for all radio arrangements made for the Democratic National Committee. The gross impropriety of placing a political contact man in a responsible Federal office of this sort is too clear to need emphasis. The average citizen who has listened to the eloquent exposition and defense of New Deal policies transmitted by air has no doubt marveled at the paucity of dissenting, critical comment. After learning about the dual role played by Secretary Pettey, he may begin to wonder whether he has been listening to the voice of the people or merely to the words of carefully selected spokesmen for Administration policies.

Whether or not such suspicions are justified, the public should be forewarned and prepared to assert constitutional rights which are threatened if partisan influences are permitted to affect decisions as to what kinds of broadcasts "serve the public interest." A Radio Commission of seven men is to be created under the new Communications Act. It is probable that they will be given recess appointments in advance of the fall elections. And if these men choose, they may use their great discretionary powers under the licensing provisions of the law to deprive the people of an opportunity to listen to a free and fair discussion of the important political issues now before the electorate.

The only safeguards against abuse of regulatory authority lie in the appointment as commissioners of men with a reputation for disinterestedness, who place individual liberties and preservation of democratic institutions above personal or partisan considerations. If the personnel of the new commission fails to measure up to these high standards, the danger of censorship ceases to be a threat—it becomes a menacing probability.

"Putzy."

The visit of Herr Doktor Ernst Sedgwick F. ("Putzy") Hanfstaengl, piano-playing liaison officer for Hitler's Anglo-American press bureau, has thus far been more amusing than insidious. His last-minute dash by airplane to the dockside, his quick trip across the Atlantic with a suitcase full of busts of prominent men, his insouciance and nimble parrying of questions in New York, and the absurd guard of armed local and State police who met him at Boston's South Station, all lend credence to the growing belief that he is the court jester of the Hitler regime.

It is well that he is not being taken too seriously by any one except the Boston Brahmins, who take any Harvard man seriously. To look upon him as the agent of the German Government bent upon spreading Nazi doctrines in this country smacks of the ridiculous. He may make some impression upon Beacon Hill, but Beacon Hill is no longer Boston, the Irish and Jewish population having long ago crowded out the old stock of pure bred Boston Aryans. "Putzy" will attract little attention in that city, where the only dignitary left who can draw a crowd is Al Smith.

It is to be hoped that "Putzy" will not be annoyed on his visit. Thus far the newspaper correspondents who have followed him day and night since his arrival have been thoroughly amiable in their dispatches. In fact "Putzy" is being taken for a gay ride by the reporters. They somehow can not otherwise treat any person who will travel by airplane, fast boat, and train to attend a class reunion! Even at Harvard, where class reunions are taken terrifically seriously and advertised on the editorial page of the Transcript!

Keeping the Home Fires Burning.

On the "Coming Verdict"

IT IS full time, and more than time, to climb the watchtower and scan the horizon of what will go into history as one of the most famous of American political campaigns. Early in June is the date for taking account of stock when that sort of hurricane is approaching. The fight does not begin in June, but the line-up does. The campaign of 1934 is to rank in history with those of 1882, 1890, 1910 and, if one chooses to go far enough back, such campaigns as those of 1858, 1866, 1874 and many earlier.

You will notice, of course, that those years, like 1934, are not the years of Presidential elections. But they are the years in which the Presidential elections two years later are determined. The election two years later is predetermined, is a ratification meeting, is a formality indorsing what happened in the mid-year of the administration in power. And it is invariably as early as June that the political earth ceases to be without form and void and assumes coherence.

This always happens in the year when the congressional and State elections register the popular verdict on the Administration elected two years before. But it is seldom that such mid-Administration elections become historic. They become so only when they portend a great uprising of the people. The election of 1882 determined that in 1884 the Republican party should be turned out of office in 1884, for the first time since the Civil War, and that Grover Cleveland should inaugurate a new era, just as the mid-Administration election of 1854 determined that in 1856 the Whig party should disappear and leave the new Republican party confronting the old Democratic one.

THERE is nothing mysterious about it, no hocus-pocus. The explanation is merely that after an Administration has been in office about two years the people have made up their minds about it, for good or bad. In theory they have two more years to change their minds (in the third year no general election is held), but in practice and in history they never do.

The reason why, in the mid-Administration year, June is the time to look at the barometer is not that anybody knows how the election will go five months later. Nobody does, the politicians least of all. It is only that by June the Administration has been on trial for a year and a quarter, has been closely watched, Congress has done all for better or worse that it can do to show its bent, and the people have approached a verdict. Always there is talk enough for the next five months, and for the next two years, but the moving finger has written and passed on.

This mid-Administration year of 1934 ranks as among the historic ones because, ever since March, 1933, we have been trying out momentous experiments in Government, which is not usually the case. It is also important because the pocketbook motive, which decided the election of 1932, is still uppermost and because all over the land every man is studying his bank account and every miser his cubby-hole with an anxiety never matched before. Ordinarily people pay little enough attention to politics except in Presidential years, but beginning with 1932 every man and woman has come, with surprise, to the realization that politics touches each individual home and shop and office and farm . . .

ONE sign of moment has appeared to flatter Republican confidence, and a rather surprising one. In the Pennsylvania Republican primaries Senator Reed defeated Gov. Pinchot by an astonishing majority. This was contrary to what all those wise creatures, the politicians, had expected, and what is more important, it reversed what hoi polloi predicted, too. Nobody thought Reed had a chance on earth. Reed was the first man of prominence to declare outright against Roosevelt, the NRA, and the whole recovery programs, lock, stock, and barrel. Pinchot, who had carried the State overwhelmingly at the last election, promptly made an issue of it, and thought like everybody else, that he had the nomination won before the fight began. Reed is not overpopular among Pennsylvania Republicans. The result must have surprised him as much as anybody; and it was gained solely on the National issue Reed and Pinchot had drawn.

Another sign of June is the growing cleavage between the Administration and the Western Progressive Republicans. . . . In his 1932 campaign Mr. Roosevelt made an especial appeal to them. Many of their National leaders openly bolted and rallied their Republican phalanx to his side; and those who did not openly bolt, such as Senator Borah, lent him unmistakable countenance. . . .

But in the early months of 1934 fissures began to appear in the alliance. It was at the instance of Senators Borah and Nye, especially Nye, that the President appointed the Darrow Review Board. Nye and Borah are Progressives of the deepest dye, and their object was to take a good hard slam at the NRA. It probably does not take more than the wisdom of a 10-year-old child to see that this was only the first shot they intended to fire, and that they by no means meant to stop there.

When the first report of the Darrow board whacked the NRA hard, there was consternation in Administration circles. The report was held incommunicado for 17 days, during which Gen. Johnson and Mr. Richberg burned electric lights to find some vulnerable place in it. Finally it was made public, with the answers of Johnson and Richberg. Simultaneously the President hurriedly announced that the Darrow board was fired.

It did not appease Borah, Nye or any other Progressive who thinks with them that the NRA is a breeder of monopoly and a deathblow to the "little fellow" and "the forgotten man," as Mr. Roosevelt in 1932 sympathetically called most of us. The 17 days' suppression, the publication simultaneously with arguments against the report, the certainty that these arguments had been prepared by request of the President, and the concurrent attempt to extinguish the Darrow board as Dr. Wirt had been extinguished, certainly had an effect on the Progressives, but not the effect well-wishers of the Administration may be supposed to have desired. The whole affair smacked too much of John Hay's description of the steamer Prairie Belle going full steam ahead "with a nigger squat on the safety valve." When a safety valve finally blows off, more than steam comes with it, as Hay's "Jim Bludso" graphically demonstrated.

THESE . . . . few selected instances . . . indicate a weakening in the strength the Administration had a year ago, but this by no means proves or even indicates that the Administration will fail in the momentous election next November. It is so strong that it can lose a good deal and still win. Mr. Wadsworth, who is a careful talker and keeps his head, is confident that the Republicans will gain from 80 to 100 seats in the House of Representatives. If they do, they will either be still in a minority or have a bare majority. But, historically, if an administration merely scrapes through in the mid-Administration election that is equivalent to a defeat in the next presidential campaign. In 1886, for instance, President Cleveland won by a bare majority, a heavily reduced one, in the House election; but that bare majority foreshadowed his own defeat in 1888.

The matter rests altogether on the voiceless voter. If he feels that the recovery program has worked out, so far, to his benefit, he will vote for the Administration, and no local issues or confusing pros and cons on the stump will prevent him. There is no earthly way of finding out whether he feels that way or not; even the Literary Digest poll only asks if the individual approves what has been done "on the whole." There will be large claims and much confidence, for publication, on both sides; but nobody will know until November, when the many-millioned Sphinx speaks. Nobody will know even such a partial factor as whether the Progressives—which means the West—have deserted Roosevelt or are still where they were in 1932. Not until November.

The Flag in Reverse.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Noticing that the Commissioners have called upon all Washingtonians to fly their flags on the coming July 4, may I suggest that you do the duty of a patriot and instruct them how to fly it?

Last week I attended the dedication ceremonies at the new Postoffice Department Building and hearing those about me criticizing the decorations, I noticed that although every window on the court had a large flag hanging from its sill, making a beautiful sight, every flag was hung in "reverse."

This caused a great deal of uncomplimentary comment. The final decision was that it symbolized the direction the country is now traveling, under a propaganda which is called new, but which was tried in the town of Rome about 1600 years ago, and bankrupted the works. This may be germane so far, but if we want to ever get the parade started in the right direction, the first thing to do is to get the symbol of the State flying properly and tell the crowd to follow it.

Please see if you can get it into the heads of those who head the procession that when the flag hangs vertically the constellation must be at the right side. A. M. MILLER.

It Is I, Mr. Higinweather.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

My darling child: Your editorial, "Hospital for Illiterates," in today's issue rejoices me. It proves that mama teacher still guides your hand. No split infinitive shall receive your applause or the countenance of Dr. Root so long as spinster English holds the stage, notwithstanding its multitude of classic precedents and the late Prof. T. R. Lounsbury. Down with it! The King is dead—long live the Queen!

And then the preposition ending a sentence: Continue its exile, also to the limbo of the unacknowledgeable. True, some he-men will now and then fall from grace, forgetting for the moment the maiden's hegemony in the schoolroom. Only so can your last sentence be understood and extenuated.

Nevertheless, I have hope for you. The tender influences about us can not fail in the event to so refine (excuse it) our literary speech that even the vernacular may be softened. Speed the day when at 3 a. m. and keyless you will tell your wife when she asks who's knocking that "It is I."

The Post Impressionist

The Latest Hell.

Postoffice, Tuesday.

EVERY art attracts incompetents, but no art attracts so many as that of translation. In profane literature, the average translator is either so intent upon the letter as to miss the spirit, or so intent upon his own conception of the spirit he neglects the letter's spiritual implications.

One classical exception is the standard translation of Rabelais into English—of which half was made by a Scot, half by a Frenchman. Voltaire's attempts at Shakespeare are notorious. Fitzgerald's interpretation of Omar is a charming poem, by Fitzgerald. Nearly all the Anglicized Russians read like schoolroom "trots."

* * *

Here is an indication of the latest method, and the man who devised it calls it "American Translation." He is Louis How. He is using his thesis upon Dante, for he speaks in the preface to his version of "The Comedy of Dante Alighieri—Part I: Hell" (The Harbor Press, New York). But application may be universal.

* * *

"Close accuracy should not," he believes, "be expected. Whoever, knowing no Italian, wishes to find out precisely what Dante said can turn to the faithful prose in Vernon's 'Readings.' But, after all, Dante did write in rhymed verse; whoever wishes to feel to some extent the same poetical effect that Dante makes on Italians does better to choose a translation in terza rima"—which How himself provides. Is it "sometimes a bit obscure or a bit clumsy?" Well, "the original is so frequently both as to require for Italian readers * * * very elaborate explanations."

As for the sort of English that How has chosen for the best mirroring of Dante, it is neither too classic to repel nor too vernacular to repulse—for Dante's Italian was neither. How's is an eclectic English. Italy's Dante is full of false syntax, jumbled tenses, anacolutha, so How's Dante does not fear them—and a reference to the grammar you used in grammar school will remind you that an anacoluthon is "a want of granatical sequence." The Florentine coined new words, used obsolete words, foreign phrases, slang—and where the Florentine did it, How does. "Any word that served Dante's purpose suited his taste"—and, How might have added, almost any rhyme.

Let's turn from theory, then, to practice:

Most translators obscure entirely that love of the fine-sounding proper names which Dante cultivated and which, among English poets, only Milton equally shared with him. How gives it full play in that scene where Virgil and his follower look out at—

Democritus, whose world by chance saw light
Anaxagoras, Thales, Diogenes,
Empedocles and Zeno, Heraclite,
Quality—classer Dioscorides.

* * *

Or take the familiar passage which opens Canto III, with its final line that everybody quotes, or misquotes, at least once in a lifetime—the words written over the gateway to the place of Dante's quest:

Through me the way within the grieving city,
Through me the way among eternal woe,
Through me the way to lost folk beyond pity . . .
Before me naught created did appear . . .
Abandon all hope, ye that enter here.

* * *

Of course, the best-known episode in "The Inferno" is that where, in the Second Circle, Dante encounters Francisca di Rimini and where she tells of her fatal love for Paolo, her brother-in-law. Perhaps this popularity lies only in the romantic theme. We like to think, however, that it owes more to the poet's probably personal knowledge of the event described, and his personal sorrow over it.

Those lovers were of "his own day and neighborhood." It is "strange to think," says Carlyle, that "Dante was the friend of this poor Francesca's father." The Florentine must have known her when she was a little girl at Ravenna. "Infinite pity, yet also infinite rigor of law; it is so Nature is made; it is so Dante discerned." How translates thus:

Upon a day we read for our delight
Of Launcelot sore wounded by Love's lance;
Alone were we, not feeling any fright,
More times than one we caught each other's glance,
From what we read, and colored for a while;
But one thing was the conquering circumstance.
For when we read of that desired smile
By such a lover kissed, he none ere took
Or e'er shall take from me by force or guile
Kissed me upon my mouth, and trembling shook.
Our Gallehaut was the tome and he that wrote.
That day we read no further in the book.

* * *

Well, our Italian won't suffice for a judgment upon How's. He says he has tried "'to make a readable version of a great classic that is eminently readable" with the aim of turning the reader toward the not difficult original. He may not turn us quite that far—we are a busy person—yet he has made Dante live for us as nobody else has:

Still up, he first; until upon the right
I saw ahead, and shining over the scaurs,
Some lovely things of Heaven, through a bight:

The Publishers Can Certainly Take It.

BOTH Mr. Roosevelt and Gen. Johnson put forth their best ridiculing efforts against the publishers when they were worried several months ago about the freedom of the press. And to say this is to say that the publishers were subjected to really high-grade ridicule.

BARGERON.

"Ho, ho, ho," both Mr. Roosevelt and the general would say in effect, "freedom of the press endangered? Absurd. The publishers are seeing things under the bed."

And every time they would "ho, ho, ho," the people would "ho, ho, ho," too. Everybody, it seemed, was ho, ho, hoing except that small group of publishers who went to bat on the matter.

The general intimated several times that what the publishers were really worried about was that they might have to increase their employes' salaries. Mr. Roosevelt in his message accompanying his signing of the newspaper code said that freedom of the press did not carry the right to work people at starvation wages or to suppress and distort the news, which implied, at least to me, that this is what he considered the publishers wanted to do. If the publishers made any retort at all it was a feeble one; that no, it was really, honestly and truly, the freedom of the press they wanted to preserve. Whereupon they were again greeted by the "ho, ho, hoes."

In his speech at Charleston, W. Va., Saturday night the general said that much of the press is in the hands of the political opposition anxious to get back in office, and therefore it is impossible for the NRA to get a square deal from them.

"I can understand the Communistic purpose of the Darrow board as an openly avowed assault on our whole system," he said, ". . . but the betrayal of a great public trust by a newspaper to accomplish a partisan end in utter disregard of the present and future security of the wage- and salary-earning element of our population is quite another matter."

Again he said:

Now, is there any doubt what a man in that mood would do to the freedom of the press if he could?

The inescapable proof of the tolerance of the newspapers, to my mind, is that they continue to print the general's nonsense. I suppose his utterances in this instance were with a view to creating the impression that the "vested interests" are trying to thwart him in his great "liberal" undertaking. It is a fact, however, that only last week certain labor leaders were denouncing him while the representatives of big business gathered at White Sulphur Springs were giving him a vote of confidence.

Another thing the general must know, too, and that is that the big newspapers of the country are for the NRA, that big business is also. Oh, they want some "improvements" but they want to retain what they call the "good points." Why, even our editor talks that way!

The NRA was sold to the crowd, however, with a promise that it was going to break down the rich and give their wealth to the masses. Presumably, Johnson considers it necessary to keep that stuff up.

* * * *

There is one important statement in his Charleston remarks, however, and that is that he has seen instructions to reporters not to send in news favorable to the NRA. I agree with him that a publisher or a reporter who deliberately distort or falsify stories to undermine the NRA should be run out of the business.

So now, if the general will just give some names, this column will print them. I imagine they would be printed all over the country, in fact.

D. C. Leads Most Cities With Its Crime Record

U. S. Survey Shows Washington Is Fertile Field for Thieves; Fair for Robbers; Good for Murders; Poor for Morons.

WASHINGTON'S crime rate was nearly half as high again as the average of other large cities in the United States during the first quarter of 1934, and thievery was the Capital's besetting sin, according to a barrage of crime statistics just unloosed by J. Edgar Hoover, the Justice Department's Division of Investigation head.

Besides chasing John Dillinger, capturing crooks charged with various crimes, keeping a fingerprint record of all American criminals, investigating candidates for appointment to public office and attending to similar chores, Mr. Hoover found time recently to measure the extent of crime in American cities during the first three months of this year.

What he learned about Washington is nothing to write home about. The Capital City stands 45 per cent above the average of the 35 other cities of more than 250,000 inhabitants in the number of crimes committed, in proportion to population, during the period.

In order to make comparisons among the various cities, a common measure was adopted. This, it was decided, should be the number of offenses reported to the police for every 100,000 inhabitants. On that basis, comparison as to the prevalence or dearth of crime in any city was quickly made.

Minor Offenses Ruled Out In Gathering Statistics.

The next thing to decide was what crimes should be included. Minor offenses were ruled out at the start. Finally, seven major crimes were selected. These comprised criminal homicide, attacks on women, robberies by violence, aggravated assaults such as shooting, stabbing, cutting and so on, burglary, larceny and auto "snatching."

On that basis, the police heads of more than 1,300 cities and towns were asked to cooperate in making a grand survey of urban crime. These police heads, incidentally, serve nearly half the Nation's population, or upward of 57,000,000 inhabitants. They sent their reports to Mr. Hoover.

In the group of 36 leading cities, which includes Washington, the average number of these seven crimes reported during the period was 410.2 per 100,000 inhabitants. For Washington, the number was 593.5 per 100,000 inhabitants.

WHILE the showing seems poor for Washington, a look at the details discloses that it is not as bad as it might be. For most of Washington's offenses were nothing more or less than plain, old-fashioned stealing, in some form or other. Nine out of ten of all the crimes reported by Washington consisted of thievery.

Washington Ranks High, Too, in Fancy Murders.

In the more serious crimes, involving blood-letting, the Capital ranks along with the rest of the country, with the single exception of murder. Persons desiring to be murdered, the figures disclose, stand a 25 per cent better chance of having their order filled in Washington than in the other cities, taking them as a whole.

Murder and nonnegligent manslaughter, however, constitute only half of the story told under the caption of criminal homicide. The other half consists of what Mr. Hoover terms nonnegligent manslaughter. In other words, killing through criminal carelessness.

Persons desiring to be killed in that manner might as well save their railroad fare and stay home, where they can be accommodated fully as well by local talent. The figures show that killings through criminal carelessness in Washington average 2.3 incidents per 100,000 inhabitants during the three months, and that is the exact average of all the 36 cities.

On the other hand, women were far safer from criminal attack in Washington than in other large cities, again taking the average figures. There were only five such cases during the three months reported to the Washington police, or an average of one case per 100,000 Capital residents; elsewhere the proportion average nearly twice as much, or 1.8 cases per 100,000 inhabitants.

Leads in Old-Fashioned Robbery by 20 Per Cent.

When it comes to hold-ups, stick-ups, highway robbery and such—all included under the robbery heading—Washington led the average by nearly 20 per cent. It reported the commission of 180 little and big affairs of this kind during the 90 days, or an average of two hold-ups or robberies a day. The Washington rate was set at 35.6 offenses per 100,000 inhabitants; the average for the 36 cities was 30.6.

THERE was a tremendous difference recorded in the various robbery reports. Chicago, as one might suspect, was the banner holdup and robbery center of the country; its rate was nearly four times the Washington rate, in proportion to population. Springfield, Mass., was low, with only .7. For every robbery reported from the Massachusetts city, Washington had 50, in proportion to population.

When it came to murders, Washington's record paled before that hung up by Birmingham, Ala. Where Washington managed to get along with a rate of 2.1 murders per 100,000 inhabitants, Birmingham arranged 11.2. Instead of staging 10 murders during the three months, as it did, Washington would have reported 51 such affairs, had its rate been equal to Birmingham's.

The low mark for murders was claimed by 16 cities of more than 100,000 inhabitants who reported no murders at all during the 90 days.

There were approximately 2,600 crimes reported from Washington under the seven headings during the quarter. Approximately 2,350 of those were crimes involving theft, reported under three headings: burglary, larceny and auto theft. It was under those headings that Washington achieved its bad rating.

Burglars Find City Provides Fertile Field.

Taking burglaries, the record shows that Washington was good pay-dirt for the burglars. They operated here exactly 50 per cent more often, in proportion to the population, than in the 36 cities as a whole. The average 36-city rate was 86.7 offenses per 100,000 inhabitants; the Washington rate was 129.2.

EVEN so, Washington's rate was topped by more than 20 other cities. The blue ribbon went to Norfolk with a rate of 320.7 offenses—more than 2½ times the Washington rate. Peoria, Ill., was the lowest, with a rating of 6.7, and, strange as it seems, New York City was next to lowest with a burglary rate of only 12 offenses per 100,000 inhabitants.

Coming by easy stages from burglary to larceny, it is found that the Capital went in for grand larceny—rather than the petty brand—to a much greater extent than most other cities. The total larceny rate in Washington during the period was 268.9 offenses per 100,000 inhabitants, and about one-fifth of those crimes constituted grand larceny. The average rate for larceny in the 36 cities was 189.9.

Washington, the figures assert, was half again as thievish as other big cities, on the average. A particularly poor showing relates to the high proportion of Washington's larcenies that constituted grand larceny. Elsewhere, in many cities, the proportion of grand larcenies was far less than in Washington.

Petty Thieves Apparently Favor Dallas, Tex.

Dallas, Tex., for instance, Dallas took the record with a larceny rate of 607.7 offenses per 100,000 residents. But less than 4 per cent of the Dallas larcenies were of the grand larceny sort, whereas the Capital's proportion was nearly 20 per cent.

The sweetest larceny record in the country was hung up by probably the last city one would suspect—Jersey City, N. J. Jersey City's larceny rate was only 15.4 offenses per 100,000 inhabitants, or less than 6 per cent of the Washington rate.

Looking around for possible reasons, it is found that Jersey City maintained the largest police force, in proportion to its population, of any city in the United States. For every 10,000 residents of Jersey City there were 35 policemen. For every 10,000 residents of Washington there were 29. That extra margin of six policemen in Jersey City's favor may have been just enough to hold its larceny rate down to its next-to-nothing showing.

Yet, on the other hand, Jersey City's burglary rate of 27.2 was not far below Washington's; so the extra-size police force may have had little to do with crime conditions.

In the third branch of thieving—the gentle art of stealing automobiles — Washington achieved the doubtful honor of ranking 63 per cent above the 36-city average. Automobile thieves, including the joy-riders whom Mr. Hoover has brought within his classification, netted from seven to eight cars a day in the Capital during the three months.

Auto Thieves Active In National Capital.

Many of these were recovered later, but the record is silent on that point. Washington is given an auto theft rate of 142.7 offenses per 100,000 population, which means that 690 cars were stolen in the city during the period covered. The 36-city average was 87 offenses.

Nevertheless, Washington's auto thieves could learn a lot if they were to take a week off and go to San Antonio, Tex., to brush up on their technique. San Antonio appears to have been the worst possible place in the United States to park one's car; the theft rate was 237 per 100,000 inhabitants. And at that rate, Washington motorists would have lost about 1,100 cars during the three months instead of the 690 chalked up in the report.

The Hoover figures tag Washington as a good harvest field for thieves, a better-than-average hunting ground for holdup artists and other robbers, average for brawlers who shoot and stab, good for murderers, and poor for criminals who prey on women.

There is, of course, another side to the story; captures and convictions. Of that, however, the Hoover survey does not deal.

No End of Books

Leo on the Lap.

LIONS, I had supposed, do not make the most comfortable of pets. As the youngest of cubs, kittenish and floppy-pawed and roly-poly, they might be amusing and harmless enough. But at the half-grown stage, 70 pounds of tooth, claw, and blood-lust, they are presumably another matter. At least I had thought so.

THEO. HALL.

But in as utterly engaging an animal story as I've ever read, J. H. Driberg, recently a British civil servant in Africa, tells a far different tale. "Engato: the Lion Cub" (Dutton, $1.50) reports the life and adventures of a tame lion which, from the size to be carried in the palm of one hand to that of full growth, never once had to be punished, never once harmed friend or stranger. It is all rather incredible and yet we are assured it is quite true.

* * *

Engato (which merely means lion in the Lango language) was picked up on one of Mr. Driberg's trips through his territory. Suckled first by goats, which it seemed careful not to scratch, it soon took to raw meat and throve mightily. It slept under Mr. Driberg's bed with the dogs, and had the free run of the place.

Lions and dogs are mortal enemies? Not these. The mongrel and the airedale and Engato played with each other endlessly, even teased each other without a whit of serious aftermath. The other pets around the place, a bush-buck, a marabout stork, a golden-crested crane, and an African hedgehog, were just as friendly and just as unconcerned. When Mr. Driberg went on safari, they all came along and squabbled jovially over possession of mud-puddles along the road.

Engato would climb around its master's neck, or sit in his lap. When it rollicked too boisterously around the mud house of an evening, Mr. Driberg would scratch Engato's stomach with a toe, and soon put it to sleep. One night when a leopard sneaked into the house to get the dogs, Engato, scarcely more than a cub, sent it flying down the path and returned swaggering, as if to say: "So much for leopards! Trust me!"

* * *

Engato was just as much a favorite among the natives. The Lango boys adored it, and the children petted it without restraint.

Engato was taken along on hunting parties, had a fracas with a warthog and was scared up a tree by its first sight of elephants, but very soon it learned to heel far better than the dogs. Indeed, Engato obeyed word or whistle instantly. Once, called in from the outskirts of a native village, it helped Mr. Driberg settle a troublesome dispute by its astonishing presence on the scene.

Along with anecdotes about the incomparable Engato, Mr. Driberg has a number of interesting little stories to tell of the native hunts and ceremonies, the lake tribes who live on floating islands, and other items of Africana.

* * * *

Then the time came for Mr. Driberg to go home on leave. He could leave Engato neither to the natives (who might fear its "magic" and do away with it or to the wild (for which Engato was quite unprepared). A zoo was the only solution.

Paraphrase of a conversation with the curator of the Zoological Gardens (Engato being outside the office):

Mr. D.: "Would you care to have a young lion for your zoo?"

C.: "We should be delighted, but we have no funds to buy a lion."

Mr. D.: "But I should be happy to present a lion."

C.: (dolefully): "Alas! We can not even afford the carriage from Africa."

Mr. D.: "I will deliver the lion, free of charge, at your door."

C. (far more cheerfully): "I thank you in the name of the society! When may I anticipate the pleasure of receiving your lion?"

Mr. D.: "Immediately, if you wish it." He opens the door and whistles to Engato, who comes bounding into the room. Whereat the curator nearly falls out of his chair in his haste to climb onto the table.

* * * *

Five years later Mr. Driberg went back to that zoo. He gave the whistle after they had opened the back door of the cage. And Engato, full-grown, leaped out, put its paws upon Mr. Driberg's shoulders, and nearly licked Mr. Driberg's ears off in its joy.

All this is true, as was said, and the author has told it vividly and impeccably. Children, I should think, would eat the book up. And not only they, either.

ROBERT JOHNS BULKLEY, Senator from Ohio. His devotion to duty kept Congress from adjournment on Saturday. Concentrating on a mere banking bill, he held up a housing bill report without which a motion to adjourn could not be made. Groomed at Harvard, he practiced law. Was elected to Sixty-second and Sixty-third Congresses. Elected to Senate, 1930, to fill vacancy left by death of Senator Theodore E. Burton. Reelected for full term, 1933. Had finger in much important banking legislation. Was member of House Banking Committee which framed Federal Reserve act and aided in creation of R. F. C. and its revision last year. He recently married Mrs. Helen Graham Robbins, of New York City. Speaks crisply, briefly in corporation lawyer manner. Quiet, reticent, noncommittal. Looks youthful, dresses indifferently. Is bland, bald with decorative fringe.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Public Debt Tops War-Time Peak

The gross public debt of the United States Government reached an all-time record high of $27,000,000,000 yesterday, surpassing the war-time peak of $26,596,701,648 reached on August 31, 1919, according to the United Press.

With this month's securities sale of $857,749,086, the public debt on June 15 stood at $27,005,438,125.

The Treasury, however, had a cash balance of $2,759,605,523 on June 15, whereas in August, 1919, it amounted to only $1,118,109,535, making the net debt at the present time still smaller than the war-time peak.

Tennessee "Blue Law" On Movies Faces Test

Memphis, Tenn., June 18 (AP). Charles Mensing, operator of a downtown theater, was fined $25 in city court today on a charge of operating a picture show yesterday in defiance of a Tennessee "Blue Law" prohibiting Sunday shows. He will appeal the case in a "test" of the law.

Patrons were allowed to attend a movie at Mensin's theater free of charge by paying 40 cents for a sandwich and a cold drink. He contends that since he did not charge for the movie that he did not violate the law.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

"The Wheels of Chance."

When H. G. Wells was in this country a few weeks ago, I told him how much I enjoyed his early novel "The Wheels of Chance." He remarked that its composition was at a date so distant that he had almost forgotten that he had ever written it. But I shall never forget either the book or my delight in discovering it.

It was in the year 1896. It was reviewing books for one of the New York newspapers; every now and then the paper would send me a batch of 30 or 40 books; I would look them over, and review those that for one reason or another appealed to me. I had read four or five out of one assortment, and was not at all impressed; then I happened to open the novel called "The Wheels of Chance," by a new and utterly unknown writer, named H. G. Wells.

The story describes the adventures of a clerk in a dry goods store. We first see him selling goods over the counter. Then comes his chance for a brief vacation, which he takes in England on a bicycle. Miniature adventures, microscopic expenses, tiny, romantic love affair with The Young Lady in Gray—everything cut small to fit the pattern of a small and wholly commonplace mind and body; yet the book has such winsome humor, such sympathy for the little people of the world, such fine descriptions of the English countryside, and such genuine pathos, that it was quite clear to me that English literature had gained a new novelist.

Who H. G. Wells was I naturally had no idea. But I saluted this novel with tremendous enthusiasm and after the lapse of nearly 40 years I love it still. For that matter it is Wells the novelist and not Wells the journalist, philosopher, reformer, theologian, socialist, that I care for. "Kipps," "Mr. Polly," "Tono-Bungay" I enjoyed far more than what some misguided people might call his more serious works.

Unlike most reformers, he has a gorgeous sense of humor—I think humor is a ground quality of his realistic stories.

He is one of the most prolific writers of modern times. In the first year that he published anything, the year 1895, he started off with four entirely different books. "The Wheels of Chance" came the next year, 1896.

I believe the book is out of print now, but it can be found in many second-hand book shops, and I am certain it will delight readers as much now as it did me in 1896, for I have read it several times since then.

First Essential in Any Game Is Keep Eye on the Ball

By Robert Quillen

A certain rich man who had need of a secretary placed in the public prints an advertisement that read as follows: "Wanted, a young man who can see the point and stick to it."

When a dozen applicants for the job had assembled in his office, the rich man said to them: "I shall tell you a story. Once upon a time there was a little rat named Toby. He was a greedy rascal and full of curiosity, and one day he chewed some matches that lay on a pantry shelf and set the house afire.

"The house was owned by a man named Smith. Mr. Smith was a prudent man who kept his property insured and he slept well at night because he felt fortified against loss.

"He did not sleep too well to escape from the burning house, but the building and all of its contents burned to the ground.

"The day after the fire, Mr. Smith made an unpleasant discovery. He discovered that it is much easier and simpler to get an insurance policy than to collect the money for damages.

"The agent who sold him the insurance was an affable gentleman and a good fellow who seemed to have no other ambition than to serve Mr. Smith. He saw Mr. Smith once a year to collect the premium, and each time he seemed to radiate generosity and kindliness.

"But a different man appeared after the fire. He came to 'adjust' Mr. Smith's claim against the company.

"Perhaps some experience with rogues had soured his disposition, but in any case he acted suspicious and his words and manner and tone of voice were offensive. It was obvious that he expected a battle and intended to allow Mr. Smith as little as possible.

"The whole business was distasteful to Mr. Smith, but he got all he had expected.

"That is the story. Now have you young men any questions to ask?"

The young men knew the test had come, and they tried to be smart.

"How much insurance did he have?" asked one.

"How much did he collect?" asked another.

"Was he overinsured?" asked a third.

"Is it necessary," asked another, "to be hard-boiled in dealing with people who wish to collect what is due them?"

But the last to speak got the job. "What," he asked, "became of Toby?"

Radio Waves and Ripples

ALTHOUGH N. B. C. and C. B. S. networks were cheated out of the final blast of Congress valiantly trying to lock doors and go home, the local boys are still on the alert to catch that last gavel tap.

Ted Church and Bob Trout, of WJSV, waited until midnight with the House, while colleague Harry Butcher held the fort on the Senate side. Representative William Irving Sirovich (New York) had prepared some songs and skits for the boys to sing, too.

Starting shortly after 8:30 p. m. WJSV filled in the time allowing various pages, doorkeepers, Senators, Representatives and Cabinet members to regale the air. The networks got the show for an hour until 10:30. After that Ted and Bob wiped perspiration away until midnight with their own crew in readiness. N. B. C., showing, similar tactics, held on grimly without even a prize fight to listen to.

Ted and Bob did some successful buttonholing. They coaxed plenty of air on to the air. Discounting the usual oratory and nasal gymnastics, here's what some of the luminaries told listeners:

Representative Sol Bloom (entrepreneur from Gotham)—"We haven't even thought of going home yet."

Mr. James A. Farley (also from Gotham)—"I thank the members for their sympathy."

Senator William H. King (Utah)—"I have just got started and this man Butcher won't let me tell what the Democrats have done and are going to do."

Senator Joseph T. Robinson (he made good out in Arkansas)—"It must be remembered that there will be much to do during the next session of Congress."

And all this, dear readers, was accomplished without one single page of prepared manuscript. Senatorial ad-libbing will force our Arthurs . . . Godfrey and Reilly . . . to look to their laurels yet.

* * * *

HOLLYWOOD, with its buffoonery, pathos, honest clap-trap and perfect hokum (some drama—much entertainment) has sent few stars to the air waves.

Maybe some of those movie queens and slick-haired heroes got by the doorman and slipped into a studio, but we didn't hear about it. Neither has a certain local radio official who is plenty alive to what goes on in the studios. Serious-minded but blithe, this person of our acquaintance observed recently:

"I haven't found a single movie star that went into radio and clicked * * * but I've seen out and out radio people go into the movies and click."

We could mention off-hand such people as Burns and Allen, Bing Crosby, the Mills brothers, Lanny Ross and perhaps that smiling young gentleman, Dick Powell. All came from radio networks. Most have clicked in a big way in recent screen entertainment.

But to get back to the serious-minded contention of that local radio official, the movies apparently sent few stars to radio fame. Our informant is so sure of this that she's writing a magazine article about it. If she's slipped up—tell us about it. What do you think?

Static.

Local "Quote of the Week"—Mary Courtland (with Sam Lanin's orchestra)—"Back In Tennessee (and I suppose the some thing is true of small towns in other States) movies and radio form our only entertainment. We know nothing of big stage stars, so their names alone are not enough to attract listeners. They must be good radio performers as well as prominent figures in large communities if they want to click with us 'hill billies.'"

NEWSPAPER opportunities for women will be discussed by Mrs. Eugene Meyer, vice president of The Washington Post, in an address over N. B. C. networks a week from today, June 26, at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. Meyer will be the guest of the Woman's Radio Review. Her talk will come from WRC's studios in Washington.

Whitecaps.

BLACKIE BEAR

By D. SAM COX

Blackie Always Will Love Aprons.

Last night when Bettie had tucked Jenny in bed, she came back

"Well," said Blackie, "that was a good nap I had in that big nest, but it came mighty near having a bad end. I reckon some of you would like to know what Grandpa Bear and Grandma Bear did when they missed me. They told me all about it that night . . . After they got through eating their dinner, Grandma went out to tell me if I would come in and eat decently I might finish my pie. But I wasn't out there! Then she called and called, but she didn't get any answer. Then she and Grandpa started out to hunt for me. One of them went down the creek to a little pool where I sometimes caught little fishes, and the other went to my sand-pile over back of the garden. But there was no Blackie at either place.

"They looked just anywhere and everywhere, behind rocks and bushes and trees, but she didn't find me. They called and called and called, and told me to come on back and get my pie and eat it just as I pleased, but I didn't hear them. From what they told me, they had a pretty bad afternoon of it, and away along 'most sundown they decided there was nothing else they could do and so they came backe to the house and sat down on the steps and just wondered and wondered and wondered what had become of me.

"Well, when I woke up in my nice nest, the sun was just going down, and something else was just coming down. The thing that woke me was the most awful scream that I ever heard in my life, and my eyes popped wide open. They saw darting toward my nest a great big eagle without any feathers on his head, and with a bill that looked like the briar hook that we found in Mr. Man's wagon. He was so close to me that I didn't have time to crawl out of the nest, so I just gave one big jump over the edge, and I began rolling bumpety-bump from one limb to another toward the ground. You can guess that I was doing some baby wooding while I was falling out of the tree, and it was so noisy that my big mamma heard me. She saw me bumping down from limb to limb, and she stretched out her apron to catch me. Well, I had goten many a cookie or something by pulling at that apron, but it never had seemed like so good an apron as it did when I fell into it out of reach of that eagle.

"And what did my big mamma do? Whip me? Not much! She just took me into the kitchen and told me to eat all the pie I wanted, but if I ever ran away again she would skin me, but she laughed when she said it."

L. W. Stayner, business college manager of McCook, Nebr., has kept a daily record of his life for the past 45 years. His library of personal recollections has a volume for each year since 1889, and in all he has written an estimated 4,000,000 words into this record.

Like Samuel Pepys, celebrated Englishman whose diary has become a landmark in English literature, Mr. Stayner has kept his diary in shorthand. He dictates from his notes to his business college students, and they transcribe for him.

Strange as it seems, the beautiful chrysanthemum that we know today was a rather common looking daisy generations ago when the Chinese first began to build it up by selecting the best of each crop to seed the next. Planters noted that in a field of daisies a few would excel all others. From these they took seeds for another crop, the best of which was selected for the next stand of daisies. Eventually, after generations of careful selection and hybridization, the beautiful chrysanthemum was produced.

Picture postcards, as manufactured by private firms, were invented by Heinrich Lange, a German stationer, about 1890. This was the first appearance of this kind of card, although stamped Government postcards for correspondence had then been in use for several years.

Lieut. Cutts Will Marry Miss Lane

White House Aid Engaged to Cousin of Envoy to Nicaragua.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

Of much interest to Capital society is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Dorothea Lane, daughter of Mr. Richard Hooper Lane, and the late Mrs. Lane, to Lieut. Richard Malcolm Cutts, jr., U. S. M. C., son of Col. Richard M. Cutts, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Cutts, who are making their home temporarily in Washington.

Miss Lane is one of the popular members of the younger sets of Washington society having made her debut here in 1928.

On the maternal side, she is a direct descendant of Gov. Strong, first Governor of Massachusetts, and on her father's side a direct descendant of Gov. Bradford, first Governor of the Plymouth Colony. Both her mother's and father's families have been closely associated with early New England history.

Studied in Capital.

Miss Lane attended the Baldwin School at Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Holton Arms in Washington; Brillamont at Lausanne, Switzerland, and later spent some time at schools in Florence, Italy and Paris. Miss Lane is a cousin of Mr. Arthur Lane, United States Minister to Nicaragua, and a niece of Miss Mabelle Lane, of New York; Mrs. Acosta Nichols, of New York and Oyster Bay, Long Island, and Mrs. F. Hallett Lovell, of New York and Edgartown, Mass.

Lieut. Cutts was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1923, and has been aid to the commandant of the Marine Corps since March, 1933. He also is one of the military aids at the White House.

Wedding in Autumn.

Lieut. Cutts is a descendant of John Cutts, first royal governor of New Hampshire; Sir William Pitt, Anna Hayne, sister of Dolly Madison; Francis Scott Key, Thomas Randolph of Tuckahoe, and Edward Lloyd of Wye House.

The wedding will take place in the early fall in Washington.

Miss Lane returned to Washington Sunday evening after spending the week-end in Philadelphia, and will entertain at a large luncheon today in her apartment at 2400 Sixteenth street. Miss Lane has as her guests Mrs. Sidney Bunting, wife of Lieut. Bunting, United States Navy, and Miss Emily Cookman, of Philadelphia. She will leave Washington shortly to spend the summer visiting first in Nantucket, and later at Edgartown, Mass., returning to the Capital late in August to make plans for her wedding.

Engagement to Marine Officer Announced

whose father, Mr. Richard H. Lane, has announced her engagement to Lieut. Richard M. Cutts, jr., U. S. M. C., son of Col. Richard M. Cutts, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Cutts. The wedding will take place in the early fall.

Mrs. Parrish, Jr., Fetes First Lady

Mrs. Roosevelt to Travel Today for New York.

Mrs. Roosevelt spent the week-end as the guest of her cousin, Mrs. Henry Parish, jr., of Llewellyn Park. She visited the Orange Memorial Hospital yesterday morning and in the afternoon was the guest of honor at a small reception in the Parish home. The First Lady will leave today for her home in New York.

Later in the week Mrs. Roosevelt will join the President aboard the Sequoia and will watch the Harvard-Yale boat races from the deck of the ship with him.

Mrs. James Roosevelt, mother of the President, sailed from New York last evening on the Europa. She was accompanied by her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fellowes Gordon and their children, Ian and Bruce.

Treasure Show Slated Thursday

National Woman's Country Club Is Sponsor.

The National Woman's Country Club will entertain Thursday from 3 to 7 o'clock, with a "Treasure Show" at the clubhouse.

Beautiful things, most of them of great historical value, will be shown, many of them for the first time: Miniatures, old silver, letters and photographs of famous people, an embroidered handbag 300 years old, and some valuable bits of old china, glass and furniture.

Filipinos to Hail Memory of Rizal

Banquet Tonight Marks Hero's Birthday.

Under the auspices of the Visayan Circle Inc., Filipino organization, an anniversary banquet and program will be given at the New Amsterdam Hotel tonight in honor of the birthday of Dr. Jose Rizal, Filipino national hero and martyr.

Mr. A. Aquino, chairman of arrangements, will preside. Mr. Diosdado Yap, president of the circle, will give an address of welcome. The Rev. John T. Tompkins, Georgetown University professor, who was actively connected with the Jesuits in the Philippines for ten years, will speak on the significance of the life of Dr. Rizal.

Mr. Cayetano Nagac will speak, Mr. Milton Buck will sing.

OFFICIAL and RESIDENT

Society Notes

The Ambassador of Cuba, Senor Dr. Manuel Marquez Sterling, went to New York Saturday to meet his son, Senor Dr. Carlos Marquez Sterling, who, with Senor Eugenio Castille, secretary to the Ambassador, arrived on the Morro Castle from Havana. They all arrived in Washington yesterday morning.

Mme. van Haersma de With, wife of the Minister of the Netherlands, will leave Washington Thursday for New York, and will sail Saturday on the Veendam for Europe, to spend the coming season in her summer home in Holland. She will return to this country in the early autumn. The Minister will join his wife in Europe later in the season.

Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, wife of Senator Henry W. Keyes, yesterday received the degree of doctor of letters from Bates College, in Maine. She was the guest of Senator and Mrs. Wallace H. White. Mrs. Keyes will return to Washington by plane today.

Mrs. Frank Noyes is at the Mayflower for a few days, and probably will leave Washington with Mr. Noyes on Thursday for their summer home at Winter Harbor, Me.

Crosses Announce Arrival of Son.

Mr. and Mrs. John H. Cross announce the birth of a son. Mrs. Cross was formerly Miss Ruth Fuller, daughter of Representative and Mrs. Claude Fuller.

Mrs. Robert J. Potts, of Waco, Tex., who has been visiting her brother, Maj. John F. Davis, in Washington for past two weeks, returned yesterday to her home.

The Countess de la Grandville, of Paris, is at the Wardman Park Hotel for several days.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Janes announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Sally Janes, to Dr. Charles Hageage, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hageage. The wedding will take place in Washington July 11.

Mrs. Mac Asbill, of Atlanta, has joined Mr. Asbill, a special assistant to the Attorney General, at the Shoreham.

Mr. A. Mitchell Palmer, former Attorney General and Mrs. Palmer, were in the crystal room of the Willard at luncheon today, as was Mr. Jouett Shouse, former chairman of the Democratic committee.

Rev. Ching Chong Hung Guest of Chancellor.

The Rev. and Mrs. Ching Chong Hung and their young son, Wei Ling, are the guests of Chancellor and Mrs. Joseph M. M. Gray, of the American University. The Rev. Mr. Hung and Dr. Gray were associates in Detroit, Mich.

Mrs. Ralph Modjeska and Mrs. Ralph Lauder Smith, of New York, are at the Shoreham. Mr. Smith, who accompanied them to the Capital for the week-end, flew back to New York Sunday. Mr. Modjeska will arrive from New Orleans to join his wife and Mrs. Smith this evening, and they will motor back to New York together.

Miss Elizabeth Cunningham, of Atlanta, her brother, Lieut. W. A. Cunningham, and Miss Lolita Corzelius, also of Atlanta, and Lieut. Rudolph Green, of Little Rock, Ark., are visiting in the Capital and are at the Willard.

Students, past and present, and graduates of the University of Southern California, who are in Washington, will have a party Friday evening at the Shoreham.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Wittshire, of Upperville, Va., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Jessie Mae Wittshire, to Mr. Ogden Armstead Payne, of Chevy Chase, Md., Saturday, in Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Payne will make their home in Chevy Chase.

Elizabeth Blair Engaged to Wed

Betrothal to Mr. Potter, of Paris, Announced.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Blair, of New York, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Cornell Blair, to Mr. John F. Potter, son of Mr. Thomas Fuller Potter, of Paris, France.

Miss Blair was gradauted from Miss Chapin's school and later studied art with Fernand Leger in Paris. She has exhibited her work in New York and Paris. She is a great-granddaughter of Ezra Cornell, founder of Cornell University.

Mr. Potter took his bachelor's degree at the Sorbonne in 1928 and later was graduated from Yale, from which university he also received the degree of doctor of philosophy. He established a record by winning the intercollegiate fencing foil championship for three successive years and was a member of the Olympic fencing and skiing teams. He is a member of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity, the Yale Club, the Island Tennis Club, the New York Athletic Club and the Golfers' Club of Paris. Mr. Potter is a nephew of Mr. and Mrs. Roy McWilliams, of Biarritz, France.

Youngs Congratulated on Birth of a Son

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Young are receiving congratulations upon the birth of a son, Bernard Joseph, on June 5.

Hogg—Castle Wedding Held At St. Alban's

Couple Leaves on Journey to New England States.

A wedding of interest to friends here and in Hawaii took place at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon when Miss Isabel Amelia Hogg, daughter of Mrs. John Ashton Hogg, of Honolulu, became the bride of Mr. Robert Wellington Castle, of Washington, son of Mrs. Frank A. Castle, of Boston. The ceremony was performed at St. Alban's Church, the Rev. Charles T. Warner officiating.

The church was decorated with palms, white gladioli and Easter lilies. Mr. Walter H. Nash played wedding music.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Mr. George A. Hogg, of Scranton, Pa. She wore a cream satin gown made on princess lines with a train. Her veil was of tulle, caught at each side with a cluster of orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Byrd Lybrand was the maid of honor, wearing a white lace ensemble, with blue accessories, and carrying a bouquet of delphiniums, talisman roses, and baby's breath. Mrs. George A. Hogg, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor, also wearing a white lace ensemble with blue accessories and carrying a bouquet like that of the maid of honor.

The best man was Mr. Walter M. Edwards, and the ushers were Mr. Theodore Cook and Mr. Fletcher Plumly.

A reception for relatives and a few close friends was held at the home of the bride, 2811 Thirty-fifth street northwest. Mrs. George R. Ewart, aunt of the bride, and Mrs. Frank A. Castle, mother of the bridegroom, assisted in receiving.

The bride wore as her going away costume a pale blue boucle ensemble with navy blue accessories.

The couple started on a wedding trip through New England. They will be at home in Washington after July 1.

Out-of-town guests were Mrs. George R. Ewart, of Honolulu; Mrs. Frank A. Castle, of Boston; Mr. Lindsay Ewart, cousin of the bride, also of Honolulu; Mr. and Mrs. George A. Hogg and Miss Mildred Johns, all of Scranton, Pa.

Mr. Rust Weds Violet Truman

Garden Scene of Bridal Rites; Couple Depart on Journey.

The wedding of Miss Violet Marie Truman, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Truman, of Takoma Park, to Mr. Haakon Carlon Rust, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. J. O. Rust, of Oslo, Norway, took place the evening of June 13, at 8 o'clock in the garden of the Trumans' home.

The ceremony was performed by the bride's father. Miss Truman was given in marriage by Representative K. E. Keller. She wore a simple gown of white lace made on long lines, with long-fitted sleeves, a high, draped neckline and a long train. Her veil of tulle was caught into a cap of rare old lace and she carried calla lilies and blue delphinium.

Mrs. Howard E. Metcalfe was the matron of honor. She wore a garden frock of orchid mousseline de soie and carried a bouquet of summer flowers.

Miss Helen Lund and Miss Eva Waldorf were the bridesmaids. Miss Lund was costumed in yellow mousseline de soie and Miss Waldorf wore blue. They both carried muffs of pink roses. Little Miss Myrna Truman, sister of the bride, was the flower girl. She wore a dainty frock of pink organdy and carried a basket of rose petals.

Mr. Ethelbert Kock was best man and the ushers were Mr. E. M. Waters, of New York, and Mr. Frank Gill. A reception was held for the wedding guests. Mrs. Truman, mother of the bride, had on a becoming gown of cream-colored lace and a shoulder corsage of roses. Later, Mr. Rust and his bride left by motor for a trip through the South. They will make their home in Washington.

Robinsons Hosts At Yacht Party

Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Robinson, of historic Rosecroft, St. Mary's City, Md., entertained a large party of relatives and friends aboard their yacht, Cachalot, during the Maryland Tercentenary celebration Saturday.

The party included Jane and Ann Robinson, young daughters of the host and hostess; Mr. A. M. Nevius and his son, Jack, of Washington; Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Owings, of Fair Haven, Md.; Dr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Latimer, Mr. and Mrs. Dwight B. Galt, Miss Betty Galt and Dwight B. Galt, jr., Miss Mary Louise Carr, Miss Eleanor Brooks and Egbert F. Tingley, all of Hyattsville; Thomas Ashcom Gourley, of Holland Point, Md.; Mrs. Beulah P. Sturgeon, of Northeast, Md.; Mrs. Nadine F. Harrison, of Berlin, Md.; Mrs. Alfred D. Bailey, jr., of Bladensburg, Md., and Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Ady, of Rockville, Md.

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson have just purchased the Cachalot, a yacht which was used by Col. Charles A. Lindberg for cruising in search of his slain son.

Clyde Leightys Attend Daughter's Graduation

Dr. and Mrs. Clyde Leighty have returned to their home in Lyon Village, Va., from Richmond, where they attended the graduation of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Leighty, from West Hampton College, University of Richmond, on June 12.

Miss Leighty received a bachelor of science degree. Mrs. Raymond Colton, of Washington, also attended the graduation of her sister.

Dunns Sojourn In Pennsylvania

Mr. McKinney. Returns From Princeton.

Commander and Mrs. Arthur Wallace Dunn, who have been spending some time with the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. McKenney, at their country home, Handley Hall, near Kensington, Md., have gone to Pittsburgh to spend a few days.

Commander and Mrs. Dunn returned to Washington several weeks ago from the West Coast, where the former was stationed.

Mr. McKenney returned to Washington last evening from Princeton, N. J., where he and his brother, Col. Charles A. McKenney, attended the fiftieth reunion of Mr. McKenney's class at Princeton University. While at the university they occupied the rooms of young Charles A. McKenney, jr., who has just completed his junior year at Princeton.

Dinner Fetes Porter—Mayo Bridal Party

Parents of Bride-to-Be Are Hosts to Wedding Attendants.

Mr. Claude Rodman Porter, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and Mrs. Porter entertained at a dinner party last evening at the Shoreham for members of the bridal party of their daughter, Miss Northa Louise Porter, and her fiance, Lieut. Richard Walden Mayo, U. S. A., who are to be married tomorrow evening at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church.

In the group were Mrs. Richard Hise, of Des Moines, Iowa, sister of the bride, who will be matron of honor, and the six bridesmaids, Miss Margaret Waite, of London, England; Miss Margaret Moore, of Alexandria, Va.; Miss Helen Lingenfelter, of Des Moines; Mrs. Charles Hurd, Miss Dorothy Porter and Miss Mary Porter.

Also Mr. James Mayo, of Arlington, Mass., brother of Lieut. Mayo, who will serve as best man, and the six ushers, Lieut. John Berry, of Fort Bragg, N. C.; Lieut. John Honeycutt, Lieut. David Erskine, Lieut. F. I. Pohl, Lieut. Alexander Stone and Lieut. Richard Yule, all of U. S. A.

Additional guests at the dinner included Lieut. Mayo's mother, Mrs. Jeremiah Mayo, of Arlington, Mass.; Mrs. Samuel Boutin, of Cape Girardeau, Mo., grandmother of the bride-to-be; Mrs. Albert E. Nickerson, of Arlington; the Rev. Isaiah Mayo, of Lewiston, Me.; Mr. George Boutin Porter, brother of the bride, and Mr. Charles Hurd.

Culbertson on Bridge

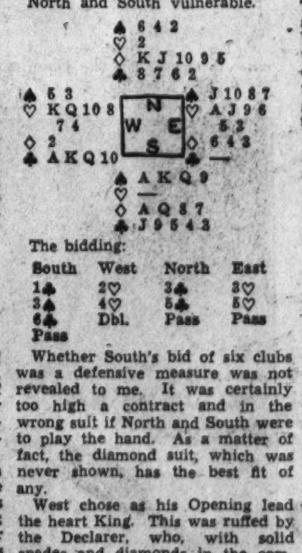
An Indifferent Defense.

If the Declarer, in carrying out his plan of the play of the hand, decides that it is advantageous to immediately remove the opposing trumps, he rarely finds his opponents of a like mind. Generally, in Bridge as in other forms of conflict, it is the effort of one side to frustrate the plans of the other, but there are occasions when a spirit of cooperation may be developed, as was the case with the hand below, played at the Embassy Club in Toronto in a Rubber game recently. The penalty suffered by the Declarer, according to Toronto reports, sets a new high record for losses in that city. If this is high for Toronto, I might say that the capital of Ontario "hasn't seen nothing yet."

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	2♡	3♣	3♡
3♠	4♡	5♣	5♡
6♣	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

Whether South's bid of six clubs was a defensive measure was not revealed to me. It was certainly too high a contract and in the wrong suit if North and South were to play the hand. As a matter of fact, the diamond suit, which was never shown, has the best fit of any.

West chose as his Opening lead the heart King. This was ruffed by the Declarer, who, with solid spades and diamonds in the combined hands, elected to take out the trumps held by the opponents. This method met the most hearty and efficient cooperation of the West player, who won the first trump trick with the Ten, then laid down the Ace, King and Queen of trumps, and followed with five good heart tricks for a set of eight tricks, a total of 4,400 points, plus 100 for the honors held.

The hand is a very remarkable and interesting one from another standpoint. I wonder just exactly how the West player felt in the interim after his partner bid five hearts and before South had made the bid of six clubs.

Tomorrow's Hand.

East, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Lillian Shott Becomes Bride Of Mr. Brant

At an informal wedding Saturday Miss Mary Lillian Shott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh I. Shott, of Bluefield, W. Va., became the bride of Mr. Gerald Clark Brant, jr., of Washington. The wedding took place at noon at Lake Place, the home of the bride's parents.

The bride entered the drawing room with her father, and the ceremony was performed in the presence of a few intimate friends before a background of pink and white dogwood and mountain laurel. The other rooms of the house and the wide veranda were decorated with garden flowers.

The bride wore a smart caped linen suit with an organdie blouse shading from palest yellow through orange to deep brown and a becoming little brimmed hat of yellow felt.

Mr. Philip Delano Brant was best man for his brother. A buffet luncheon was served immediately following the services. The couple left later for a motor trip. They will be at home after July 1, at 1919 Nineteenth street.

Young Mrs. Brant attended Hollins College, Roanoke, Va. Her father represented the Fifth District of West Virginia in Washington for several terms and is the owner and publisher of the Bluefield Telegraph and the Sunset News.

Mr. Brant is the son of Lieut. Col. Gerald C. Brant, Air Corps, U. S. A., now stationed at Fort Shafter, Honolulu, and of Mrs. Ethel Cushing Brant, of Washington.

Capt. J. F. Battley Attends Wedding

Capt. Joseph F. Battley, deputy NRA administrator, has returned from Chicago, where he served as best man for his brother, Mr. Halson R. Battley, at the latter's wedding to Miss Myrtle B. Martin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur V. Martin, of Minneapolis, Thursday evening at St. Chrysostem Church, the Rev. Edward Shannon officiating. Only a few friends witnessed the ceremony.

Mrs. Norine Hornbecker, of Harrisonburg, Va., and Tulsa, Okla., who served as matron of honor, wore a figured crepe gown made with a cowl neck and long tight sleeves. Her large picture hat was of eggshell straw.

Daughter Named By Clementsons

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Clementson 2d, of Ardmore, Pa., are receiving congratulations on the birth of their second daughter, Hallie Heritage, born on June 12. Mrs. Clementson is the daughter of Representative and Mrs. Harry Clay Ransley, of Pennsylvania.

The name Heritage is taken from one of Mrs. Ransley's colonial ancestors, Richard Heritage, who sat in the Council of the King in New Jersey. The first grandchild of the Ransleys, Abigail Abbott, was named for a Revolutionary ancestor.

Mrs. Ransley spent the winter and early spring season at the Mayflower, where Mr. Ransley is remaining until the adjournment of Congress.

Miss Lewis Will Wed.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Leech Lewis, of Kensington, Md., have issued invitations to the wedding of their daughter, Miss Catherine L. Lewis, to Mr. Edmund Noyes on Saturday, June 30, at 4:30 o'clock, at Bethlehem Chapel of the Cathedral of St. Peter and St. Paul. Mr. Noyes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund S. Noyes, also of Kensington.

Miss Wittshire Weds.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Wittshire, of Upperville, Va., announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Jessie Mae Wittshire, to Mr. Ogden Armstead Payne, of Chevy Chase, Md., yesterday, in Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Payne will make their home in Chevy Chase.

Psychiatrist Advises Vacation That Gives Complete Change from Daily Routine

Girl Graduates Seek Jobs in Government

Ambition to Teach No Longer Rules Majority Leaving College; More Find Employment in Capital This Year.

IN contrast to her decade-ago predecessor whose ambition centered around a teaching position, the 1934 girl graduate has little hope of becoming a schoolmistress.

For even though jobs are easier to find than they were a year ago, girls are headed toward different kinds of work than they were entering four years ago.

So thinks Mrs. Vinnie Barrows of the employment bureau of George Washington University.

"While graduates this year are not having as difficult a time finding jobs as those of a year ago, teaching positions are still hard to get around Washington because the District school system is supplied with instructors through the Wilson Teachers' College. Consequently, the average graduate—even when she has prepared for an educational career—looks to the Government for employment."

Mrs. Barrows explained this was due partly to the fact that higher salaries were paid to those filling stenographic positions in Government offices than those beginning in other lines of work.

Many Learn to Type.

"Of course, when a girl wants such a place," Mrs. Barrows went on, "she must have some special training. For instance, she has to know how to type and write shorthand. In view of this, many of our recent graduates have already enrolled in local business colleges. Looking forward to a Government job, they feel it is better to take a business course because such a position pays much better than almost anything open to those who have little experience."

Some graduates take clerical jobs with the Government, she pointed out, while others seek places behind the counters of department stores. A few of those who finished the course in home economics have accepted jobs with restaurants and cafes.

"The average salary expected by our graduates is $20 a week," she said. "Naturally, some have to be contented with much less than that at first. Others, fortunate enough to procure a stenographic job in the Government, will begin at perhaps $120 a month. But no matter what type of work the graduate seeks, the outlook—despite the fact most employers seem to want trained workers at beginners' salaries—is much better than last year."

Miss Elizabeth Carmichael, assistant to the registrar of American University, concurred with the opinion of Mrs. Barrows that graduates today have a better chance for employment than those of last year.

Training at Premium.

"While there seems to be a tendency among executives to employ college graduates in preference to those who have not finished their academic educations," she said, "they prefer those who also have some type of special training. Many of our students, therefore, enter a business college after they have finished here.

"Some—because they have taken shorthand and typewriting along with their regular college course—are fortunate enough to get Government jobs at once. This last year we had some senior students holding temporary jobs with the Government at salaries as high as $1,600. Most of these have hopes of getting permanent appointments later on."

A few girls, she said, still hope to find teaching jobs somewhere. A greater number hope to into teaching eventually after gaining experience and earning some money in other fields.

"One of our men graduates recently accepted a position with a local trust company that has given jobs to other American University students. Starting in with a low salary, he will have an opportunity, probably, to build up to a good position.

"Of course, while the job situation is improving for graduates, it is not yet ideal. But once she gets a position, the girl with an academic degree is more likely to forge ahead than the individual who has not finished college."

Women Voters Face Two-Year Reform Drive

Taxes and Civil Service Changes to Be Topics Here Next Week.

PLANS for mobilization of the membership of the National League of Women Voters, for a two-year tax and civil service reform campaign, will be one of several important decisions put up to the League's board of directors meeting next week in Washington.

The meeting will be the first in Washington of a recently elected new board, under the leadership of Miss Marguerite M. Wells, of Minneapolis. Five-day sessions, beginning next Monday, will take place at Fairmont School, 1711 Massachusetts avenue.

• • • •

A new National finance executive committee has been created, Mrs. Street announced yesterday. It includes Miss Belle Sherwin, former National president; Miss Katharine Ludington, Old Lyme, Conn., former finance chairman; Miss M. Louise Griffith, New York; Mrs. Frank P. Hixon, Chicago; Miss Florence Harrison, New London, Conn., and Mrs. Elsie A. Zinsmeister, Louisvlle, National treasurer.

Beta Chi Session.

BETA CHI National Sorority will hold its sixth National convention Thursday through Saturday of this week at South Bend, Ind. The South Bend and Elkhart chapters will be hostess chapters.

Delegates from Washington's eight chapters, together with Miss Hilda Shomo, president; Mrs. Mae Cole, treasurer, and two guests from Pi Chapter will leave tonight for the convention.

• • • •

The delegates are Miss Margaret Dougherty and Miss Grace Dile, Alpha Chapter; Miss Miriam Dreager and Miss Dorothea Welsh, Gamma; Miss Mary Bryan, Miss Isobel Steig and Miss Virginia Mason, Eta; Miss Mary Costello and Miss Evelyn Berger, Mu; Miss Lucille Bonucelli and Mrs. Dorothy O'Brien, Xi; Miss Dorothy Davis and Miss Joe Hummer, Pi; Miss Louise Mills and Miss Theresa Trant, Rho; Miss Garland Pyles, Upsilon.

• • • •

Business sessions will be held each morning, with the afternoons set aside for sightseeing.

All of the delegates will assemble Thursday evening for a novel reception. Each member will be gowned in evening dress of grandmother's day.

Council Meeting.

THE BUSINESS Women's Council will meet at 8 o'clock tonight in the Chapel of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church. A musicale will be given under the direction of Mrs. J. Newton Baker.

The council will be addressed at the devotional period at 6:45 o'clock by Mrs. David W. Lum. Supper will be served from 5 to 6:15 o'clock.

A picnic will be held by the philanthropic section of the Petworth Woman's Club this afternoon in the garden of Mrs. Lyster Dewey, 4512 Ninth street.

A luncheon for the benefit of Hope Council of the Sons and Daughters of Liberty will be served today at the home of the past State councilor, Mrs. Sadie Jenkins, 614 I street southeast.

PILLAR TO POST

How Temperament Grows.

THE ARTISTIC temperment is not confined to the actors in the Roadside Theater company but extends to scene painters, costume designers, stage technicians, and even to scene shifters and just plain carpenters.

Eldred Wilson, one of those who find carpentry a relaxation in the Little Theater group of youthful Washingtonians, had a fit of temperment just before the opening production. He hurled a hammer the length of the abandoned factory on the road to Rockville that has been transformed into a playhouse.

• • • •

It is believed he broke some kind of a hammer-throwing record because the building is a very long, narrow one, with large windows lining either side in modern factory fashion, making it ideal for their purpose this summer.

• • • •

After many nights in succession of working until 2 and 3 o'clock in the morning, driving nails in the interest of art, he found he was missing more times than he was hitting. Others in the assiduous company were in the same fagged condition, but did not understand the reason for their frazzled nerves.

• • • •

There were recriminations and even tears were shed by some of the girl scene painters and lettering artists. Miss Edith Allen, an older head—she is the daughter of a captain in the Navy and studied stage designing and technique at Yale—advised a rest.

• • • •

The next night the Roadside Theater was dark and deserted, but upon a Saturday afternoon it became a hive of activity again with girls in shorts and boys minus their shirts working together in the greatest harmony.

Poetic Policeman.

WHENEVER the Senators feel that they need especial protection from importuning constituents, as f'rinstnace last Saturday night when the lobby to their cloakroom was filled with a clamoring mob making last-minute demands, Edward Brown, Capitol policeman, is stationed at the door leading to the inner sanctum.

• • • •

His aspect is formidable indeed, he being 6 feet 9 inches tall, and built in proportion. Yet he is not the bruiser he appears. Although 2 inches taller than Carnera, with bulging muscles, he is not the least bit interested in prize fighting.

• • • •

He is fond of reading and he would even like to turn his hand to writing scenarios. And if he did they would be about natural people and not the "false life" (his own words) about him on the Hill. He is a gentle soul, sadly disillusioned with the humanity that parades daily before his eyes.

• • • •

Born on a large farm near Culpeper, he grew up thinking that man was the highest order of being, but after nine years spent around the Capitol he wonder in his more depressed moments if man is not the lowest creature made. Dissappointed in people, there are only three things that can thrill him now—the Lincoln Memorial, Lee's home and the dome of the Capitol.

• • • •

With a twinkle in his eye, he said that instead of being the giant he is, he would prefer being a gray squirrel in the woods or maybe one of those pretty, spotted butterflies. And he is remarkable for being a policeman who has picked out his own epitaph, and an appropriate one. It is a passage from Jeremiah.

America's Touring Craze Gets Approval of Dr. W. A. White

Pack the Wife Off and Scatter Ashes on the Rugs for Two Weeks if That Is Bliss, Hospital Head Tells Husbands.

Vacation! Magic word of summer, conjuring visions of rest under green shade trees, of travel over winding roads, of flight from the petty and vexatious duties of everyday life. Everyone plans, or at least hopes for some kind of a vacation. What shall it be? How can the most be made of the precious week or two weeks that are peculiarly one's own? The following is the first of a series of articles on vacation needs and possibilities.

By Virginia Lee Warren.

IT'S WHAT you do on a vacation, not where you go, that matters.

One person may prefer to lie under a pine tree on a wind-swept hill. Another may decide to remain in his own cramped apartment, reading books he has not had time to enjoy while working. Still another may hop joyfully into an ancient gasoline buggy, cover six States in 14 days despite tire casualties and an ailing carbureter. At the end of their vacations all three will be equally refreshed, rested.

"Because they did exactly the things they wanted to do," is the way Dr. William A. White, noted psychiatrist and superintendent of St. Elizabeths Hospital, explains it.

Although he seldom gets a vacation himself, Dr. White knows more about the effects of vacations than those who take them. He has observed that self-expression acts as a soothing oil on the tensed nerves of those with creative ability; that movement is a form of relaxation for the restless person who has been cooped in an office most of the year.

"In this industrial age thousands of men and women are forced to do work they find uncongenial," said Dr. White yesterday morning in his office at St. Elizabeths. "They are the clock-watchers; the ones who begin the day with a feeling of boredom and who can hardly wait for quitting time. For them a vacation should be a time when they may do exactly as they please."

A change of scene, advocated by many veteran vacationists, has only one virtue in the opinion of the psychiatrist.

"While a person is working, his energy is expended in certain definite channels. A change of scene is likely to create new channels for that energy," said Dr. White.

"But every individual is a law unto himself," he hastened to add. "Some individuals relax best while traveling, others while in the country, and others in the city."

The length of a vacation is more important than the surroundings in which it is spent, he said. The person who takes three days off at frequent intervals does not derive as much benefit from his rest periods as the person who takes two weeks or a month.

Bodily Reserves Rebuilt.

"During a vacation of two weeks to two months, energy can be stored up for the remainder of the year," explained Dr. White. "But when a person rests only a few days at a time he can't accumulate much energy. What little he does manage to store away is soon used up again."

He laid down no rules for getting the most out of one's vacation.

"Each individual must decide how, where, and when to spend his vacation if he is going to enjoy it," he said.

The reason so few men genuinely enjoy their vacations is their wives insist upon tagging along, one Washington physician believes. Although he was unwilling for his name to be used, he was willing to say plenty upon the subject.

"The American woman won't let her husband get out of her sight," declared the doctor. "The wise European woman lets her husband have an occasional week-end off without asking a flock of questions when he comes home. But the average American woman has not brought herself to this point of view."

Rest for Wife Also.

"If a woman had her home all to herself for a wek or so she might find it the most restful place in the world. She could spend her mornings in bed, wouldn't need to worry about meals, and could go and come as she pleased while the master of the house was getting mosquito-bitten at his favorite fishing spot.

"Or the wife might go away and leave husband at home," continued the physician. "He could potter around the place, take the radio apart, scatter newspapers and cigar ashes all over the house, and have a thoroughly grand time. For the husband of a too-meticulous housewife this is the most restful and satisfying of all vacations."

Most persons become worn out, not through work, but through constant little annoyances, this physician has noticed. Problems that seem colossal at home take on a trivial aspect to the man or woman driving down a peaceful country road hundreds of miles from the scene of daily struggle with small grievances.

"The great American habit of going as fast and as far as possible during a rest period is not as foolish as it may appear," declared the doctor. "No matter how physically tired the driver of a car may become as he crosses a dozen State boundaries, he is really having a rest. He has changed his scene, he has been in the open air, and his physical fatigue will leave no lasting scar."

Girls Wearing Tennis Shorts Shock Kansans

Many Voices Also Raised Against Men Bathing in Trunks.

TOPEKA KANS., June 19 (Spl.).—Kansas is again a battleground over dress. In this State, where blue laws have long been an issue, the burning questions of the day are:

Should men be allowed to swim only in trunks?

Should women be permitted to play golf and tennis in shorts?

These matters are being debated in many towns and newspapers. Clergymen and women's clubs are lining up for and against the wearers of shorts and trunks.

Topeka authorities recently were deluged with a series of protests after police had ordered men swimmers clad only in trunks out of city pools. The city has since modified the order to allow swimming in shorts.

Emporia, home of William Allen White, has announced proudly that it will be regulated this summer "only by the laws of decency."

"The city has no rules for dress except those prohibiting indecent exposure," Mayor Frank Lostutter said. "Shorts and trunks are not indecent clothing for either men or women."

Some of the Kansas towns have become reconciled to men in trunks but are still horrified at the shorts in which girls are appearing on tennis courts. Some of the girls brought the style home with them from college.

Not such a stir over dress has been raised since about 20 years ago when a woman superintendent of schools attempted to stop women teachers from rouging and dancing and men teachers from smoking.

The discussion of shorts also recalls the zealous antics of Carry Nation, Myra McHenry and other early reformers.

With the abolition several years ago of the State law against the sale of cigarettes, Kansas has been gradually losing its place as the Puritan stronghold of the West. In the present controversy over shorts, bets are being laid that the younger element will win.

Baseball's Fun, if Not Art, As Debs' Teams Practice It

WITH a miscellaneous collection of shorts for uniforms and a rather sketchy idea of the rules of the game, Senators' daughters, debutantes, former, sub and present, and other young and energetic members of the feminine wing of Capital society, gather on a vacant lot every Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock for a baseball workout.

This display of Sabbath energy was brought about by something similar on the part of young husbands and male friends who exercise away that Sunday morning feeling, at football in the fall and baseball in the spring. The girls used to get up early to go and watch them.

After spending several seasons listening to their conferes urging each other to "take your time, old man," "give it a ride" and "wait for a good one," the idea of forming exclusively feminine teams arose.

The Urchins Fill In.

The team is not exclusively feminine, however. The first time it appeared it was necessary to chase several small boys from the improvised diamond. Remorse caused the girls to invite them back to fill vacant outfield positions. Now the small boys appear regularly every Sunday.

Lack of an umpire confuses the game somewhat.

"Arguments consume mose of the morning," admitted Miss Jean Peebles, who can slide to home with the best of them. "In fact, about the only professional things about our games are the ball and bat. They're correct."

How about this early rising on Sundays?

"We feel all the better for it," said Miss Peebles, as if surprised they should. "No church? No church.

"We probably wouldn't go even if we didn't play baseball."

Season's End at Hand.

These feminine teams will break up soon. People are going on week-end trips or away for the summer and the weather's getting too hot. When fall comes and the male baseball team undergoes its seasonal metamorphosis into a football team will the girls stick to their policy of playing instead of merely cheering?

"Maybe," said Miss Peebles. "You never can tell."

Among the members of the baseball teams are the Misses Laura Barkley, Mary Murray Hume, Frances Mathews, Betty West, Jeanne Richards, Sidney Thompson, Helen Peebles, Christine Ekengren, Happy Ramsey, Phyllis Hight, Mrs. Bowman MacArthur and Mrs. Kenneth Murray.

Splash Glory Paves Path To Marriage

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

GIRLS who are eager to marry should take up swimming, for there seems to be some mysterious connection between winning a swimming championship and winning a husband.

One peculiarity of this state of affairs is that the marriages are usually a surprise, even to the friends and teammates of the swimmers. It must be a bit disconcerting to dive into the pool of a morning, look about for the friend you expect to practice with, and then learn she is honeymooning in the next State.

A war marriage was the first to start girl swimmers down the romantic path of elopement. Claire Galligan, the first official women's swimming champion in this country, added Finney to her name in 1917, when she married a swimmer she met on the Coast, who shortly after went across in the war.

Aileen Riggan Young, champion swimmer at 14 in the 1920 Olympics, and increasingly famous in succeeding years, was married for six months before it was known. She was married in Italy, and since she and her husband didn't understand what the official said in the ceremony, they got married again when they returned, to hear how it was done.

A frantic letter from her mother was the first word heard at the Women's Swimming Association of New York of the marriage of Martha Norelius, winner of the 400-meter championship in 1928, who eloped at the age of 19.

The first of the Olympic marriages was that of Alice Lord, diver on the first women's Olympic swimming team, and Landon, high jumper in the same games. A majority of the girl swimmers' marriages have been to men met through the swimming game. Betty Becker, high diving champion in 1928, married Clarence Pinkston, whom she met on a trip to the coast to compete in the Nationals.

Now we have Eleanor Holm, who has married Arthur Jarrett, the radio singer. Success in swimming led her to Hollywood and a successful venture in moviedom, but she broke her contract last year to return and defend her back-stroke title in the National meet. She is one of the few who have continued swimming after marriage.

The number of early marriages among girl swimmers, Miss Charlotte Epstein thinks, from her experience as a member of the Olympic women's swimming committee, is in large due to the broad social opportunities of swimmers competing around the National circuit.

WHATEVER THE SECRET—and Charlotte Epstein says it's their unusual social opportunities—women swimming champions seem to have a great deal of luck in landing husbands. The latest to marry is winsome Eleanor Holm Jarrett, above. But before her there were Claire Galligan Finney, Aileen Riggan Young, Martha Norelius, Alice Lord and Betty Becker Pinkston.

Teachers to Discuss Marital Preparation

NEW YORK, June 19 (Spl.).—Scientific preparation for marriage will be stressed in a conference to be held here June 30 to July 2, preceding the thirty-fifth summer session of Columbia University.

The conference will be sponsored by Teachers College of the university, the American Social Hygiene Association and the American Home Economics Association.

What Today Means

"Gemini."

If June 19 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:45 a. m. to 12:45 p. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m. and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:45 to 8:45 a. m., from 12:45 to 2:45 p. m., and from 5:45 to 7:45 p. m.

Business on this date may probably prove rather "spotty." Salesmen will have to exert themselves to an unusually high degree, and exercise a great deal of patience. Tact will be required in handling money matters. Creditors will display good judgment if they treat their debtors with consideration, and not be too insistent in their demands. There is a strong probability that an invitation will be extended to you, and it might be advisable to accept it. There will be a great deal of informal entertaining done during this week, and in accepting invitations be cautious that some of them will not involve your spending more money than you can afford to right at this time. Affairs of the heart will flourish, and persistent wooers may have their long deferred question answered.

If a woman and June 19 is your natal day, good fortune is going to be evinced in some gratifying form before many days have passed. Your placid nature and sense of justice are both going to help you to gain some very influential friends. They in turn are going to be of assistance in the securing of an objective you have your heart set on gaining. In love affairs you will be fortunate. Avoid being too "gushing," for it might make people doubt your sincerity. Remember, "charity begins at home," and if a glib individual tries to talk you out of some money, keep this thought foremost in your mind.

The child born on June 19, upon reaching its teens, is very apt to display a tendency to cultivate a number of mannerisms copied principally from some screen hero or heroine. Displaying exasperation will do no good, but a small dose of good natured ridicule will prove a cure.

The man born on June 19 has, as a rule, one trait that he should try and overcome; a tendency to harbor resentment. If you will learn to "forget and forgive," you will be much happier. Possessing as you do so many splendid qualities, if you will master this one, your advancement will gain in rapidity. You are due to have some very agreeable surprises in business. In domestic affairs you will find clear "sailing," and married life may prove the medium you need through which to secure contentment.

Shop Teaches How to Knit With Purchase

Or if Customers Prefer Finished Apparel Is for Sale.

DAVIS—1—WOM——TUES—
By Ruth Anne Davis.

WITH the thermometer boiling at 90 degrees, it was certainly no time to find a knitting nook. But find one we did, half hidden away on one of the coolest, shadiest streets near town. It's a small shop, but quite large enough for shelves on shelves of knitting yarn, counters of sports sweaters, knitting bags, and pocketbooks.

One corner was set aside for a few comfortable chairs and a sofa, and here several industrious women were busy on bouclette suits.

The manager, who used to be in charge of a knitting shop in a downtown store, took time away from one of her pupils to enlarge on this new venture of hers. It seems that all one has to do is come in and buy the yarn and she'll teach the buyer how to use it.

Furthermore, if some very busy person comes in and wants a suit knit to order, she'll take the measurements and turn out a really snappy looking model.

Judging by the suit she was wearing at the time, she wields a wicked needle!

The pocketbooks on sale there must be mentioned. Not one over 65 cents and quite the sportiest, closely-woven cord bags to appear on a counter for that price yet! They're amply large, too, 11 inches by 6, in black and white, white with colored threads interwoven; green, blue, brown, yellow and beige.

The knitting bags, too, are sore tempters. One, especially, of a stiff corded fabric in black and white with large wooden hook handles. Most amazingly inexpensive!

Wooden Furnishings.

From the Great Smoky Mountains in North Carolina, all the way to Washington come innumerable wooden household furnishings. There are letter racks, boxes, candlesticks, trays, match containers, fruit bowls and any number of things. But it's the footstool that takes the eye. It is made in much the same manner as footstools were made 100 years ago by the mountain folk in Carolina. Quite small and narrow, all of them are made with two sloping portions for tired feet to rest upon.

And then the three-cornered stools to perch by the side of the fireplace. Quaint old-fashioned looking things every one of them. Wastepaper baskets have offered an outlet for mountaineer genius. They're made of squares of colored wood fitted together in a symmetrical design.

• • • •

Wedding Gifts.

An F street shop has taken measures to make shopping for wedding gifts considerably easier. They have set aside a table of moderately priced suggestions, not one over $5. There's a medium-sized silver tray, an usual dinner bell and clapper, an antique looking pendant lamp, all brass and frosted glass, a four-piece tea set, including tray, tea urn, cream pitcher, and sugar bowl—and most striking of all, two chrome cranes to grace the center of the table.

• • • •

Necktie Chains.

A cravat chain to keep the tie in place! That's the newest style note for men's sport wear. And not one there that doesn't tempt the feminine shopper to wear a tie herself. Some of them are the fine linked chains with a horse's head fastened at the middle. By far the most conservative are the plain large links, needing no outside ornament to speak for them.

• • • •

Flower Bracelets.

Numbers of ahead-of-the-fashion shoppers who have grown weary of the tiara flower bandeaux for the hair are taking to the flower bracelets. There are a few of these left in a downtown store, narrow little bands of daisies, gardenias, forget-me-nots, and other equally pretty varieties. Worn with summer organdies they lend a fresh, dainty effect. A bouquet fastened at the throat or low back of an evening gown, with a bracelet to match around the wrist is really a fetching get-up.

• • • •

Cordial Set.

Two dollars could not be better invested than in a complete cordial set featured in the silver department of a local store. A tray with a long middle handle holds six small glasses. They come in a daring black—or what is called, "lush" red.

• • • •

Toy for Grownups.

It's a safe bet that the rainbow top in a downtown shop will intrigue the grownups as well as the kiddies. A snap of the string, and it's off! As it turns it changes from red to blue to purple, and a blend of all of these. Not new, but new at this price!

• • • •

Sandwich Tray.

A Connecticut avenue shop which has more expensive things than inexpensive ones, has a tantalizing teaser now for economical customers. It's a chrome sandwich tray. Round, dish shaped, and bright as a mirror. An almost invisible etched rim is the only decoration. The price, $1.

Palates Hew to Torte Cake; Let Eggshells Fall Where They May

Cook's Success Depends on Care in Following Precise Recipe.

IT'S the cause of a lot of egg-breaking—the growing fondness for the torte variety of cake that Prima Donna Grete Stueckgold rates high C in the dessert scale.

Even the modest date torte that blossoms out the country over when dates are in season calls for 4 eggs. And most of these cakes require upwards of a dozen eggs. But every torte is deliciously different. Sometimes this different effect comes from a grand, gooey custard between layers boasting a nut-meringue, baked right on the cake.

Oftentimes the ingredients and method of mixing them seem a bit odd.

Dobos Torte.

Take the Dobos torte, for example. The cake itself is a familiar enough sponge mixture. But you must have patience to spread it very thinly over the outside of buttered floured pans; and bake it very slowly. Like this: First separate 6 eggs. Beat the yolks till thick and lemon-colored. Then gradually beat into them 1¼ cups of sifted powdered sugar. Next, beat in 1 cup sifted pastry flour (that has been sifted 4 times.) Then wash and dry your beater and beat the egg-whites very stiff (but not too dry) and fold these into first mixture.

Next, grease your cake pans well (on the outside) and sift a thin coating of flour over them. Then spread your cake batter over as many as you can get into the oven at one time. Spread it not more than ¼-inch thick, just to edge of pan—not the least mite over the edge. (This batter is thick and light, and will not run). Bake in slow oven (surely not over 325 degrees Fahrenheit) till done—8 to 10 minutes. These layers should not get crisp, but they should brown on top so they won't stick to your cake rack when turned upside down to cool. As soon as layers are baked, loosen at one point with spatula, work spatula under whole layer, and remove from tin. This recipe will make about 12 layers on 7-inch tins.

Filling for Dobos Torte.

When layers are baked and cooled, spread them with raspberry jam and then ice the cake all over with white icing. Or spread them with this soft chocolate filling: First cut up ½ pound cooking chocolate into top of double boiler. Add 1¼ cups powdered sugar, a few grains salt, and 1 cup boiling water. Stir over hot water till melted and smooth. Next, beat up 4 eggs, add to first mixture and stir over hot water till thickened. Then stir in 1 teaspoon vanilla, cool, and spread thinly between layers—and over top and sides of cake, if you like. Either with jam or chocolate, this cake is very pretty when you cut down through it. Held over in the refrigerator and served the second day, it tastes better even than the first day.

Send for More Recipes.

Now in case you're not thrilled by torte, but still vote for a grand old-fashioned jelly roll; or an angel cake so light you almost expect it to fly off; or a deep, golden sponge cake—I can send you step-by-step directions for making these, too. My recipe bulletin, "Fine Cakes for Parties," tells all this and how to make wedding cake, bride's cake, bridegroom's cake and others you might have a need for. How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutler.

Does the Heart Do Work?

The fatalistic conception of heart disease of an earlier generation has given way to a hopeful, forward looking attitude that has robbed the term "heart disease" of much of its terror. During recent years the laboratory has shed new light upon the reserve force of that powerful muscular organ—the heart. We now know that heart disease is preventable; also that patients who have suffered fairly severe damage to heart valve may, with proper management, live comfortable and fairly active lives. What has been done for sufferers from tuberculosis can and will, no doubt, be accomplished for those afflicted with heart disease. More public information is needed. Patients may be taught to recognize symptoms of heart disease and thus be placed early on a proper life-saving regime.

Few of us understand what heart rest means. The heart begins to beat in the fourth week of the life of the human emybryo (eight months before the child is born), and continues without cessation until death. The only rest that the heart obtains is that fraction of a second between beats. It is obvious that the more rapid the heart the shorter will be these rest periods. In a normal heart beating seventy-five times per minute each beat occupies eight-tenths of one second. Of these eight-tenths, three-tenths of a second is required in the contraction of the heart muscle; that is, the time required to force the blood into the circulation. The balance of the period, namely, five-tenths of a second, is a period of rest when the chambers are filling with the returning blood.

In 24 hours the heart is contracting nine hours and resting fifteen hours. Unfortunately, this rest cannot be taken at one time, for these fifteen hours are made up of one-half second periods throughout the entire day. Whenever we speed up the heart through emotion or as a result of an increased load the periods of rest are shorter and complete fatigue may occur. If an individual is at rest in a reclining position the number of heart beats per minute usually decreases. This is quite common during sleep. In fact, one waking in the morning the heart may be found to be beating only sixty times per minute, whereas during the active hours of the day the rate may be seventy-five or even eighty.

At each beat the heart drives from two to three ounces of blood into the arteries. This blood must be propelled with sufficient force to reach the most remote cell of the body. Physiologists have learned that the work performed by this powerful muscle organ is sufficient to lift a weight of nearly eighty pounds one foot from the ground each minute.

SLANDER

By Arthur Somers Roche

Gerald Gerrish has been advancing money to Martha Blaisdell on her own securities and has spread rumors that he is supporting her. When Martha orders him to sell everything she owns and take what she owes him, he threatens suit; at a large society party, she is served with a summons in a complaint instigated by him. At the moment, she is accompanied by Dr. Peter Baxter, who is in love with her; however, she has promised to Marry Herbert Cranston, rich jungle explorer and society play boy.

EYEBROWS lifted; people began talking quickly, loudly, to cover her embarrassment and their own. The man raised his voice even more.

"This is an action brought by the plaintiff to recover money advanced to you on your promise to marry," cried the man.

There was no one within a radius of 50 feet who didn't hear the words. And Baxter dropped the glass of water and stepped forward. He gripped the papers that the man extended to Martha.

"Hey, you, what do you think——" Baxter cut short his words.

"And what do you think? That you can serve legal summons on a Sunday? You get out of here—quietly—now—or I'll have you put out." He raised his hand minatorily. "No, I won't have you put out. I'll put you out myself."

Past Midnight.

For a moment the two men surveyed his lean figure, tense and ready. Then the speaker laughed uneasily.

"Sorry, I didn't realize it was after midnight." He looked at the watch upon his wrist. "By gosh, it is Sunday, isn't it? Well, say, I thought sure it wasn't 12 o'clock."

"The times are very hard, aren't they?" asked Baxter unexpectedly.

The two men stared at him.

"What do you mean? Sure they are," replied the man who had done the talking for the two.

"They must be. A man must need money badly to do so vile a thing," said Baxter. "What do you get for serving a summons? This kind of summons, where you are paid to insult the receiver of the summons, where the receiver is a woman, and where the suit is foully false in its inception, where it is blackmail inspired?"

Baxter Not Afraid.

"Hey, you, go slow," said the summons-server. "That's slander. Mr. Gerrish would have a nice case of action against you if I told him you said he was a blackmailer."

"Then tell him," said Baxter, "Tell him that Dr. Peter Baxter, of St. John's Clinic, says that serving such a summons, in such a case, is the filthiest kind of blackmail, and let him sue me—if he dares. And now—you go."

The 50 people who had heard the process-server's statement heard also Peter Baxter's challenge. Oh, it was gallant of him, thought Martha! Only—chivalry and gallantry can not protect anyone from the throwing of filth. And that was what Gerry Gerrish had begun to do—throw filth.

"Thanks, Peter," she said, as they moved away.

Her Brother's Keeper.

Letty Torrence was neither a prude nor a busybody. She was, in fact, a nice enough girl to deserve having Bert Cranston as a brother. She was a well-bred, tactful, high-minded person, but she was, after all, a sister to an unmarried younger brother. And since ever a saucy baggage cast a first sheep's eye at a lone man sisters have been fussy about younger brothers.

They drop the fiction which they have permitted their husbands to believe, that woman is the weaker sex and the man the stronger. Not a bit of it. Any man—if he is a brother—will fall victim to the brazen wiles and unscrupulous designs of the first hussy that comes along. He must be harried into cover, as a hen harries her chick; the woman must be defied, frowned upon, and told to take her deceitful blandishments elsewhere.

A Girl of Action.

Any woman would have had a hard time winning Letty Torrence to the belief that she was worthy to marry Herbert Cranston. But a girl concerning whom the tongue of scandal wagged had practically no chance at all. And Letty was not the type to sit at home and brood, to wait for her brother to visit her before she advised or berated him.

Sim Torrance, flushed and happy from a brilliant eighteen holes, screamed to her from his bedroom.

"Took Chappy Chapman six and five and made him like it," he bragged. "Doubled up on the second nine and copped. Was I a sport? Am I always a sport when I can feel the head of the club, if you know what I mean?"

Why the Packing?

"I know what you mean," called Letty.

"Well, he wanted an extra 50 on the eighteenth, and said I, 'Sure thing, doubles for birds.' And Letty, I holed a mashie from off the green, and if you could hear Chappy scream. I can think," his voice became deliberate, "of no sweeter music in the world than the bleat of Chappy when the breaks come my way. Hey, what are you doing?"

"Packing," she replied.

Slim Torrance unwound himself from the chair upon which he had hurled his tall body. He always twined himself around something; he couldn't sit on a bench without twisting his limbs about its legs. From the doorway he stared at his charming wife.

"Listen, bird-like and bride-like one, what are you packing those bags for?"

Hated to Travel.

Quick alarm showed on the features of her husband. He was a home-loving man, and the fact that he had a home in Aiken, in Santa Barbara, as well as in Bar Harbor and Long Island, in no wise diminished that love. In whatever home he was he wished to remain until he moved on to the next one, and woe betide anyone who suggested moving on at the wrong season.

Except for a biennial trip to Europe, and an occasional night spent in a New York hotel after the theater, or en route from one place to another, he slept always in a home.

"I can't go on any trip, Letty, my princess," he said.

"My king, no one asked you," she retorted.

No couple—not even the Lemmings—were more devoted than this pair, and when they called each other by extraordinarily high-flown terms of endearment, they used these terms through no sarcasm. They just did it, and the laughter of ten years had not stopped them a whit.

Bert Being Fathead.

"Leaving the royal consort, eh?" he demanded.

She straightened up and waved Nellie, the maid, from the room.

"Bert is making a fathead of himself," she stated.

"Gad, that's swell news," grinned Sim. "He's been the pattern so long that I like to know his foot can slip—nothing serious, is it?"

"Girl," said Letty.

"I gathered as much. I didn't think the old boy had signed the wrong name to a check. Night club? No; he wouldn't let himself in for anything notorious. Then what, my dear?"

"Girl named Martha Blaisdell. Ever heard of her?"

Her husband shook his head.

"Neither did I—until yesterday. Bert had the fidgets last week down here and I knew it spelled girl. Then that old hen, Sarah Prentiss, phoned and then so did Myrtle Craigie——"

"Copper anything they say," advised Sim.

Brink's Admission.

"I know. Scandal-mongering old busybodies. But—I did some phoning myself. I got Brink Towler on the phone—Brink wouldn't lie to me, you know."

"Ought I to know that?" chuckled her husband.

"No—but it's true. In the dim days Brink had a sneaker for me. Well, he told me that he'd talk to Bert. And he said that the scandal was not true——"

"Scandal, eh?"

"There's gossip that some filthy named Gerrish has been paying her bills. He started it."

"I'd like to practice niblick shots on his head," said Sim.

"I know. But—well, Brink was panicked that he'd admitted he'd even heard her name, so don't ever tell Bert. And then I called up a couple of other girls—and well, she's gossiped about—plenty. And you know Bert. It's around that he's crazy for her, and you know that if Bert's name is connected with a woman's it's because he's crazy for her. He doesn't give them a tumble, you know that, Sim. And I've got to save him."

Not Really Wrong.

"But if Brink says it isn't true——"

"So does Trudie Lemming."

"Well, isn't that enough? Trudie wouldn't stick up for any wrong'un."

"I don't imagine she's really wrong," said Letty. "But Bert would die if his wife was talked about. He may think he wouldn't, but—he will. And I'm off to New York, and out to Trudie's in the morning, to put a stop to it."

Woolen Mill Reopens Under Court Order

Martinsburg, W. Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Without open trouble Berkeley Woolen Co., closed by strike since last Wednesday, opened its plant here this morning for those employes who wished to return.

An injunction previously had prohibited picketing or intimidation. Peace officers were on hand to see that the injunction was obeyed.

The additional State officers joined the four-man detachment here in anticipation of possible need. Strikers and spectators, 1,000 strong, were on hand for the opening. Picketers marched in front of the mill gates as workers returned. Moral suasion was used and some workers turned back.

The officers patrolled the streets and insisted that the strikers keep moving. Only once was there a suggestion of possible trouble. The crowd surged out and the troopers unlimbered gas bombs. The surge apparently was laid to a spectator. The Berkeley plant was closed when strikers said they went out in protest against alleged discrimination against union workers and against employment by the management of the "stretch-out" system of operating looms on mixed fillings.

Tyler to Explain Va. Liquor Law

A. B. C. Head Will Attend Chicago Conference.

Richmond, June 18 (AP).—Maj. S. Heth Tyler, chairman of the Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board, will tell the National Liquor Control Conference in Chicago this week of his State's twin problems of eliminating bootlegging and at the same time obtaining revenue from the State liquor dispensary system.

Representing the Virginia board at the conference, Maj. Tyler will report on the Virginia plan, tell delegates from other States how the control act is functioning here and then outline a "drinker's license" scheme which was under consideration before the present law was passed.

By the system, "drinker's licenses" were to have been issued to enable holders to purchase liquor from the State at cost. The license fee would have covered the overhead of handling the liquor. The scheme was regarded as impractical by those who drafted the control act. Maj. Tyler will tell the convention that the Virginia plan has yielded $425,000 to the State in slightly over a month since the first stores were opened.

Norfolk Slates 6 Conventions

1,000 Delegates to Attend Meetings at Resort Hotels This Week.

Norfolk, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Nearby resort hotels will be the headquarters for six conventions during the week, when upwards of 1,000 delegates will gather in this vicinity for the annual meetings of fraternal organizations and business associations. Numerous entertainment features are on the several programs.

Outstanding is the annual meeting of the Virginia Automotive Association at the Cavalier Hotel today and tomorrow at Virginia Beach. The meeting will attract 300 representatives of the automotive trade industry.

Convening tomorrow at the Nansemond Hotel, the Virginia Funeral Directors Association meeting is expected to bring 250 morticians. Business sessions and entertainment programs are scheduled through Thursday night.

The Alpha Iota Kappa fraternity will meet at the Albemarle Hall Hotel Thursday, with daily sessions through Saturday. Approximately 100 delegates from chapters all over the country will attend.

Father Is Jailed In Fatal Shooting

Charleston, W. Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Charged with killing his own son, William Woods, 58, colored, was a prisoner in the Kanawha County Jail today awaiting a hearing before a magistrate.

W. F. Work, coroner, said the prisoner told him that he fired several shots while walking home yesterday, when a man approaching him in the darkness refused to identify himself, and hurled a stone.

Later, the prisoner said, he discovered that he had killed his son, Cornell Woods, 28, also of Charleston.

Car Crash Fatal To Virginia Youth

Romney, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Wilson Alkire, 22, of near here, was instantly killed yesterday when the automobile in which he was riding with three friends, crashed into a pole.

Claude Haines, driver, who escaped with minor injuries, was said to have fallen asleep. Holden Alkire, 18, brother of the fatally injured man, also was badly injured. The fourth occupant of the care, Willard Alkire, also a youth, sustained a broken leg.

Burial of the victim will be held tomorrow morning. He is survived by his parents and several brothers and sisters.

Virginia Plant Blast Declared Unpreventable

Carelessness or Labor Trouble Theories Denied at Fredericksburg.

Fredericksburg, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Officials of the Sylvania Industrial Corporation today unofficially ascribed the explosion which killed one man and injured 13 yesterday to unpreventable combustion from gasses generated in the secret waterproofing process.

Dr. Richard N. Wallach, a corporation official, who hurried from Atlantic City yesterday, and Dr. Frank H. Reichel, vice president, denied the blast was traceable to carelessness of employes. They also ridiculed the idea that labor troubles may have figured.

Those familiar with the processes of the coating department, where the explosion occurred, explained that a spark from the machinery probably ignited the gasses which are formed from the secret process.

Two of the four damaged machines may be operated in a day or two, it was stated, but the other two may have to be replaced.

Fire Loss Halved In West Virginia

Charleston, W. Va., June 18 (Spl.).—A report just issued by Fred B. Watkins, State fire marshal, shows that West Virginia's fire loss during May dropped 50 per cent from the same month of last year.

A total loss of $90,135 was incurred as against $115,755 during May of 1933. Flames attacked property with a sound value of $229,810, a decrease of 34 per cent from last year. Insurance of $127,750 was carried on the burned property.

Fifty-three fires were reported, 31 being total losses, a decrease of 26 from last year. Fifty suspicious fires were investigated by the State fire marshal and his assistants, and two indictments for arson were obtained, these being in Kanawha County.

School Figures Given.

Bowling Green, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—School attendance figures released by Division Superintendent W. A. Vaughan for the past school term reveal that Caroline County students attended school on the average of slightly more than four days out of five during the session.

Ball Gives Up Fight; Enters Richmond Jail

Former Treasurer of Arlington Penniless, Brother Says.

Convicted last April of failing to turn over $515,959 in county funds to the Arlington County board of which he was treasurer for 24 years, E. Wade Ball, former treasurer of the county, yesterday voluntarily surrendered to the head of the State Penitentiary at Richmond, Va., to serve a sentence of two and one-half years.

Ball left for Richmond early yesterday in the company of a close relative, according to his brother, former State Senator Frank Ball, his personal counsel, who said that the former Arlington County official is totally without funds and unable to wage a further fight for vindication.

Shortage in his accounts was revealed by the county board during February, 1932, when it was announced that he was more than $2,000 short. Following an investigation by State Auditor E. Coleman Andrews, brought into the county by former Gov. J. G. Pollard of Virginia, the shortage mounted to more than $500,000.

Ball had his first trial on an indictment charging misuse of public funds to he amount of $24,454, which started August 15, 1932. He was acquitted four days later. He resigned as treasurer on February 6, 1932, and was convicted April 1, 1933.

Associate Justice Van Deventer, of the United States Supreme Court, last Wednesday denied him a writ of error.

Grasty Rites Held; At Staunton Home

Was Washington and Lee University Graduate.

Staunton, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—The funeral of John Sharshall Grasty, popular young Staunton attorney, who died here in the King's Daughters' Hospital yesterday after an illness of ten days, following an operation, was held today at the Grasty home in College Park, Staunton suburb. Services were conducted by the Rev. J. Lewis Gibbs, of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, of which Mr. Grasty was a member, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Hunter B. Blakely, of the First Presbyterian Church. Burial was in Thornrose Cemetery.

Mr. Gasty was born in Staunton in December, 1907, a son of Mr. and Mrs. James H. C. Grasty, who survive, together with his wife, Mrs. Virginia Beckham Grasty; two brothers, J. H. C., jr., and William T., and two sisters, Mrs. Gordon P. Peyton and Mrs. Jairus Collins, all of Staunton.

He was a graduate of the Staunton High School and attended Washington and Lee University. Mr. Grasty two years ago was elected a justice of the peace in Beverley Manor district.

Salem, Va., June 18 (Spl.).—Virginia sheriffs will meet here June 21 and 22 to organize a State sheriff's association for the general purpose of creating better cooperation between law enforcement officers in the suppression of crime.

The sheriffs contemplate the adoption of methods for raising standards and perfecting a better administration of sheriffs' duties, and to sponsor legislation creating a strong public enemy act.

Arrangements for the meeting are being made by Sheriff George R. Richardson, of Roanoke County.

Roads Authorized In National Park

Two Projects Will Cost Nation $791,068.

Award of contracts for road improvement in two sections of Shenandoah National Park were announced yesterday by Secretary of the Interior Ickes.

One contract went to Waugh Brothers, Fayetteville, W. Va., for clearing, grading and surfacing 9.76 miles from Front Royal to Comptons Gap for $427,175. The other went to Sammons & Robertson Co., Huntington, W. Va., for improvement of 10.4 miles from Comptons Gap to Hogback Mountain for $363,893.

The work is on a portion of the highway between Front Royal and Thorntons Gap which will connect with Skyline Drive when completed. Secretary Ickes said that as the work is included in the Public Works Administration program, only bidders complying with NRA were considered.

Miss Faunce Wins Medal With 82

Score New Low in D. C. Women's Tournament; Miss Clayton Out.

By Dave Herman.

TURNING in the lowest qualifying score in the history of the event, Miss Winifred Faunce, young Manor Club player, out of competitive golf for more than a year, made a successful comeback yesterday at Columbia, shooting an 82 through a driving rain to win the medal by a two-stroke margin in the District women's championship.

Miss Faunce played remarkable golf under adverse conditions, defying water-logged fairways and greens to negotiate each nine in 41.

Wins Second Honors.

Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, of Indian Spring, former titleholder, also did herself proud with a 43-41—84 to capture runner-up honors. Miss Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, was next with 42-46—88, with a 5 on the seventeenth and a 6 on the eighteenth, and Mrs. Roland Mackenzie became the fourth to break 90 by shooting 45-44—89.

Scores of 96 made the championship flight. Late in the afternoon Mrs. Ralph Goldsmith, of Woodmont; Mrs. J. F. Dowdall, of Congressional, and Mrs. A. E. Fischer, of Beaver Dam, played off for the last two places. Mrs. Goldsmith and Mrs. Dowdall qualified with 5s on the first hole, as Mrs. Fischer took a 6. In the regular medal round Mrs. Fischer had the misfortune to take an 8 on the home hole, where a 7 would have put her in.

There were many disappointments. Helen Dettweiler, 19-year-old Congressional lassie, fresh from a victory in the Maryland women's championship, failed to qualify. She took the alarming total of 103 strokes. Miss Dettweiler played under the handicap of a sprained wrist, and could hardly swing her club on some holes.

Favorite Eliminated.

Miss Louise Claytor, Chevy Chase favorite, took eight shots on the first hole after her drive caught a ditch, and her 101 failed to make the grade. Other stars failing to qualify for the title flight were Miss Virginia Pope, of Kenwood; Mrs. L. O. Cameron and Mrs. Harrison Brand, of Chevy Chase; Mrs. Everett Eynon, unattached; Mrs. Norman Frost and Mrs. J. A. Marr.

Playing uncanny shots, Miss Faunce, the medalist, started off in whirlwind fashion with pars on the first four holes. A trapped second cost her an 8 on the 433-yard sixth, and a poor approach a 7 on the long twelfth. These were the only two bad holes she encountered. A fair break on either and she would have finished in the high 70's. On the seventeenth Miss Faunce rolled in a 15-footer for a birdie 3. She played with Mrs. Jack Scott, of Congressional, who also qualified.

Match Play Today.

All told, Miss Faunce had 8 pars and a bridie.

Eight fives, two sixes and a seven caused Miss Mackley's score to soar. She had three threes.

Kammauf Cumberland County Marble Champ

Cumberland, Md., June 18 (Spl.).—For the second year, Roy Kammauf, of Pennsylvania Avenue School, has taken the city and county marbles championship. He defeated Charles Kaiser, of St. Patrick's School, Cumberland, in the finals and will be given a week's trip to Ocean City, N. J., where he will play in a field of 70 for the championship of the United States, June 25-30. The individual champion of each school received a medal conferred by Mayor George W. Legge. Forty-five boys were entertained at luncheon at the Queen City Hotel.

A good example of The Post's reputation for producing results from Classified ads the "first thing in the morning" was the experience of Mrs. Varnon Johnson, of 121 Grant avenue, Takoma Park, who rented her apartment through a Post ad.

Mrs. Johnson ordered the advertisement for one week, but the apartment was rented the first day the ad appeared. Mrs. Johnson says that calls began to pour in early in the morning. The ad cost just 60 cents.

Indians Face Weaver and Stewart

Nats Afforded Chance to Climb in Double-Header Today.

WITHOUT moving a muscle yesterday the Nats climbed a half-game nearer the league lead when the Yanks were mangled by the Detroit Tigers up in the Bronx, but today they are presented with a double opportunity to strike in their own behalf.

A double-header for Washington fans was accumulated yesterday when the day-long rain shooed the game between the Nats and the Indians off the schedule, but the visiting ball players from Cleveland will be met this afternoon in a bargain bill.

WEAVER.

Also on view will be the little side-show that Monte Weaver has been conducting along with the renaissance of the Nats. The fidgety right-hander, who has been a prime figure in the Washington club's upward surge, which has seen them win six of their last seven games and zoom to within 2½ games of the league lead, will be seeking his eighth straight victory today.

Weaver has been unbeaten since he lost his second start of the season, on April 20 in Philadelphia, and has improved with each appearance, holding the White Sox to four hits in his last start.

Stewart Returns to Wars.

Weaver's co-worker on the mound for the Nats today will be Walter Stewart, the diminutive left-hander, who has been out of the line-up for three weeks as a result of infected teeth. Stewart has pronounced himself fit after daily workouts before the games at Griffith Stadium.

Walter Johnson's Indians, who, like the Nats, are still in the thick of the pennant fight, a half-game behind Washington, have a wide choice of pitchers for the twin bill today, but last night Johnson was of a mind to intrust his pitching duties to Mel Harder, the league's most effective hurler last year, and Willis Hudlin, whose pitching has been the bright spot of the Indians' pennant bid.

With the deadline on trading having passed four days ago, the American League clubs are standing pat on their own line-ups in the most sensational flag fight since 1922, with only three games separating the first-division teams, while the Browns, in sixth place, are only six games in the rear of the leading Yankees.

Occult Wins Fourth Straight at Latonia

Latonia, Ky., June 18 (AP).—The fourth straight victory of Mose Goldblatt's Occult and a double by the stable of Wood F. Axton, Louisville sportsman, were the highlights of an otherwise drab afternoon of racing here today.

Occult, capably handled by the new riding sensation, Danny Taylor, took the lead soon after the barrier rose in the Madison Road Purse, and fairly relished the sloppy going to win by a length. The Glen Helen Stud's I. Pass was second and W. E. Hupp's Judge Judy third.

The Axton Stable scored its double on Ruth's Hope in the opening dash and Paradiscal in the fourth.

Midway A.C. Loses Tight Game to Westminster

Westminster, Md., June 18 (Spl.).—Playing on the Herr diamond, Westminster A. A. defeated Midway A. C., of Hanover, Pa., yesterday, 4-1. Another contest, staged on the Westminster diamond, saw Leppo's Blue Sox trim the Westminster Tigers, 12-5, while the local Company H team, Maryland National Guards, routed the Littlestown (Pa.) Travelers, at Littlestown, with a score of 10-4.

Cooper Wins West's Open Crown

Rally Beats Laffoon in Second Extra Round After Each Has 67.

Cops With 66 After Being 5 Shots Back With 10 Holes to Go.

PEORIA, Ill., June 18 (AP).—"Lighthorse" Harry Cooper, of Chicago, who has dazzled thousands with his spectacular shots since he first blazed his way to fame on the fairways, scored two of the greatest rounds of his golfing life today to overtake and beat Ky Laffoon, young Denver pro, by three strokes in a double over-time battle for the Western open championship.

Standing on the eighth tee in the morning, fretting because his putts refused to drop, Cooper was 5 shots behind the straight-hitting, putting demon from Denver with the end ten holes away. Thousands in the gallery gave him up, but back he came with an undeniable rush that tied up the struggle and gave him a chance to go out again for 18 more holes this afternoon. He only needed 9 of them, burning up the front stretch of the afternoon with a 30 that routed par and the helpless Laffoon by 7 shots, sealing the issue for good.

Six Strokes Under Par.

He played safe and sane golf after that, refusing to toss his chance away, but even then his tally for the closing round was 66, a half dozen blows under par and within 1 stroke of the course record set Saturday by Jimmy Thompson, Los Angeles. Laffoon's score for the round was 69, good enough to win most championships.

Cooper's finish gave him a record of 25 shots under par for the 108 holes he had to play to win the title. Laffoon was 22 under. Both tied after the regulation 72-holes with 274 and tied with 67's on the first 18-hole overtime match this morning.

The poker-faced Laffoon started out to make a runaway out of the match this morning, capping his rush with an eagle 2 on the 258-yard seventh, an easy par 4 hole, to go 5 up. Cooper outplayed him, but couldn't putt worth a lick. He started his comeback on the eighth by laying his third shot six feet short and holing out for a birdie 4 to Ky's regulation 5.

Laffoon 4 Up at Turn.

Laffoon made the turn for home 4 up and played safe par all the way back to the clubhouse, but Cooper, his putter clicking at last, fired back a 31 to hold it in deadlock at the final green by matching Laffoon's birdie 3.

Cooper might have scored a 28 on the front nine of the afternoon round just as easily as his 30, so deadly and dizzy was his marksmanship. As Laffoon struggled helplessly with mere par, Cooper smashed in with seven birdies for his 30. He missed a four-foot putt for a birdie on the second, while on the third his putt for an eagle from 4½ feet stuck stubbornly on the lip.

Laffoon, back with a 32 to Cooper's 36 on the final nine, picked up four shots, but his rally didn't make any difference as the Lighthorse sailed serenely along. But as a final gesture Cooper drove the final green with a smash of 265 yards and putted deliberately for his birdie three to half the hole and end the struggle.

"What could I do?" asked Laffoon, his sober countenance creased with a smile for the first time.

"It's the best golf I've ever shot and that includes the time I won the Los Angeles Open eight years ago," said the winner.

Red Sox Take Two From Browns

Win First, 6-5, and Second by 14-9 Score; Porter Has Field Day.

BOSTON, June 18 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox took a pair of games from the St. Louis Browns today, edging out the Brownies, 6 to 5, in the first and capturing the nightcap, 14 to 9, in a free-hitting contest which saw Rogers Hornsby use six pitchers.

In the first game Boston piled up 4 runs in the fourth and picked up two more in seventh to take a 6 to 1 lead. Passes to Cissell and Morgan in the eighth, a sacrifice and an infield out and a single by Reynolds gave the Red Sox 2 runs. In the ninth Manager Hornsby cracked out a pinch-hit double, scoring 2 runs.

Seventeen Hits in Second.

Manush, Idle, Takes Bat Lead in League

Yesterday, the Nats' star left-fielder was kept from playing when the Washington-Cleveland game was postponed by rain at Griffith Stadium, and Manush was literally forced into the American League batting leadership over Charley Gehringer, of Detroit.

Manush this morning tops the league with an average of .403, while Gehringer, who was able to get only one hit out of four official tries in the Tiger-Yankee game at New York, dropped three points in the averages to .400.

Crawford Wins, Giving Australia Paris Series

PARIS, June 18 (AP).—For a few brief minutes today Jack Crawford returned to his form of 1933, when he won all but one of the major tennis championships of the world, and his spurt was good enough to send Australia into the final round of the European zone Davis Cup play.

Trailing Christian Boussus, of France, 2 sets to 1, and 2 games to 4 in the fourth set of the crucial fourth match of the series, Crawford put on a spurt of beautiful tennis to win 10 straight games, clinch the match and win the series.

The victory gave Australia the necessary third match of the five and qualified the team to meet Czechoslovakia in the zone final. The winner there will play the United States in the interzone contest for the right to challenge England for the cup.

It was well that Crawford won, because young Andre Merlin, who defeated the Aussie captain Saturday, also trimmed Vivian McGrath, 4—6, 6—1, 6—3, 6—0. McGrath, who played listlessly and got a booing from part of the crowd for it, might have done better if the match had meant anything. But again he might not have been able to beat the Frenchman even if the series had been at stake.

The whole series was one of upsets. First Merlin beat Crawford, then McGrath upset Boussus and as a climax Crawford and Adrian Quist yesterday defeated the favored French veterans, Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon, in the doubles.

The showing of France this year was the worst in 13 years of cup warfare. They were in the challenge round in 1925 and 1926 before taking the cup from the United States in 1927 and were European zone winners in 1922, '23 and '24.

Chisox Defeat Macks Twice, 3-2 and 5-0

Philadelphia, June 18 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox took both ends of a double-header from the Philadelphia Athletics today, winning the first game, 3 to 2, and the second, abbreviated to five innings, 5 to 0. The second game was called with one out after the Athletics had counted two runs in the sixth, the score reverting to the fifth inning.

Cornell Given Tuesday Date For Fights

Joe Turner Applies for Mondays; Switch May Be Arranged.

A BIG league battle of promotorial wits was portended in local cloutdom yesterday as the boxing commission tentatively authorized the staging of bouts every Tuesday in an outdoor Georgetown arena under the promotion of C. E. (Fats) Cornell, and impresario Joe Turner made formal application to hold his Griffith Stadium shows Mondays instead of Fridays.

The application of Cornell, who plans to erect a stadium at Thirty-first and K streets northwest, was approved by the commission pending posting of the required bond. Turner's request was declined for the time being, but the commission promised to attempt to arrange a switch in days of the week with one of the other licensed promoters now operating or planning to operate.

Start Next Week.

If possible, Cornell will stage his first card a week from today, scaling the admission prices at 50 cents, 75 cents and $1—a new low for local boxing. His site, a concrete base about 250 feet square, will allow for erection of stands to accommodate 5,000 or more.

In his formal application for a switch in dates, Turner pointed out to the commission that operating on Friday left him no date to fall back on in case inclement weather forced postponement of one of his cards. Inasmuch as he is booking National attractions, he explained, it often would be impossible for him to hold top bouts together for a solid week's postponement, but if he was granted the Monday date, he could postpone to some later day in the week if necessary.

May Swith Dates.

Turner stated further that the Riding and Hunt Club, which operates indoors, not being hampered by the weather, would not have to postpone bouts in the summertime and could therefore operate on some later day than the Monday night assigned to it without difficulty.

Two-Base Hit By Pete Fox Decisive

Gehrig and Crosetti Hit Homers; Ninth Win for Marberry.

NEW YORK, June 18 (AP).—The Detroit Tigers defeated the New York Yankees, 6 to 5, today and drew up within four percentage points of the American League-Leading New Yorkers. A double by Pete Fox in the ninth, scoring Mickey Cochrane and Joyner White, gave the Tigers victory, which also gave Detroit an even break so far in the series.

The failure of Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, the Yankees' huskiest bombardiers, in the ninth, with two men on base were vital factors in the Tigers' triumph.

Ruth went in as a pinch-hitter for Red Rolfe when there was one out and fanned. Gerhig hit a slow roller to Gehringer for the final out.

Homers by Gehrig, Crosetti.

Earlier, however, Gehrig and Frank Crosetti gave the New Yorkers four runs. Crosetti hit a homer with two on in the third to account for three tallies, while Gehrig connected for his seventeenth circuit clout with none on in the fifth.

Both Russell Van Atta and Fred Marberry, the rival starting pitchers, were pounded hard. The Tigers knocked Van Atta out of the box in the first part of the sixth inning after nicking the Yankee moundsman for eight hits and four runs. Grizzly Burleigh Grimes finished for the Yankees.

Marberry went eight innings for the Tigers after which he was succeeded by Elon Hogsett. It was Marberry's ninth win of the season.

Timber Fire Pays $106 and Figures in "Daily Double" of $401 at Charles Town

Harris Wins Sixth Purse Of Meet

Virginian's $140 Worth of Horses Bring Him $1,200 in Purses.

Cantroud Annexes Nose Decision in Feature, Repeal Is Second.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., June 18.—Unfortunately for Johnny Harris, of Fredericksburg, Va., this meeing of the Shenandoah Valley Jockey Club will come to a close on July 4. Nothing would please Harris more than to see the bangtails contest here for the rest of the summer, because, if they did he might go back across the Blue Ridge Mountains with the race track tucked under his arm.

Yards and yards of publicity before this meeting revealed that this stable and that would race here, but not one word that Johnny Harris, of Fredericksburg, would bring along three horses. There was a reason. Harris had invested exactly $140 in these three alleged horses and even his friends smiled at the amount of oats they would consume at Harris' expense. However, what a whale of a difference three weeks make.

Sixth Winning Purse.

Today, Harris collected his sixth winning purse of the meeting, which brings the total earned by his $140 horses to $1,200. Add to this $500 that Harris took when one of his nags, Mazyniatia, was claimed from him and we see that the Virginian has made a fair profit. Of course, there is betting down under the stands and a winning owner hardly loses money on his own horses.

Harris sent a $75 horse to the post in the first race today. It was Timber Fire and he splashed through the mud and rain to win by four lengths over a fair field. Those who braved the elements to attend the races didn't like Timber Fire as a betting proposition and they were even less enthused about Jockey Day, who had the mount. Thus Timber Fire was able to jolt the crowd with a $106 mutuel.

Double Pays $401.40.

But that is only half of it. Timber Fire was on the front end of the daily double, which paid $401.40 and set a new record for the parlay bet here in the mountains. Small Change, a heavily-played second choice, completed the double.

Guy Bedwell again had a hand in winning the feature race. His Cantroud, backed down to 90 cents on the dollar, managed to nip Repeal by a nose in a finish battle that saw young Francis Weir ride his second winner of the day and bring his total to 24 for the meeting.

Dingle Netmen Defeat Martinsburg Team

Cumberland, Md., June 18 (Spl.).—The Dingle Tennis Club of this city continued its winning streak by defeating the Martinsburg Tennis Club, of Martinsburg, W. Va., on the Dingle, Celanese and Cumberland Country Club courts, 6—5, making a third straight match, having previously won over Hagerstown and Altoona. The locals won four singles and two doubles. The results follow:

Singles—Walter Davis (Dingle) defeated Robert Whitacre, 6—2, 6—2; James Dyche (Dingle) defeated William White, 6—3, 7—5; Schell Miller (Dingle) defeated George Hollis, 6—4, 5—7, 6—3; Robert Bane (Dingle) defeated Hopp Caskey, 6—3, 6—3; Douglas Thomas (Martinsburg) defeated Robert Chandlee, 6—1, 6—1; J. M. Homer (Martinsburg) defeated Russell Fonton, 6—2, 6—2; H. Snyder (Martinsburg) defeated B. Finan, 7—9, 7—5, 6—3; J. Melvin Kilmer (Martinsburg) defeated Don Chase, 10—8, 1—6, 6—4.

Doubles—William H. Oswald and Loraine Eisenberg (Dingle) defeated Whitacre, Chandlee, 1—6, 7—5, 6—3; Chase and Miller (Dingle) defeated White and Hollis, 6—4, 6—3; Thomas and M. Homer (Martinsburg) defeated Davis and Chandlee, 6—1, 8—6.

Frizellburg Nine Wins Over Westminster A.C.

Westminster, Md., June 18 (Spl.).—In a hard-fought contest yesterday, Frizellburg A. C. defeated the Westminster Black Sox, with a score of 4 to 2. Next Sunday Frizellburg will play Westminster A. C. on the Herr Diamond and the following week will meet the Alameda A. C. of Baltimore on the Frizellburg diamond.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIMBER FIRE, $106.00, $20.00, $6.40; BOOGIE MAN, $7.80, $5.00; EASTER HERALD, $3.40.

TIMBER FIRE, first away, was rushed into the lead at once and, steadied along in front, drew out easily when asked and won with speed in reserve. BOOGIE MAN, always a forward factor, saved ground throughout, but was no match for the winner. EASTER HERALD, forced to race on outside, finished strong.

SECOND RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:02. Winner, G. C. Overcash's ch. g. (2), by Sun Edwin—Ladorst. Trained by E. Brining. Value to winner, $200; second, $35; third, $15. Time, 1:04 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ADO (entry), $13.60, $4.60, $3.20; WISE PETE, $3.60, $2.80; AUFOIN, $3.20.

ADO, raced into a contending position on the outside from the start, was carried wide by WISE PETE entering the stretch, wore the latter down and just got up. WISE PETE was hustled into command on the back stretch, bore out and hung on well. AUFOIN raced evenly and closed stoutly.

THIRD RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:32. Off at 3:34. Winner, Mrs. N. Bond'a b. g. (4), by Aromatic—Petty Cash. Trained by J. B. Bond. Value to winner, $200; second, $35; third, $15. Time, 1:02 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SMALL CHANGE, $5.40, $3.00, $2.20; CURLING, $3.00, $2.40; BIG DIPPER, $2.60.

SMALL CHANGE, away well and favoring the going, had good speed to take command and a lead on entering stretch and, saving ground, had enough left to hold CURLING safe. Latter, always a forward factor throughout, could not get to the winner. BIG DIPPER, away well, could not match the speed of the leaders.

DAILY DOUBLE PAID $401.40.

FOURTH RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:46. Off at 3:47½. Winner, Mrs. C. P. Miles, jr.'s b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLESS HER HEART, $26.60, $12.20, $4.40; FREE ADVICE, $8.00, $3.40; BOKIE B., $2.80.

BLESS HER HEART had good speed to get to the front at once, shook off JOBS DIDO after three furlongs, went slightly wide entering the stretch and had to be kept under pressure. FREE ADVICE lacked early speed, moved up strongly on the far turn, secured racing room on inner rail entering stretch and closed stoutly.

FIFTH RACE—Six and a half furlongs. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:09½. Off at 4:10. Winner, N. B. Steward's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CANTROUD, $3.80, $2.80, $2.40; REPEAL, $3.80, $3.40; THIS PLAY, $3.40.

CANTROUD, slow as usual to find his best speed, moved up stoutly on the back stretch, drew on even terms with REPEAL in the stretch, and was up on the outside in the final stride. REPEAL raced PLATEAU into submission to take command on the back stretch, was steadied along in front, and just failed to last. THIS PLAY raced CROSSING OVER, but closed with the latter had some speed, but was tiring. PLATEAU stopped. LODORUS was never a factor.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3 and 4-year-olds Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:36½. Off at 4:37. Winner, F. Corbett's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DONA DULCIN, $6.00, $3.80, $2.40; BAY WRACK, $9.40, $3.00; MERRY MISS, $2.40.

DONA DULCIN, away well and favored by the going, was sent into a commanding lead at once, increased her lead at will, and was never threatened. BAY WRACK, slow to find his speed, closed very fast and wore MERRY MISS down in the final strides. The latter had good speed and held on well. EVENING CHIMES had early speed, but stopped. HUPPY could not reach contention. TRUE JOHN quit.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $250; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:02½. Off at 5:04. Winner, V. H. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NO MISTAKE, $12.00, $6.40, $4.80; TRANSCRIBE, $6.00, $7.80; PINK POST, $4.80.

NO MISTAKE, well up throughout, was forced to take up when attempting to get through on the inside on the final turn, came around the outside and closed fast to get up in the final stride. TRANSCRIBE, a forward factor at all times, closed stoutly, but could not withstand the challenge of the winner. PINK POST had good speed to get the pace, saved ground throughout, and just failed to last. DUNSTAR, slow to find his best speed, closed very fast. CHANCEABLE was unable to better her position. MUSKODAY lacked speed and was never a factor.

Charles Town, June 18.

Dear Al:

Please don't show this article to Clocker Mike. You can take that guy or leave him. Personally, I'm taking him from now on. I don't mean that I'm going to be too "high" on him, but I'm going to pay just a little more attention to him. I was deep in that seventh race Sunday night when Mike came in all out of breath and said, "No Mistake." I asked him if that was another one of his pipe dreams, but he insisted that I put the horse on top. I did, making a note, of course, that it was Mike's special. The horse won at a $12 mutuel, as you know. Tonight Mike ate a double order of this and a double order of that, and I just paid the bill while he strutted to the door like a stuffed hen. No Mistake brought Bennings, Inc., its third winner of the day. BILL.

First race—Jane Porter is bred for the muddy going, and if the track stays soft I'm going to try to make her escape the maiden ranks here. Golden Measure and Golden Vein appear to have the edge on the others.

Second race—Sea Finn and Buck Langhorne will battle it out for the main award in this sprint or I miss my guess. The first named would prefer an off track but can step on the gas if the course dries out. Viva Pete has a fighting chance to split the top pair.

Third race—The Gen finally came through with a race that smacked of his old form and off that effort I'm placing him on the top of the heap here. Hosain will draw a lot of play but will have to improve to stop The Gen. Clocker Mike has been whispering about En Passant in the mud.

Fourth race—Aella is going to be hard to catch in this 5-furlong dash. She has her speed now and deserves a chance at the main end of the purse. HHappy Lope won recently and likes an off track. Justa Sun Beam for the other award.

Fifth race—Rustic Cuba, Light Breeze and Jim Moss is the order that I prefer in this race. The first-named is at home on any kind of a track and is sharp as a tack now.

Sixth race—Sambo G. to hotfoot it home in front of this crew. This is Clocker Mike's special. Black Dreams, King Bird and Pink Post all figure to take pare in the main running.

Seventh race—Wandrel, Fusco and Modern Times to take care of the money places in the finale. Mike's friend, Rudy is still trying to chase Angry Lass into a purse.

Edgewood Netmen Take League Lead

Beat Internationals, Cardinals Beat Claremont.

With the season's half-way mark reached in the Capital City Tennis League, the Edgewood tennis team holds a two-set lead over the Cardinals, the Internationals trailing in third place by another set margin. Edgewood's 4-to-2 win over the Internationals gave it the lead, while the Cardinals sped past the third place team by taking 5 out of 6 matches from Claremont. There will be no further play until Sunday, July 11.

Stocks Settle Into Drifting Slowly Higher

New York, June 18 (AP).—Sugar, tobacco and preferred stocks contributed the major gains today in a mixed and hesitant market. After advancing into new high ground for the recovery movement from the midday lows at the week-end, the market settled into a slow drift.

Unexpected delay in the adjournment of Congress made traders more cautious, although Wall street believed the legislators would stick close to their program in the final rush to wind up the session.

The market accepted trade news indifferently. With professional traders continuing to restrict their operations, trading thinned out as the market settled into a slow drift. Volume on the stock exchange totaled only 605,210 shares. In the two-hour session Saturday 576,295 shares changed hands.

Gains Outnumber Losses.

Gains of fractions to 2 points outnumbered minor losses at the finish and the Standard Statistics Co. average of 90 stocks crept up one-tenth of a point to 82.4.

Strength in raw sugar lately and improvement in the position of Cuban producers under legislation approved by Congress at this session, attracted fresh buying to sugar stocks. American Beet Sugar common and preferred, American Sugar Refining and Cuban American Sugar preferred sold at new 1934 peaks on advances of fractions to more than 3 points.

American Tobacco B and Liggett & Myers sold up 2 points on a few sales. Among preferred stocks gains of 2 to 5 points were scored in thin markets by Celotex, Certainteed, Baldwin Locomotive, American Locomotive, Goodyear Tire, Ludlum Steel, Remington Rand, Pere Marquette and General Printing Ink senior shares.

Gains Offset Losses.

Modest gains offset small losses among pivotal issues like American Can, Chrysler, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, General Electric, Consolidated Gas and United States Steel.

Much of the buying in stocks, as indicated by the strength in preferreds, also seemed to be for income, rather than speculative buying for early appreciation in market values.

Johns Manville, American Radiator and other building shares were firm on prospect of approval of the Administration's housing bill before Congress closed.

Rails Hold Advances.

Leading rails held last week's gains as the first roads to report loadings for the week disclosed moderate increases in traffic. Santa Fe loadings totaled 25,535 against 23,092 the previous week and 23,546 in the corresponding 1933 period. New wheat movement in the Southwest accounted chiefly for the improvement.

Other trade statistics made a mixed picture, although business observers commented that activity was being maintained in face of seasonal influences better than had been expected last month. The American Iron & Steel Institute estimated operations of the industry at 56:1 per cent of capacity against 56.9 per cent a week ago.

A few weak spots were conspicuous in the stock market. Freeport Texas declined sharply to a new low for the year and closed 2⅛ points lower. Selling was accompanied by reports that producing difficulties at its Louisiana sulphur deposits had increased costs. Westinghouse Air Brake suffered a further net loss of more than a point. The dividend on it was pared last week. New York Air Brake followed it down, closing 2 points lower.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Summary of PWA Accomplishments in Its First Year by Secretary Ickes Provides Almost Nothing by Which to Appraise It.

By Ralph West Robey.

Secretary Ickes, like so many other members of this Administration, has a strong dislike for statistics. For some reason he feels that the quoting of them is "dull and always a dangerous business." Perhaps this accounts for the ineffectiveness of his use of figures in his birthday report on the PWA. In any case such statistics as he gives are about as unenlightening as any mass of figures could be.

He says, for example, that "some 16,000 public works construction projects have been provided for and the majority are now under construction. Many have been completed." Such a statement is meaningless. Certainly it would have been less tedious to the reader to be told at least approximately how many are under construction or have been completed.

Lumps Gifts and Loans all Together for $1,000,000,000.

Again, he says in speaking of the amounts of allocations, that "a little under $1,000,000,000 went for loans, loans plus grants, or grants only, to various local governments, or for construction in the public interest." It seems to me that we might just as well be told more or less exactly how much, to reverse his order of listing, we have given away, how much we have loaned but see an outside chance of getting back, and how much looks pretty good as loans. Taxpayers would not find such figures tiresome.

Still again: "Well over $1,000,000,000 of the fund has been actually paid out to date, carrying with it all the regenerative purchasing power of such a sum. Approximately $500,000,000 will be paid out during the year 1935." Personally, I do not know what "well over $1,000,000,000" means. And I am further confused when I try to figure out from the daily statement of the Treasury just how much the PWA has spent, for its classification does not agree with that used by Mr. Ickes.

Other Places Detailed Figures Are Given.

It may be argued that asking for specific amounts on these items is being unreasonable—that it simply is not possible to deal in other generalities in such matters. Under some conditions I would be willing to grant this, but not here, for at another place Secretary Ickes says that the program has "provided, roughly, 1,418,000,000 hours of honest work at honest wages on direct construction sites." Further, that "approximately as many more—1,468,000,000—hours of direct employment in coming months are assured. . . ." Certainly if it is possible to make such calculations as these—if it is possible to know that the hours provided has been 1,418,000,000 and not a mere 1,400,000,000 or a 1,500,000,000—it should be possible to determine how much money we have spent.

The Secretary concludes his report with the statement that "Considering the magnitude and variety of the task and lack of experience to serve as a guide, we are proud of" the record. Perhaps he has ample right to be. From his report, it is impossible to say.

Bonds Climb One-Tenth To 86.8 Level

Market Starts Week Quietly as Trading Volume Falls to $9,064,000.

New York, June 18 (AP). — The bond market started the week quietly today, but prices maintained a steady to firm tone and sentiment appeared to be fairly cheerful.

The trading volume dwindled to $9,064,000, par value, against $11,861,000 last Friday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate issues held an advance of one-tenth of a point to 86.8.

Last-minute Congressional activities were watched closely, as were business and industrial trends. The market seemed to find little especially disturbing in either.

Other News Lacking.

Other news of an especially motivating character was lacking. Prime investment bonds continued to move around their best levels for the past year or longer and secondary groups were only moderately irregular.

Gains of 1 to 2 or more points were recorded by some loans of American Beet Sugar, Chile Copper, Cuba Northern Railway, Cuba Railway, Erie, International Great Northern, New Orleans Public Service, New York, Ontario & Western, Portland General Electric, Purity Bakeries and Wabash.

Among the more active gainers of fractions were issues of Western Union, Utilities Power & Light, Union Pacific, Union Oil, Postal Telegraph, Louisville & Nashville, International Telephone, International Hydro-Electric, Goodrich, Goodyear, Denver & Rio Grande, St. Paul, Santa Fe and American Water Works. Many loans were unchanged and losses generally were unimportant.

Federals Slightly Mixed.

U. S. Government securities were quiet and slightly mixed. Cash subscription books on the $131,400,000 of new Federal Land Bank 4s were closed shortly after the sale started today. The issue was offered at 100¾ and was later quoted on the "over-the-counter" market at a premium of half a point or so.

The Treasury's new 3 per cent bond issue appeared in the stock exchange list for the first time and with only a few transactions closed at 101.11.

In the foreign section both the German International 5½s and 7s lost a point each, but German Central Agricultural Bank 6s and 7s rallied 2⅝ and 3 points, respectively. Bonds of Poland, Buenos Aires and Norway firmed.

Curb's Prices Close Higher As Sales Gain

Less Active Stocks Stage Losses: Trading Up to 172,000 Shares.

New York, June 18 (AP).—Many of the active curb exchange issues closed with slight advances today after an irregularly lower tendency in the early trading. Gains throughout the list were by no means uniform, however, and a number of less active stocks failed to recover early losses.

Volume again showed a small increase over the preceding full session. Transfers approximated 172,000 shares, compared with 166,000 on Friday.

Among issues to show fractional advances were Philip Morris, American Gas & Electric, Atlas Corporation, Gulf Oil, Imperial Oil, International Petroleum, Niagara-Hudson and Pioneer Gold.

Technicolor established another new high for the year, with a rise of a point, before losing part of the gain. Commonwealth Edison moved up 3 points on small volume. American Superpower preferred issues, Dow Chemical, Pittsburgh Plate Glass, New Jersey Zinc and United Shoe Machinery moved higher.

Some of the other favorites like Greyhound Corporation, Humble Oil, National Bellas Hess, Standard Oil of Indiana and Consolidated Gas of Baltimore ended with small losses. Electric Bond & Share was unchanged at the close.

U. S. Losses in Foreign Trade May Prove Much Exaggerated

By Anna P. Youngman.

On the basis of estimates furnished by the Department of Commerce, supplemented by private studies, George N. Peek, special foreign trade adviser to the President, concludes that the "trend in our international trade has been cumulatively disadvantageous to us." During the 38-year period covered by the survey, it appears there has been a net increase of $22,645,000,000 in the debt owing to us from foreigners. That means, of course, that the people of the United States have sold goods and services abroad in amounts greatly in excess of the value of the goods and services bought. Since international accounts have to be balanced in some way, the difference between our sales and our purchases has been paid for "on credit." The credits that we have advanced for such purposes are represented by foreign securities and direct investments by Americans in foreign countries.

Mr. Peek concludes that our international accounts are in a bad way. "Our exports and our imports of goods and services must balance," he says, citing the President as authority for this statement. "During the periods covered by the figures," he adds, "these exports and imports have been grossly out of balance; nevertheless, we have pointed with pride to our 'favorable balance of trade.'"

Unwise in Lending.

Mr. Peek is justified in concluding that the United States has been most unwise in lending such large sums to finance the purchase of American goods and services by foreigners. Nevertheless, the increase in our foreign investment holdings over a 38-year period is no measure of the extent of our folly. There is no reason why a country with surplus wealth to invest should not use it to exploit the resources of other countries. On the contrary, that is the way that the newer parts of the world have always been developed. Foreign capital helped the United States to attain industrial maturity and American capital in turn has aided expansion in other countries. If international dealings were rigidly limited to a balancing of trade and service items, without permitting further expansion of purchases on credit, the backward regions of the globe would be left to shift for themselves, and economic progress would proceed at a snail's pace.

Certainly not all of the $22,645,000,000 of foreign investments, which Mr. Peek deplores, represents a loss to American investors. The war debts, it is true, might as well be written off, but a large proportion of foreign securities continue to yield interest to American holders, while factories, branch establishments, public utilities and other American-owned enterprises located abroad are valuable assets. Not only do these possessions provide a source of income for American citizens, but they benefit the countries that have used American capital to expand domestic industry and provide employment for native labor.

Measure of Indiscretions.

It is not what we have invested abroad but what we have lost; by unwise investment that measures the extent of our indiscretions in exporting capital to finance the purchase of our goods and services. It is still too soon to determine the magnitude of those losses or to appraise the chances that some debtors now in default will be able ultimately to meet their obligations.

However, it is worth noting that the Institute of International Finance estimates that interest has been paid in full on 62.4 per cent of the $8,193,000,000 of foreign dollar bonds estimated to be outstanding on March 1. Defaults affected an aggregate principal amount of $2,930,000,000, of which sum only about $1,900,000,000 was believed to be held by Americans.

Interest defaults do not, of course, imply that the owners of affected bonds have necessarily lost their principal, or any part of it. In some cases, defaults are only partial; in other instances, payments have been made into special funds, held in the debtor countries for account of the American investors. It will be a long time before the amount of our irrecoverable losses can be determined, because part of the present difficulty is due to the inability of solvent foreign debtors to obtain dollar exchange with which to make payments. In other words, the ubiquitous transfer problem is responsible for many defaults.

If World Trade Improves.

If world trade improves in the near future, and if capital transactions between countries expand as a result, debtor nations will be better able to meet their obligations drawn in terms of foreign currencies, and the American investor will then be able to "write up" the value of his foreign holdings. Americans directly interested in foreign enterprises will also profit from any improvement in business conditions within the countries where their interests lie. Consequently instead of bemoaning our mistakes of the past and exaggerating our losses, actual and prospective, we should be considering the immensity of our still existing stake in the prosperity of the rest of the world and cooperating to the utmost in plans for enabling our debtors to find larger outlets for their products. When normal trading conditions are restored, it will once more become profitable for Americans to place their funds in new foreign enterprises. Even now they are keeping large amounts of outstanding foreign securities. The unsolved question that arises concerns the volume of future accommodation and the uses to which funds are to be put. In the past we have loaned too much to some countries, and we have been too indifferent concerning the character of the enterprises that American capital has financed. If we avoid a repetition of such errors, it will be to our advantage to supply new capital to the rest of the world in the future as we have done in the recent past.

Wholesalers List Best Sales Since April

Vacation Requisites Lead in Orders; Retailers Are Cautious.

New York, June 18.—In the volume of orders as well as in the number of buyers visiting the leading markets, the wholesale trade made the best showing for any week since the latter part of April.

Buying is following closely weather conditions, the high temperatures of the past week favoring the demand for seasonal commodities and lightweight apparel.

Prominent in shipments were vacation requisites, swim suits, beach wear, traveling accessories, luggage, household furnishings, garden tools, and sporting goods.

Both seasonal and staple dry goods were bought in small lots, and summer wash fabrics were especially sought in clearance lots at substantial price concessions. Advance buying of women's shoes for late summer and early fall already has started, and more distant requirements are being covered in textiles, packaged foodstuffs, hardware, rubber goods, and paper.

Retailers still are dominated by an attitude of caution in their buying, and the generous orders of a year ago are noticeably lacking in present operations. While a further increase in fall orders is expected during the next two weeks, in many divisions the buying season will not be inaugurated until after the Fourth of July holiday.

Orders from industrial centers are holding up surprisingly well, and the falling-off of business in the drought sections has not reached any sizable proportions, as yet. Fall business in these districts, however, is anticipated to show some sharp declines, as the orders now being received are placed on the contingency of crop outcome, which at present is not bright.

Traveling men covering the South and Southwest, on the other hand, are booking larger orders than a year ago, as in addition to the higher prices for cotton, income there will be increased by the revenue from a variety of farm crops, planted as the result of the cotton-curtailment program.

Nearly all of the activity in the women's wear division has been centered around the acquisition of additional summer merchandise.

Corn Jumps 1 to 1⅝ Cents; Wheat Gains

Chinch Bug Crop Damages Aid Price Advances; Provisions Up.

Chicago, June 18 (AP).—Notable strength which developed in the corn market today became the ruling factor as to all grains at the last.

Authoritative reports indicating extreme severity of chinch bug damage to the corn crop led to a decided jump in corn values, and so too did predictions that corn injury would show up in cumulative shape very rapidly the next ten days.

Adding to the upward impetus of the corn market was 2,599,000 bushels decrease of the corn visible supply, reducing the available stock to below that of the corresponding time a year previous, something not paralleled hertofore since 1932.

Corn Closes Near Top.

Corn closed skittish at virtually the day's top, 1 cent to 1⅝ above Saturday's finish; wheat, ⅜ to ¾ up; oats, unchanged to ¼ advance, and provisions showing a rise of 12 to 20 cents.

Owing to good rains in various parts of the grain belt, corn as well as other cereals averaged lower during the earlier dealings. Thinness of speculative demand for wheat did much temporarily to drag prices down and to act as a restraint on rallies.

A further weight on all markets was continued enlargement of wheat receipts in the Southwest, totaling 1,150 cars, including more than 700 cars today at Hutchison and Wichita, Kans., and Enid, Okla. There were messages, too, indicating that the Kansas wheat harvest appeared likely to turn out better than expected.

Trade Sentiment Switches.

Sudden switching of trade sentiment became manifest, however, as the day approached an end, with attention focusing more and more on chinch bug advices.

Detailed reports from north central Illinois attracted particular notice, especially statements that the parasites were in numbers so unusual on corn leaves as to be visible 50 feet away. It was added that the corn crop was something like two weeks earlier than normal, and thus in a tender and susceptible stage, with the plants already beginning to collapse.

Between Peoria and Bloomington, rains were reported ineffective in stopping the chinch bugs. Deep trenches between corn rows were also asserted to be without avail. Oats trade lacked volume.

Baltimore Grain Prices.

Baltimore, June 18.—WHEAT—Receipts, 19,987 bushels by car; shipments from elevators, 45,985 bushels; stock in elevators, 341,982 bushels; opening prices were: No. 2 red winter, garlicky, spot, domestic, 93½¢; June delivery, domestic, 93½. Receipts of wheat from nearby sections running light. There is a demand for No. 2 red winter, garlicky; off grades, however, are hard to move at a wider discount.

CORN—Receipts, 6,800 bushels by car; shipments from elevation, 421 bushels; stock in elevators, 4,162 bushels. Receipts of corn from the nearby sections only occasional. For yellow and high-colored mixed there is a fair domestic demand.

OOB CORN—Quoted at 3.70 per barrel for craloads prime nearby yellow on spot; offerings ample for present needs; demand fair. No. 2 yellow corn arriving by car quoted at 75@78 per bushel with transit billing.

OATS—Receipts, 3,992 bushels by car; shipments from elevators, 772 bushels; stock in elevators, 21,429 bushels; supplies of oats here are slowly decreasing; demand is fair in a jobbing way; choice, extra heavy oats command a good premium over the average run and lighter weights; No. 2 white oats, 56@62 per bushel as to weight and location.

Note—On all sales of oats to the local trade, exceptin those on track, there is an additional charge of 1½c per bushel for storage and elevation which is paid by the buyer.

RYE—Receipts, 4,183 bushels by car; shipments from elevators, 23,557 bushels; stock in elevators, 199,460 bushels.

HAY—General hay market is quiet; supply ample; on good timothy and clover mixed prices range from 12.00 to 14.00 per ton; the poorer grades of hay are hard to sell at any price; market irregular on everything below 3 timothy.

STRAW—Market is quiet and steady; wheat straw, No. 1, per ton, 9.50@10.00; oat straw, 9.50@10.50.

BARLEY—Stock in elevators, 843 bushels.

FILE Your Papers the Modern Way

FILE with Acco Binder Folders and insure filing safety. Make every file a neat, compact, book-like record—a history of all of your business transactions. Almost foolproof against misfiling and loss, Acco Folders are even more necessary than the filing cabinet itself.

Every Folder contains the Acco Fastener—a broad-based, two-pronged lock compressor device that binds papers neatly, tightly and compactly. When ready for transfer, a completely indexed Fastener-bound file can be slipped from the slideway of the Folder and stored away intact—insert a new Acco Fastener in slideway and Folder is again ready for use. It will last as long as the filing cabinet.

Don't risk serious loss from loose, unbound files. File the Acco Way—with Folder and Fastener—and be safe. Ask us to show you how

Cotton Prices Turn Irregular In Quiet Sales

July Closes at 11.93 as Market Is 2 Points Up to 1 Lower.

New York, June 18 (AP).—Cotton prices moved within a range of 8 or 10 points today and closed virtually unchanged. October contracts after selling up to 12.25 at the start, eased off to 12.15 and after an early afternoon rally to 12.21, closed at 12.19. The general market ended steady net 2 points higher to 1 point lower.

Initial prices were 3 to 6 points higher on the showing of Liverpool and trade buying.

The failure of over-Sunday reports to indicate more serious damage to the crop by the Gulf storm which worked up the Mississippi Valley, led to some selling and the market eased off from 12.35 to 12.27 for December right after the call under liquidation.

Offerings were absorbed on reactions of 8 or 10 points and trading later became comparatively quiet. The reports of rains with heavy precipitation at some points in the Mississippi Valley and the Eastern belt brought in some buying, but this was offset by selling on reports of beneficial showers in the Western belt.

After working up to about Saturday's closing quotations prices eased under further liquidation. Closing prices were 3 to 4 points up from the lowest.

Exports today 19,938, making 7,172,067 so far this season. Port receipts 8,535. U. S. port stocks, 2,659,405.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil closed today 3@5 points higher on moderate local buying, which seemed to be influenced by the sharp advance in hogs, the upturn in lard and firmness of grain. Sales were 21 contracts. Bleachable spot, nominal; July closed 5.45; September, 5.66; October, 5.75; December, 5.95; January, 5.98.

Goods Markets.

New York, June 18 (A.P.).—Cotton goods markets were moderately active. Burlaps were quiet and steady. Silk goods for fall were actively sampled by the dress trade. Demand for wool goods showed a broadening tendency. Sales of rayon weaving yarn continued to increase.

Steel Operation Holds at 62; Backlogs Cut

Shipments Rushed to Meet Second Quarter Date for Deliveries.

Cleveland, June 18.—With a rush in shipments to complete second-quarter contracts by the close of June in accordance with code requirements, steelworks operations last week held at a strong 62 per cent, states the magazine, Steel.

Steelmakers are rapidly draining their backlogs of unfilled orders, while consumers' inventories, uncertainties regarding the trend of prices in the third quarter, and labor unrest in some industries are militating against commitments for that period.

In the meantime, producers have practically reached the point where they can not accept further orders for delivery this month. The situation in the market, therefore, has resolved itself entirely into a production problem for the remainder of June.

Contracts and Strikes.

If steelworkers strike it is possible that the mills will shut down, and any serious impediment to completing second-quarter contracts due to labor disturbance might be adjusted by an extension of the time limit for making deliveries. If a strike fails to develop, producers are in good position to maintain operations at a comparatively high level at least until July 1.

A considerable volume of new buying must be done for next month; in many instances during the week sellers were compelled to refuse spot orders at the higher level of prices from consumers who had underestimated requirements. This was in deference to contract obligations.

Automobile production again last week made a moderate gain, recent price reductions apparently tending to revive sales. Pressure for lower steel prices for third quarter is expected to be especially insistent from automobile manufacturers, who are already driving for a 10 per cent cut in their contract prices with partsmakers, these in turn sounding out steelmakers.

Auto Plants Stocked.

As automobile manufacturers themselves are heavily stocked with bars, sheets and strip, it is on construction work and railroad requirements that the steel industry relies principally for support in July. Large structural steel tonnages still are pending for Government dam construction in Western States, 50,000 tons of steel piling being required for two projects on which bids are being taken.

Structural awards last week increased slightly to 16,000 tons, including 2,500 tons for a strip mill building for the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co., and 3,500 tons for the International Nickel Co. of Canada's mill project at Sudbury, Ont.

At Pittsburgh, inquiries have developed for 20 barges, requiring 4,000 tons of plates and shapes. Plate production in the East is at the highest point of the year, the Pennsylvania Railroad releasing 4,000 tons of plates. Rail mill operations at Chicago have tapered off from 40 per cent, but are expected to continue above 30 per cent to the close of August. Orders for accessories and repair material still are fairly heavy. The Seaboard Air Line has awarded 1,000 double-sheathed box cars. Illinois Central is to build a streamlined train and buy 11 Diesel locomotives, the PWA having authorized a loan. Boston & Maine has placed a three-car streamlined stainless steel train.

Although there is comparatively little trading in iron and steel scrap, prices after ten consecutive weeks decline are firmer, and Steel's scrap composite has advanced 4 cents, to $10.29. A Japanese freighter has loaded 8,000 tons of scrap at Balboa, Canal Zone, purchased from the United States Government through the Panama Canal commission for shipment to Japan. Lake furnace interests are shipping nearly twice as much pig iron this month as in May. Steel foundries on railroad parts are operating at their highest rate of the year.

Steelworks operations in the Pittsburgh district last week rose 2 points, to 56 per cent, this increase being attributed mainly to the desire of companies to have full forces on hand for employe representation elections. The Wheeling district operating rate also advanced 2 points, to 81 per cent; Detroit was off 1p points, to 82; and Cleveland, 1, to 77. Chicago held at 70; Youngstown, 66; eastern Pennsylvania, 46½; New England, 70; Buffalo, 58; Birmingham, 55.

175 Graduates From District Night Schools

Dean Doyle, of G. W. U., Says Adults Learn as Readily as Youths.

An ancient myth has been destroyed by scientific research, which has demonstrated that adults learn as readily as teen-age youths, Prof. Henry Grattan Doyle, dean of junior colleges at George Washington University, told 175 graduating seniors of the District's night schools at commencement exercises in McKinley High School Auditorium last night.

"It is an inspiring thing to see people who were denied certain educational advantages in their youth pursuing these studies in the night schools and in the adult schools," Prof. Doyle asserted.

Henry I. Quinn, of the Board of Education, presided at the exercises. Invocation was delivered by the Rev. Howard E. Snyder, pastor of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of the Atonement. Jesse O. Reeder, president of the elementary class, delivered the address of welcome, and Adaila Emith North, president of the high school class, gave the farewell address.

Diplomas were presented by Edward J. Lockwood, director of the evening and summer schools. Music was furnished by the McKinley High School Orchestra and the McKinley Night School Glee Club.

Five picnics are scheduled for Glen Echo Park Wednesday and three Thursday. The picnics Wednesday include Clarendon Baptist Sunday School, Epiphany Episcopal Sunday School, Forestville, Md.; altar boys of St. Mary's Church, St. George's Episcopal Sunday School, Clarendon, Va., and a graduating class of a Cleveland high school. Thursday, Anacostia Methodist Sunday School, St. Alban's Episcopal Sunday School and Ballston Presbyterian Sunday School.

School Will Celebrate Term End With Outing

Celebrating the close of the school term, children of the Immaculate Conception School will gather at Seaside Park, Chesapeake Beach, tomorrow for a day's outing.

The excursion, held annually for the altar boys of the church, this year has been broadened to include all the students as well as their parents.

A program of recreation, including athletic contests, games and swimming has been arranged. The Rev. S. A. Tzyz will be in charge of the party.

Former Convict Held As Police Probe Killing

Sallisaw, Okla., June 18 (AP).—Otto Davis, 30-year-old former Oklahoma convict, was in custody here tonight as eastern Oklahoma officers sped efforts to solve the mysterious killing of C. N. Nunn, Democratic candidate for presidency of the State Board of Agriculture who was slain by two gunmen June 14.

Sheriff Bill Byrd said he was investigating rumors the slaying was in reprisal for Nunn's activities recently in obtaining conviction of a member of the Davis family.

New System Makes Sun Dial Reading Accurate

State College, Pa. (U.P.).—A simple system for making the readings of an ordinary sun dial as accurate as those of a synchronized clock has been perfected by Prof. Leland S. Rhodes, Department of Engineering, Pennsylvania State College.

To eliminate the sun dial error, which may be as much as 50 minutes, Prof. Rhodes inscribed several half circles on the dial instead of the customary one, spacing them for the different seasons of the year. Across the ends of the half circles he marked the months and dates to which several semicircles apply in computing the shadow reading in terms of standard time on a given day.

Ranchers Expend $12,000,000.

Casper, Wyo. (U.P.).—Approximately $12,000,000 a year are expended on dude ranches in Wyoming and Montana, according to Ed C. Comers, secretary of the Dude Ranchers Association of the two States.

"The Most Outstanding Girl"

Mary and Martha Davidson, of Petersburg, Ind., have been chosen as "the most outstanding girl" in the senior class of the Indiana State Teachers College at Terre Haute. The girls were nominated, along with others, on the basis of character, scholarship, service, leadership and general worth to the school. Unable to vote for them separately, the student body voted for the twins as a unit.

3 Racketeers, Bullet-Riddled, Found in Auto

Police Believe Rival Gang Caught and Took Them "for a Ride."

New Brunswick, N. J., June 18 (AP).—Their hands and feet bound with rope and their mouths sealed with adhesive tape, the bodies of three men, listed in police records here as petty racketeers, were found shot to death today in an automobile at Dunhams Corners, East Brunswick Township.

They were identified as Henry Teel, 24; Peter Georgianna, 25, and Isadore Gutman, 29, all of New Brunswick.

State police at Milltown Barracks believe the three men, who were at liberty on bail following their arrests for a holdup, had been trapped by members of another gang, disarmed, placed in Gutman's sedan and taken to Dunhams Corners for "execution."

Georgianna and Teel were seated in the rear seat, from which the cushion had been removed. Gutman lay across their feet.

Four shells from revolvers of three different calibers were found on the floor. Teel had been shot twice under the chin. Another bullet had pierced his left hand and entered his ear. Two bullets had hit Georgianna under the chin, and Gutman was shot through the back eight times. He had managed to free his feet and had apparently tried to plunge through the door on the right-hand side of the car just before his executioners opened fire.

Coroner Matthew A. Maliszewski, of South River, and Dr. William C. Wilsntz, of Perth Amboy, Middlesex County physician, said the men had been dead from 6 to 12 hours. Georgianna was single, the others married.

Holland Rallies Diamond Trade

Industry and Government Join Hands to Save Fallen Market.

Amsterdam, (U.P.).—A vast cooperative effort to stabilize the diamond industry is under way here with the Dutch government, the municipality, capital, the diamond industry and labor acting as a single unit.

The great diamond cutting industry here, which has been famous for centuries, recently has suffered severely from competition. It is hoped the new organization will stabilize prices at a profitable level to all, stimulate trade and strengthen public confidence in diamonds as an enduring investment.

An initial capitalization of 6,000,000 guilders has been supplied by the Amsterdam Bank. The Dutch Federal Government and the municipality of Amsterdam make it possible to employ about 2,000 diamond cutters. The workmen's union has invested its funds in the enterprise and its members will share in the profits. The combination of many interests for the rehabilitation of the diamond industry is unique in the history of the diamond.

The plan already has served to supply diamonds at lower cost to the manufacturer, and produce cut stones at the prevailing market price, without loss either to the manufacturer or labor. The rough stones are purchased by big firms for the combination. The diamonds then are allocated to the different manufacturers according to their needs. The finished goods are sold by the same firms to individual exporters in Amsterdam and to representatives of the combination in various parts of the world, including the United States.

Mexican Scholarship Rules Are Announced

Austin, Tex., (U.P.).—Rules for the E. D. Farmer Scholarship in the National University of Mexico have been announced by the University of Texas faculty committee, preparatory to receiving applications. These must be in before October 1.

The Farmer Scholarship is to the Southwest what the Cecil Rhodes Scholarship is to the country at large. It was established by the late E. D. Farmer, Fort Worth cattleman, to send representative Texans to Mexico for training in the university there, which sends a corresponding number of Mexican youths to the University of Texas. Candidates are selected by a faculty committee.

Boys Make Diving Suit.

Seattle (U.P.).—Two high school youths, Howard E. Iversen and Lloyd Johnson, both 18, made a diving suit out of a flivver's gasoline tank, two bicycle pumps, garden hose and other odds and ends plus 70 cents. The boys made more than 30 trips to the bottom of Lake Union recovering tools and other equipment lost from boats.

JOIN AN EXPEDITION

Extensive plans are now being arranged for conducting a high-grade expedition into Yucatan, Central America, Java and India, in a well-considered effort to solve the mystery of the lost Mayan civilization and write its history—the history of the Americas before Columbus came. Different from other expeditions, investments in the enterprise will be secured and repaid with profits. You can join this expedition by becoming a part of it, by taking an interest in its associated publishing syndicate, in which there will be a few openings for activity. The publishing syndicate is being formed as the base for a large general publishing company with headquarters in Washington. It is the most important factor of the expedition. Only financially responsible replies are sought. Take an interest in this sound and unusual enterprise and help to win fame and give America its history before A. D. 1492. For full particulars, apply at THE CAPITAL PUBLISHING SYNDICATE, 948 Shoreham Building, Washington, D. C.

IF YOU have $100 or more to invest write Box 88, Washington Post.

Home Trade.

I meet the village baker when I am on my way; he makes about an acre of doughnuts every day. His bread is good and luscious, as fine as any made; though foreign dealers rush us, they can not get our trade. The baker's pies of custard are pleasant things to bite; his crumpets, smeared with mustard, are simply out of sight. The baker makes a showing in every useful plan; he helps to keep things going, he is a loyal man. The baker pays his taxes on residence and store, and as he richer waxes he'll keep on paying more. He chips in for the preachers who keep our morals straight; he helps to pay the teachers who stand at learning's gate. When with some worthy motive good people pass the hat, his offering is votive and leaves his wallet flat. Such people as the baker have builded up our town, and he would be a faker who'd turn the baker down. And so mail order bakers can do small business here, although they may be makers of pies the folks hold dear. The home town baker's crumpets are good enough for us; we boost him as with trumpets, and raise a seemly fuss. For men must stand together to make a village grow, in every sort of weather, in all the winds that blow.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Ready for Hartford By Harry J. Tuthill

OAKDALE! IMAGINE THAT GIMLET-EYED SHEIK IN TOWN AGAIN. AND HOW UTTERLY DUMB I WAS NOT TO RECOGNIZE HIS OILY VOICE WHEN I DASHED DOWN THOSE STAIRS TO CALL PEGGY TO THE PHONE.
AND HOW SHE SIMPERED WHEN SHE SAID, OH HELLO HARTFORD, OSH!
HA! AND HOW BRIGHT I WAS LAST WEEK TO JUST LAUGH WHEN I DREAMED TWICE ABOUT SPILLING SALT.
AND THE WEEK BEFORE THAT I BROKE A MIRROR. I'LL BET I HAD OTHER WARNINGS, TOO, IF I COULD REMEMBER THEM.
OAKDALE! EVERY TIME I EVEN HEAR THAT FAKE'S NAME I FEEL EXACTLY THE WAY I DO WHEN I WAKE UP LATE AT NIGHT AND THINK I HEAR SOMEONE CRAWLING AROUND IN THE OTHER ROOMS.
IMAGINE ALL THE TIME I'VE WASTED THINKING THAT SOMETHING MIGHT HAPPEN TO THAT SNAKE-IN-THE-GRASS.
WELL THAT TROUBLE-MAKER HAD BETTER NOT COME NEAR THIS HOUSE. I'D THINK NO MORE OF THROWING HOT WATER ON THAT BEADY-EYED MAN THAN I WOULD OF SWATTING A FLY. LESS. MUCH LESS.
